RECENT EVENTS

Present Situation Leading up To Agreement For Defence

Paris, Dec. 1.—(CP)—Conclusion of an Anglo-French defensive accord, by which Great Britain and France agree to assist each other in case of an unprovoked attack, was reported by reliable sources today.

Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, at that time declared France could count on British aid if she were attacked without provocation by another European nation. Corbin's action was a parallel pledge to Belgium.

GREAT INTEREST IN NOMINATIONS WED. AT MADOC

Premier And Earl Rowe Will Speak From Same Platform

AT ARMOURIES

The eyes of Ontario will be focused on this riding of East Hastings for the next ten days as the Provincial political parties under the direct leadership of the party chieftains concentrate their forces for the final drive in the by-election which will reach its climax on December 9th, when the voters go to the polls to choose a candidate to fill the vacancy left by the late James F. Hill.

With both sides throwing all their resources into the fight, the election, now nearing its close, has been one of the hottest contested affairs in the history of the province. Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Hon. Earl Rowe will personally conduct the fight from now until election day, and will address meetings in every section of the riding nearly every day. Assisted by party speakers both leaders will probably bring all their forces to bear in the final drive for the wire.

The highlights of the week's campaign will be reached tomorrow at Madoc when both leaders will appear on the same platform at the official nomination proceedings to be held under cover.

LOCAL INDUSTRIES ARE EXPANDING

Industrial Condition Here Is Reported Healthy

Encouraging symptoms of renewed health and vigor in the industrial world are not lacking, reports of which are published in newspapers from all parts of Canada. Belleville's industries are all healthy and flourishing with the best of prospects. An indication of a healthy industrial condition of any city may be noted in the fact that one industry has come on twenty-four hour schedule, the Deacon Shirt factory, which has augmented its staff and is now operating twenty-four hours daily. This was made necessary by the fact that orders were piling in and it was impossible to fill them under ordinary conditions. Christmas and spring orders are promising known in the trade for years to be a superlative one, and every four hour schedule will be necessary at least well on into the new year.

St. Bernard Dog Takes Possession of Motorcar

Detroit, Dec. 1—(CP)—A massive St. Bernard dog practically took the run of the Detroit city pound today after Bobby Rowe, 9, got a stray. There wasn't much room for any other business.

The good-natured giant was picked up yesterday after he took a liking to John Bergholz and jumped into his automobile.

Bergholz couldn't get rid of the affectionate efforts of Rentschler, a couple of policemen and the canine's owner to pry him out.

Rentschler told police when his name back from a meat market the dog was in the car. Police, too, were baffled in extricating efforts and called the catchers. Together they pushed, pulled, prodded and shoved until finally, just as they considered shooting, the animal was forced from the car into the wagon.

Russia Points To Armed Youth

Moscow, Dec. 1 (AP)—Russia pointed today to millions of well-trained Soviet youth as the power behind their first line of defence.

M. Hyitsky, secretary of the Moscow Communist (Young Communists) committee told the congress of Soviets, "our youth of Hitler's Germany," who, he said, "find love for arms and other anti-Semitism easier than jumping with parachutes."

Hyitsky detailed the number of young men and women trained by Osoviachim (voluntary society for preparedness for air and chemical defence) as follows:

1,700,000 Voroshiloff sharpshooters.

80,000 snipers and sniper instructors.

2,400,000 experienced chemical and aerial defenders.

54,000 horsemen.

In 1935, Hyitsky said, Osoviachim trained 10,000 parachute jumpers, 9,000 pilots and 13,000 glider pilots.

OBSTRUCTIONIST TACTICS BLAMED

Lloyd George Blames American Industry And Individual

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—David Lloyd George asserts in his new set of articles on the United States that delays in equipping the American Expeditionary Force in France during 1918 are attributable to the obstructionist tactics by American industry and individuals.

The volume of Britain's war memoirs will be published today. It reiterates criticism of General John J. Pershing, who commanded the A.E.F., and adds incomplimentary appraisals of the late Bernard Baruch and Woodrow Wilson.

Lloyd George writes that the English and French offered, out of their experience, advice to United States industrialists in the manufacture of war materials.

But the American Industrialists were inclined to regard our lectures as an invitation to them, who were masters of all the manufacturing arts, to take a post-graduate course at a British school," he writes.

"Hence they would have none of our scrapping of old types of machines. They assumed on traditional principles the inferiority of these and they decided to have patterns of their own, which would demonstrate their superiority. Every craftsmen what could be done by a nation which has developed industrial supremacy in machinery . . . . . Hence the delay that occurred in equipping the great army of men that America sent to Europe were largely responsible for the muddle and misery."

"All this would have been remedied," he asserts, "if there had been any real drive in the head of affairs. . . . President Wilson was not cut out for a Great War Minister. He had no idea how to use it. He never should be? It was not his training. . . . His self-confidence, on the contrary had no delight in it. He shuddered at the thought of it . . ."

PETROLIA PAINTER FACES CHARGE

Secures Job to Mask House-Robbing Talent, Claimed

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 1.—(CP)—Picked up by police yesterday, Alfred Ernest Lavigne, Petrolia, was identified today by Mrs. Sadie Mechanic and her son Louis as the man they engaged last April to paint their house here. The painter, they told police, was known as Gilroy. Instead, Mrs. Mechanic found, her home was stripped and some jewelry was missing from her home.

Lavigne was charged with theft of the money and trinkets and remanded a week.

At the time the theft was reported, April 24, Jack Mechanic reported a painter by the name identified as Gilroy, Gilroy, he said, indicated his ability as a painter and Mechanic took him to his home where the mother gave out the house painting contract.

Gilroy, they claim, was left plying his trade while they bid when Mrs. Mechanic remembered the money in the house had been under the mattress in a bedroom the painter was using. So, also were a few rings and other trinkets.

NOTICES SENT OUT

Poland Only Creditor Expected to Make Payment

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Administration sources said today that France had taken the initiative in approaching the United States on the war debt question and that conversations were under way in Paris between French officials and United States government representatives.

They emphasized no definite plan for settling the debt problem had been discussed in Paris. They said the United States had made no offer of any kind relative to revising debt agreements.

In the past, President Roosevelt has said there is no individual nation has full and free opportunity individually to discuss its debt problem with the United States.

Rowe Condemns Hepburn On School Legislation

Says Government Should Have Given Voter Opportunity to Decide Question

STIRS UP TROUBLE

Tweed, Dec. 1.—The Conservative party held its major meeting of the campaign in the Hastings by-election in the village of Tweed on Monday evening in the Agricultural Hall, when they aroused an audience of seven hundred people in Tweed auditorium and Hon. Earl Rowe, Conservative leader, Mayor Ben Rowe, were the principal speakers. Mayor Henry Emmons, Moira; Major Merritt Price; W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P., Conservative candidate; Mrs. Rowe, chairman and Edgar Jones, President of Tweed Liberal-Conservative Association.

Dr. Harold Welsh, in his appeal for the electors said, "I appear before you for a second time asking for the privilege of being one of such a large number of ladies, boys and girls present." Dr. Welsh had just returned from Bangor in the northern part of the riding where he was presented a majority of a thousand. "Go to the south of the riding and get another thousand," said they. The candidate condemned the Hepburn administration for what he called its flagrant disregard of civil servants, and others throughout the riding who had given years of faithful service. The Liberal administration, he declared, omitted their policy which had got out of control under Ostrie, was evidenced by the number of beer parlors and ladies beverage rooms set up throughout the province—a most disgusting condition, he complained. In its anxiety to balance the budget the Hepburn administration had placed the "almighty dollar" ahead of the morals and happiness of the people. The works program was a failure in Tweed, and (Continued on page nine)

Thief is Unwitting Aid In Foiling Plan to Slay Premier Hirota of Japan

Money to be Used in Plot Stolen From Plotter

MILK CONTAMINATED

The pickpocket was one link in a chain of extraordinary circumstances which delivered Ko Watanabe, 36, to the police.

Watanabe, arrested with dynamite, a razor-edged spearhead and a lighter bomb, admitted he had engaged in the cabinet ministers life possession, told police he had sought a chance for three days to kill the premier.

Robbed of Plot Money.

He said he had about 150 yen ($43) when he arrived in Tokyo from Fukushima prefecture, and had planned to spend part of it to bribe Hirota's chauffeur in order to get near enough to the premier to attack him.

But when he stopped to buy a bottle of milk, he told police, his pockets were picked clean. Penniless, he had to abandon his scheme.

The milk, apparently, was contaminated. Watanabe soon became violently ill. A passing policeman offered to massage his stomach.

Policeman Discovers Explosives.

While performing this service, the patrolman discovered the dynamite and revolution concealed in Watanabe clothing. He immediately took Watanabe to the police station where officials set to work on him.

The accomplice, Katsuhei Matsumoto, was declared to have plotted with Watanabe to kill the premier in the hope of attracting public attention to agrarian distress.

Four pellets found on Watanabe asked cabinet members to care for the situation in the event of assassination of the premier.

The accomplice also told Watanabe told them, was to be used to commit hara-kiri after he had killed the premier, whom he charged with ignoring the hardships of farmers.

Officials expressed belief Watanabe was suffering from mental illness.

Moistureless Liquid Found

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—A liquid without moisture, made entirely of dry sand and compressed air, was described to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers today by Thomas Fraser, Aurora, Ill., mining engineer.

The sand is placed in a box and the air is bubbled up from the bottom. This dry liquid can be varied from the density of water to that of molasses by changing the air pressure.

It is used for "floating" coal, a commercial process for separating coal from the bits of slate, pyrite and sandstone in which it was mined along with the fuel. Coal is lighter than these impurities.

The old process was to float the coal on a liquid of sufficient density to hold the coal at the surface while the impurities sank.

The artificial sand liquid, Fraser said, has the advantage that its density can be varied to suit the weight of coal by turning an air cock. The mixture, he said, is in effect a dry quicksand.

MARY CHRISTMAS WILL HELP SANTA

Mrs. Christmas Long Ago Learned Why Santa Had No 'Phone

Racine, Wis., Dec. 1 (AP)—Mary Christmas, who died today with Santa Claus the task of providing a merry Christmas, just as they have done for 17 years.

Ever since 1919 when Mary and Sam Christmas were married, Mrs. Christmas has played the role of Mary Santa Claus to hundreds of youngsters in various parts of the country.

Long ago Mrs. Christmas learned why Santa Claus didn't have a telephone. She received a letter asking calls from youngsters whose parents had told them to call Santa Claus' wife instead of writing directly to Santa. But she soon received the telephone because she was "almost driven crazy answering calls."

The postman sometimes wishes Mrs. Christmas would move into his route. At this time of the year his pack grows heavy with letters from the scattered people of the Orient, Alaska and Europe. Already mail from China and Hawaii has arrived.

"Most of the writers ask me to write my name on the letter and then forward it to Santa Claus. Sam, for postmarking before returning it to them," she said. "Others just ask for my autograph."

MRS. BEAUMONT JARVIS (Toronto)

The passing of Mrs. Beaumont Jarvis, formerly Miss Josephine Parker of Belleville, which occurred at Toronto on Monday, Nov. 30th, has brought deep feelings of regret to many of her old friends in Belleville.

For many years the late Mrs. Jarvis was prominent in the social and church life of this city. She was a faithful member of St. Thomas' Church and at the time was active in the work of the parish. Deceased was the daughter of Joseph Parker and Mrs. Parker who were prominent residents of Belleville for many years. The late Sir Gilbert Parker was her brother.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Beaumont Jarvis, Toronto; two brothers, Mr. Harry P. Parker of Los Angeles, California, and Mr. Arthur G. Parker of Oakland, California.

As announced elsewhere in this paper the funeral service will be conducted in St. Thomas' Church here Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will take place in the Parker family plot in Belleville cemetery.

J. O. HERITY IS SPEAKER AT CLUB

"Our Changing Civilization" Subject of His Remarks

"Will man become the master of the mechanical and scientific civilization he has created or will he become its victim?" declared Mr. J. O. Herity, as the beginning of an address he delivered at the weekly dinner of the Kiwanis Club at the Y.M.C.A. last night. Mr. Herity's address was "Our Changing Civilization."

During the course of his address the speaker established that civilization was not a product but a process. Civilization advanced, he said in a steady consistent course towards the realization of an ideal, and through successful forward movements and recessions like great waves upon a windbound shore. Hence we had the Assyan, Sumerian, Babylonian, Hebrew, Egyptian, Grecian and Roman civilizations rising and falling successively until we were in the state of the Dark Ages. But eventually and finally dawned upon the civilization of the Twentieth Century with its marvels of scientific achievements and mechanical production.

Gave New Theory

The French Revolution with its watchwords of "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity" gave to the world a new theory of popular government and was the first attempt to bring about the development of democratic rule as established in the various Anglo-Saxon countries of the world, as well as in France.

At the beginning of the present century", continued the speaker, "democracy and personal liberty for people appeared unassailable. Today democracy is everywhere on the defensive. The maelstrom has brought about its problems of overproduction, and increasing unemployment and its staggering burdens of relief. Democracy has failed to meet the changing and heavy dictators have arisen and usurped authority.

Forms of Government

Therefore we have Communism, Nasiism, Fascism and various forms of autocratic governments, all manifesting similar characteristics through the suppression of popular government, the regimentation of the peoples and the strangulation of public opinion through the press and newspaper press. The finer things of life have gone, religion has been stifled and religion has been challenged or suppressed, but the materialistic has been greatly developed in the preparation for war."

In closing the speaker sounded a note of warning to his audience to give earnest consideration to the problems which have been forced upon us and which threaten in very existence of our social, our economic, our political and our religious institutions and democracy as we have come to know it. Speaking on Brotherhood as the "Brotherhood", concluded Mr. Herity's thought provoking message.

The speaker was introduced by Past International President Newton Thompson and the appreciation of the audience was elegantly expressed by Mr. Hazen Wallwin, of the O.S.D. staff.

Phil Maddigan was soloist for the evening, rendered two charming numbers, Dawson. Boyd acted as song-leader and Godfrey Scott as sergeant-at-arms.

SCOTS PAY HONOR TO SAINT ANDREW

The lilting tunes of the bagpipes; Scottish song and story; the witty comedy of Scottish humour given in it can only be given by a true Scottish comedian and a brilliant descriptive address by Mr. W. J. Walker of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church provided a real Highland atmosphere last night at the Oddfellows' Hall, as Camp Rob Roy No. 43 Sons of Scotland celebrated St. Andrew's night in true Scottish fashion.

Following the address by Mr. Walker in which he gave a highly interesting account of the life of Scotland's patron saint, a concert consisting of Scottish songs and other entertaining numbers held the attention of the crowded hall. Selections on the bagpipes by Jack Brunning was followed by vocal solos by Douglas Browning, Clare Patterson, Mrs. Ralph Symington and James Bankier. Recitations by George Cornish were well received, while a Scottish comedian from Brockville, Sandy Ross, was the hit of the night with his humorous song and story. Three little girls, attractively garbed in red and white costumes, Betty brought down the house with their Highland dance.

Following a delectable lunch served by the ladies' auxiliary of the club, dancing to the rhythms of Bob Clare's orchestra was enjoyed during the late hour. Those in charge of the various committees were: Refreshments, Mrs. Ashore; for the evening, Joseph Ingram, Chairman; Entertainment, Evening, Comrie and Mrs. Robt. Muirhead, Chairman Refreshment Committee, Mrs. Oddleifson. Piano Solos were accompaniment for the various musical numbers.

SAY BILL FOUND WITHIN MATTRESS

The allegedly sly picking up of a currency bill, scampering feet, quick observations by passersby and speedy investigation by police of this policy not only resulted in the return of a lost dollar bill in Belleville, last night, but also in the apprehension of a local youth who police say picked up the lost dollar bill and refused to return it to the owner.

Shortly before 9.00 p.m. last evening Mrs. Burry, of Trenton, unconsciously dropped a one dollar bill upon the sidewalk of Front street, as she alighted from a motor car. Upon the subsequent arrival of the Moose Andolorim, Mrs. Burry discovered the money was missing and retraced her footsteps to where she had alighted from her car. Seeing nothing of the bill, Mrs. Burry and Burry enquired as to whether any person may have been seen picking about. Two eye-witnesses stated that a boy who was passing one of whom reached down and snatched something that resembled paper money and immediately ran northward on Front street. The police were notified and a description of the two lads given by the eye witnesses.

Deductions on the part of Constables Arnott and Evans led them to the home of a youth upon questioning a local youth, the missing one dollar bill was found secreted in a mattress in the home police say. The lad was taken to the police station but later was allowed to leave. The money was returned to the owner who thanked the authorities for their prompt actions on the matter. Chief Reid would not comment upon the question of possible charges today.

POLICE BLOTTER

A rear end motor collision that resulted in considerable property damage to both vehicles concerned happened on East Dundas St. late yesterday afternoon when the cars were thrown together by the icy and slippery conditions of the pavement.

Earl Elmy, 290 Albert street, was proceeding east on Dundas street when as he slowed down to make an intersection, he was run into by another automobile, driven by Wm. Johnson, Hearst, Ont., and travelling in the same direction. Mr. Elmy's car in the rear. The radiator and front fenders of Mr. Johnson's car were badly damaged, while only the bumperette of Mr. Elmy's car was damaged. P. C. Thomson investigated and reported the matter amicably settled and no charges were laid owing to the condition of the road.

A resident on Dufferin Ave reported to the police that a number of hand snatched into their home yesterday afternoon. Previous to the arrival of the police for investigations however, the parents of the little girl became anxious for their child and soon located her safe and in good hands and quite content with her lot.

Despite the sub-zero weather throughout this district last night nine transients arrived in town and wended their way to the police station in search of warm dry sleeping quarters.

DOWN WITH CRITICS

Critics have in many lands and climes made many a creator in art smart and shiver and retreat before the stinging cuts of the critic pen. John Keats, one of the greatest poets of the modern world, who rivalled the Greeks in the perfection of form drew himself a bitter attack. Some even said later that this led to his decline but the defenders of the poet said he was made of sterner stuff. His poetry shows he was.

But now Hitler and Goebbels have stepped on the critic. They are not going to allow the critic to stamp upon art and literature, or fling bitter barbs. So the critic ceases as a class and as individual, unless it be in his individual capacity behind closed doors. For the criticism must be replaced by mere description. Their hope is that in years hence there will be a pure blossom of uninterrupted teutonic art, music and literature, uninfected by the poison of critics' pens.

Will the German plan work to advantage? Fair criticism, not ridicule, should inspire towards the correction of mistakes and abuses in art. The rugged type of art creator might not worry even over criticism, but there are immature artists who might be influenced to the loss of art through unwise criticism. Mere 'smartness' in criticism is of no value to anyone.

Britain rivals France almost as great academy as has France; France helps her creators in any of the forms of art to find themselves. In the English-speaking-world artists fight their way forward. Both French and English have reached heights. Who is to say which is the preferable way?

THE CAMPAIGN GOES ON

Hastings East is the battleground of two parties in the Legislature as leaders of the both groups and followers with the candidates endeavor to persuade electors how they should vote on December 9th. This unique riding which stretches many a mile from the Bay of Quinte to the farthest north boundary of Wicklow and Bangor, and has a width of about eighteen miles at least from the front to the rear boundary of the last line of townships has had campaign carried into every part. This makes the riding one of the largest in Ontario. Weather conditions have so far not made movements too difficult for the workers of both camps, though the long stretches between places of meeting have kept candidates and their organizers very busy.

Hastings East is pretty well known to the people of these parts, but to other parts of Ontario it would almost seem as if the riding is being discovered. Through the daily newspaper stories which come out from the various centres, large and small, which are turned into hustings for an hour or two of an evening, the people of Ontario are learning the names of every hamlet and village in the constituency.

The "Hunt" meeting staged for its particular benefit the week which usually goes on in Legislative Halls in Queen's Park, Toronto, with this exception that the Conservative leader is not yet a House member which gives him the advantage in the campaign, especially as the Liberal Premier in taking a hand in the campaign. In this case the big guns are transported down into one section of the province and the province-wide campaign is waged on a riding scale. It is their intention that while the people of Ontario generally are interested in the discussions of the issues, the people of East Hastings must be convinced how to vote in the middle of next week.

Then while the whole province waits the electors will vote to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late James F. Hill.

THE ANGLO-SAXON HERITAGE

In a very thoughtful and scholarly address to the Montreal Canadian Club Mr. Walter W. Price, of New York, paid a very high tribute to the Anglo-Saxon races and to their constitutional traditions and observances. He emphasized the blessings of a great racial environment, his purpose being to contrast these blessings with the tragedies which in the last twenty years have overtaken so many governments, and with the changes which have taken place in the spiritual and material aspects of other nations. The Anglo-Saxon heritage, as he described it, is threefold, including the traditions of the past, the conditions of the present as compared with those that in other parts of the world, and the hope which the future holds "if we remain loyal to and appreciative of the principles of government which have been handed down to us through the ages." Mr. Price's reminders are well-timed, very helpful and full of encouragement. He preaches an idealism, the idealism found in the development of the form of government under which the Anglo-Saxon races are now living.—Montreal Gazette.

IN NOVEMBER

The hills and leafless forests slowly yield
To the thick-driving snow. A little while
And night shall darken down. In shouting file
The woodmen's carts go by me homeward-wheeled,
Past the thin fading stubbles, half concealed,
Now golden-gray, sowed softly through the whitening field
Where the last ploughman follows still his row,
Turning back furrows through the whitening field
Far off the village lamps begin to gleam,
Fast drives the snow and no man comes this way;
The hills grow wintry white, and bleak winds moan
About the naked uplands, I alone
Am neither sad, no sheltering nor gray

—A. Lampman.

AMAZING DEVELOPMENT IN TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES during the past few years seems almost miraculous but is taken generally as a matter of course by the more or less bored intelligentsia of the world fed up with miraculous things which have become commonplace and possessed by the demon of speed—the world is hurrying at a tremendous pace, and as far as visible results are concerned, getting nowhere worth while, and accomplishing nothing that could not be accomplished in a more leisurely fashion—according to philosophers and observers not possessed with the urge to speed anywhere and nowhere. Prescott's Recorder Times recalls early days in the history of transportation on this continent when railway trains ran on wooden rails and other rails were formed by putting strips of iron on top of pieces of wood. Part of the Bytown and Prescott railway, now a section of the Canadian Pacific Railway had rails of the latter type over which surprising speed was made. But none of them, as far as we can learn, says the Recorder Times, had rails of stone such as those said to have been used on a tramway that was built in 1826 at Haytor, Dartmouth, England. One of these stone rails has recently been presented to the Science Museum in South Kensington. The track was about seven miles long and built to carry granite blocks from the quarries at Haytor to the Stover canal, whence the granite was shipped to London. The line was a single one with a drop of 1200 feet, and trucks were kept on the rails by a flange on the side, the wheels running on the flat outer portion. Ordinary flat wheels could, therefore, be used and the empty trucks pulled back by horses along a road which ran beside the tramway. Near the top a junction, with primitive stone points, can still be seen where lines from two quarries join.

A WOMANLESS TOWN WAS DISCOVERED BY A REPORTER way out where the West almost ends in the foothills of the Sierras and he wrote a human interest story about it which was widely published. Since then its mail has increased alarmingly at Womanless Town post office with letters from husbandless women seeking soul mates. No response. Then one day six wives in six automobiles toured the town looking for likable prospects but the men all hid and no pay dirt was exposed. Finally one gal snared the mayor of womanless town by long distance courting and led him to the altar. The Mayor and his bride on honeymoon were in New York City Sunday and spoke over the radio. The one woman in womanless town said she would have a by-law enacted that all men in that town must be in bed at ten o'clock nightly. The husband intended to use his influence to turn the other bachelors from the error of their ways and look upon matrimony with joy instead of horror. There is just the possibility that he may be deposed from his high office during his absence and asked to leave town for the good of the community.

By J. LUNNESS WEBSTER

Venerable and courtly Cyriaque D'Entremont is the grand old man of all living French Acadians. For 96 years he has lived in the town of his fathers at West Pubnico, N.S. His birthright is the oldest ever established in America by the French crown; his blood is that of the oldest nobility. His forbears on his Canadian lineage back to the D'Entremont who crossed the Atlantic for the New World in 1651.

Like an old-time seigniory, M. D'Entremont is proud of his blood. Ninety-six years ago he was born in the home which has remained in his family since it was built by his grandfather 127 years ago. There D'Entremont has built homes in Pubnico as early as 148 years before that, he smiles quietly and tilts his head high. "But in those days, mostest Acadians had to fight for their very lives," he continues. Then he relates how the French governor, Charles de la Tour, founded the first Sieur D'Entremont baron of Pombiup, "that barony endured, and the centre that we now call Pubnico, the oldest Acadian settlement in existence," he says.

Went To Sea.

When M. D'Entremont was born times had become more democratic than in the days of his ancestors. He grew up looking forward to going to sea and following the footsteps of his forbears. At the age of 20 years he shuttled aboard fishing schooners between the fishing-banks and Pubnico. After that he turned to farming.

Bearded and old-fashioned in gesture and appearance, this oldest of all French Acadians lives almost apart from the present. It is impossible to describe him in terms of 1936 as he leans on a cane that is some four times as old as the Dominion. As he takes his visitor around his acres he never fails to point out a secret festing in his cane. He twirls the handle and pulls sharply—and there is no cane had a cane he now wields a sharp dueling sword. "And we D'Entremonts have had to resort to use that sword several times, monsieur, since it became the great-grandfather's property," he says.

Talks French, English.

M. D'Entremont is self-educated. His French is pure French of France, not Parisian English excellent. He has an inborn respect for letters and the arts, and one of his pleasant memories concerns the years he served as Pubnico's census taker. Now, in his case, brings with it an anecdote. During the Fenian raids of some 70 years ago, M. D'Entremont joined the military strength organized to repulse the invaders. The Fenians were forced back before they reached Nova Scotia, so M. D'Entremont missed active service. As far as he was concerned that ended his military career. "But age may triumph over the strength of government," he says in substance as he tells how, fifty years later, he received a cheque for $100 for his services to his country.

M. Cyriaque D'Entremont

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop and ma was in the living room waiting for my sister Gladis and Harvey to come home from the show. Pop said, 'Ive gods look at those pictures.

Meening the 2 oil paintings, and ma said Now Willyum I just got through straightening those pictures, so it's a finincial impossibility for them to be crooked.

You mean it's a finincial impossibility for them to be any more crooked without being upside down, pop said.

And he pushed them dittrent, saying, Am I the only person in this house that's got a strate eye?

If you are you've got a very indirect way of showing it, ma said. Now really Willyum, I mean really, a slanting child in a cradle could see that you've pushed those pictures to all the angles of the rainbow.

And she pushed them back again, pop saying, O well, it's a unimportant matter, certainly not worth the trouble and expense of getting a divorce about. Let's leave them crooked, the pictures are all in better humor because I go into, so let's be original for Peet Gladis, he said.

O, put them any way you like, ma sed, them wrong side out on the ceiling if you want to, she said. Far be it from my feriherment thawts to try to show you from having your childish way in such a trifling matter, but I just want you to know for your own personal satisfaction that I know a crooked picture from a strate one after spending a lifetime adjusting other peoples relatedness judgements, she said.

With just then Gladdis and Harvey came, and pop and ma asked them if they thawt the pictures was strate or crooked and Gladis thawt they was way off and they all started for the bridge.

COSTLY TIE-UP OF LAKE SHIPPING

17 Boats Trapped in St. Mary's River And 73 in Lake

(By The Canadian Press)

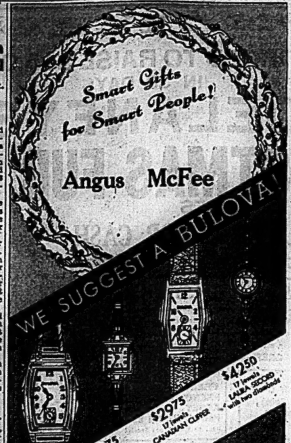
Grave Lakes shipping today faced threat of one of the costliest tie-ups in Marine history following a cold wave which surged over Western Canada, trapped 17 vessels in the St. Mary's River and made downward progress of 73 others from Lake Superior doubtful.

Meanwhile shipping became more expensive today. Insurance rates jumped at midnight. There will be further rate increases till December 13, when Insurance ceased.

Seventeen vessels in the lower St. Mary's River at Sault Ste. Marie were unable to break through the ice-block-jam of ice. Colder weather held the threat of preventing the 73 others in Lake Superior from reaching the lower lakes. Sault Mariners recalled an expensive tieup ten years ago.

The United States Coast Guard Cutter Escanaba got out of the Grand Haven last night to attempt to smash through the ice and make a passage for the 73 ships from Lake Superior.

At Port Arthur and Fort William vessels were delayed. The Dunton of the Great Lakes Steamship Company was reported missing on Lake Superior.



Conditions Bad

The conditions in the canals between Montreal and Cornwall, Ont., were reported bad. The Tug Beaucours left Montreal yesterday in an effort to free eight ships caught in the Lachine Canal ice near Ocean St. Paul.

Coated with thick layers of ice, the canal barge Buckeye State put in at Windsor for repairs from unfavorable weather. The barge had backed bad weather since leaving New York two weeks ago bound for Chicago with a cargo of general merchandise.

The cold weather had shippers working desperately to clear more than 100 barges on the New York State Barge Canal before the waterway became frozen over. Should the weather stay cold many vessels will be forced to re the canal throughout the

ESCAPEES TAKEN NEAR STAYNER

Cornering in Ditch And Offered No Resistance to Police

Stayner, Ont., Dec. 1.—(CP)—Two Toronto men who made a spectacular break from Collingwood jail early yesterday were in custody today. They surrendered after two police last night after 10 hours of freedom. Arrests of two others who fled from the jail are expected soon.

Marvin P. O'Brien, 30, and James A. Robertson, 23, were cowering in a ditch near this Georgian Bay town when police came upon them. They offered on resistance. Both men were originally arrested in the Toronto homes Sunday night on charges of aggravated assault on Fred Cole.

The men were taken to Barrie jail late last night for safe keeping. They are scheduled to appear at Collingwood today to face charges.

Capture of the fugitives followed a manhunt in which 400 provincial and city and town police officials took part. Every road and highway into Toronto was guarded and dozens of policemen scoured lanes and wooded country in zero weather for the four men.

Two Still Free

Stephen Krieger, and Matthew Rolling, both of Collingwood, awaiting hearing on other charges, escaped from the jail at the same time as O'Brien and Robertson. Krieger is charged with illegal entry into Canada, and Rolling with wife-beating.

Provincial Constables Butler and Rowe reported they were cruising near here when they came upon three men in the road. They wheeled their police car about but the three men had left the road. Robertson surrendered from the ditch and O'Brien was found within a few minutes.

The third man, believed to be Krieger, disappeared. Rolling, a tinking resident of Collingwood, is believed to be in hiding in that town.

Police believe the four spent the day of freedom in a root cellar. Almost freezing, they are believed to have lit a fire, which soon threatened to suffocate them and drove them from their retreat.

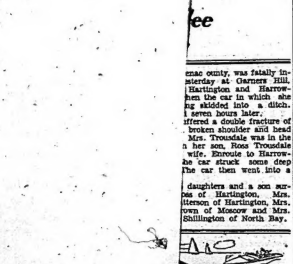
Canada Not Invited To Join West League Says Premier King

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—(CP)—Canada has not been invited to join in any "western League of Nations" Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared last night when asked to comment on speculative reports respecting Canada's participation in any league arising from the Inter-American peace conference now in session at Buenos Aires by President Roosevelt.

It was true, the Prime Minister said, a chair has been reserved for Canada in the Pan-American Union in Washington but previous governments had not entered. It was impossible to say what the future would indicate in the proper course to pursue but it might be the Prime Minister said, that Canada would join many nations, that stand for good relations between countries. It was unlikely Canada would enter into any military alliance, however, he said.

Some conference may be held before parliament meets, the Prime Minister said, and representatives and United States experts on the waterways question, if there would be no announcements on that subject until parliament meets.



He could make no formal comment on military or defence questions, Mr. Mackenzie King said, until after parliament meets. The same was true of trade matters which would be taken up in the course when the budget is under consideration.

CRYSTAL PALACE IN LONDON, BURNS

Relic of Victorian Era Nothing But a Smoking Ruins

London, Dec. 1 (CP-Havas) — London's world-famous Crystal Palace, relic of the Victorian era, was a smoking ruin of tangled steel and molten glass today following a fire which swept through the giant structure.

Sir Henry Buckland, Managing Director of the Palace, its various exhibits and numerous auditoriums, declared that in his opinion the fire started from a gas explosion. He based his opinion on the rapid spread of the flames.

The great dome, built entirely of metal and glass, crashed in a blazing inferno after the fire was discovered throwing sparks and flames 600 feet high. Firefighters strove to prevent the conflagration from spreading to neighboring buildings and homes.

Flames Visible 50 Miles

The flames threw a luminous pall over the entire capital and were visible almost 50 miles. London's people gathered on roof-tops and vantage points throughout the metropolis to view the spectacular blaze.

The Duke of Kent, returning to his residence from a banquet arrived at the scene in his evening clothes. After donning a fireman's helmet, hip-boots and raincoat he joined the front line of firefighters and remained for several hours amid the drenching column of spray from the fire hoses.

The research laboratory of Baird Television Ltd., installed in the tower of the Palace, was also destroyed.

Damages have not been estimated. The building was partly covered by insurance but this was based on its original cost of approximately $6,750,000 in 1854. Sir Henry said the Palace could not be duplicated today for less than $10,000,000. Furnishings and exhibits were contained in the Palace.

There will be five branches in the new department and directors will be as follows: John Challies, director of the Mines and Geology Branch; Roy A. Gibson, director of Lands, Parks and Forests; M. S. Wardle, director of Surveys and Engineering; Dr. H. W. McGill director of Indian Affairs branch and F. C. Blair, director of Immigration.

CRYSTAL PALACE IN LONDON BURNS

Relic of Victorian Era Nothing But a Smoking Ruins

London, Dec. 1 (CP-Havas) — London's world-famous Crystal Palace, relic of the Victorian era, was a smoking ruin of tangled steel and molten glass today following a fire which swept through the giant structure.

Sir Henry Buckland, Managing Director of the Palace, its various exhibits and numerous auditoriums, declared that in his opinion the fire started from a gas explosion. He based his opinion on the rapid spread of the flames.

The great dome, built entirely of metal and glass, crashed in a blazing inferno after the fire was discovered throwing sparks and flames 300 feet high. Firefighters strove to prevent the conflagration from spreading to neighboring buildings and homes.

Flames Visible 50 Miles

The flames threw a lurid glow pall over the entire capital and were visible almost 50 miles. Longing millions gathered on roof-tops and vantage points throughout the metropolis to view the spectacular blaze.

The Duke of Kent, returning to his residence from a banquet arrived at the scene in his evening clothes. After donning a fireman's helmet, hip-boots and raincoat he joined the front line of firefighters and remained for several hours amid the drenching columns of spray from the fire hoses.

The research laboratory of Baird Television Ltd., installed in the tow'r of the Palace, was also destroyed.

Damages have not been estimated. The building was partly covered by insurance but this was based on the original cost of approximately $6,750,000 in 1854. Sir Henry said the Palace could not be duplicated today for less than $15,000,000. Furnishings and exhibits were contained in the Palace.

Wins Major Award in Beans At Grain Show

Mrs. Maycock, Milford, Wins 1st Prize in Field Beans at Chicago Show

Prince Edward County shot into the agricultural spotlight once again when two of its residents walked away with two important prizes at the International Live Stock and Grain Show held in Chicago recently.

Maintaining the brilliant record she has achieved over a period of years in the growth of beans, Mrs. Maycock, of Milford, registered under the class for Marrow beans, won the major award in the Field Beans, any variety, Single Grain Display class. Finishing fourteenth in the same class came Mr. C. W. Reid, of Bloomfield, according to reports coming from the Prince Edward County seat. It was the first time Mr. Kent has won an award in the International show.

Mrs. Maycock, who has made an intense study of the field bean varieties, has found her efforts climaxed year after year by the winning of the highest award at the Chicago Exposition. By diligent application and a fine knowledge of bean husbandry, this clever Prince Edward County lady has perfected a species of bean which has found its reward annually at the larger grain exhibitions. And the honor is further enhanced when the fact is brought out that Mrs. Maycock annually stages a field which is comprised of a large number of the finest bean-growers in the United States and Canada.

Neighbors Honor Sidney Couple

Mr. And Mrs. Peter Feeney Are Tendered Farewell Party

Friends and neighbors along the Front of Sidney gathered in large numbers and filled the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Feeney to overflowing on Friday evening last. It was a delightful occasion in which there was also a note of sadness.

Mr. and Mrs. Feeney have been lifelong residents of the Front of Sidney and with their early departure the community will lose one of its most useful families. Mr. Harry L. Ketcheson who acted as chairman expressed his sincere regret at the removal from our midst of Mr. and Mrs. Feeney with whom he had been associated all his life. Mr. Arthur L. Burks read the following address:

To Mr. and Mrs. Feeney and family:—

Having learned that you are soon to leave the Front of Sidney, which has been your home for a long period of years, we, your neighbors and friends have gathered to say goodbye as we would to those who move long distances away, but rather to renew old friendships and strengthen the ties that bind the people of a community together.

During the changing scenes of your sojourn here on the Front of Sidney you have seen many come into our midst and many leave and it looks like experience, a keen sense of regret and disappointment, when old time friends and neighbours have left our immediate circle, for other homes. At the thought of your departure, that sense of regret and disappointment is being experienced keenly by your life long friends and neighbours here, with whom you have been associated in the greater part of your lives.

In every phase of community work you have been your services liberally spending and being spent in the service of others and unselfishness has been the keynote ment of conditions in the neighborhood. The true value of life is not measured by its ability to make money but rather by his ability to make friends. This golden quality is one you possess in an unusual degree and one we use you have come to possess one of life's greatest possessions—the friendship and love of others.

Your many deeds of kindness and the unselfish contributions you have made toward the community good have not gone unnoticed. As neighbors, as friends and as citizens you have played your parts nobly and well and in one voice of appreciation we say—"Well done, good and faithful servants."

As a token of our friendship and goodwill we ask you to accept these gifts. As you rest in this chair and enjoy the little light of this lamp may your thoughts sometimes turn to the Front of Sidney.

We sincerely trust that you and your children will find happiness and contentment in your new home.

Signed on behalf of your many friends.

After the presentation was made, Mr. and Mrs. Feeney expressed their appreciation and thanks not only for the beautiful presents received but for the many tokens of kindness extended to them during their long sojourn here.

Community singing and games were indulged in after which a buffet lunch was served.

The people of the Front of Sidney sincerely trust that Mr. and Mrs. Feeney and family may enjoy a goodly measure of health and true prosperity in their new home in Ashburn.

BOARDING HOME PLAN PREFERRED

Peel County Council Told System Preferable to Shelter

Brampton, Dec. 1.—The recent move of the Children's Aid Society to dispose of the shelter at Milton, and place the children out in private boarding homes, is proving satisfactory and will make better citizens of the children, the Peel county council was informed by Frank Thompson, superintendent of the society.

"In regard to cost, the new system is comparing very favorably with our former system. According to the treasurer, it will not be necessary to make any special requisition for funds during the present year. Expenses are being covered by the minimum charge of $6 per day being paid by each county for the ward under its care, and also the grant of $1,000 per year from the provincial government."

The Peel-Halton children's shelter at Milton, for many years termed a "white elephant" by Peel county councils, will be auctioned Dec. 5, it was announced. Any organizations which have in the past donated equipment to the home which has been closed since April 1, have been advised that their gifts will be returned if a claim is presented, the council was told.

Report of the committee showed that 31 children were in paid boarding homes, 30 in free homes, 14 in wage homes, 13 on adoption probation, and three in other institutions. Eighteen non-wards were being taken care of, the report indicated, and of the 108 children being cared for, 20 were wards of other societies at present under the supervision of the local organization. The report stated that at the end of October, 76 child protection cases were receiving attention.

F. W. McArthur, reeve of Bolton, requested that the county give his municipality permission to place the tank of their new water system on a hill outside Bolton at present controlled by the county. The question was referred to the road roads committee.

RATE CONTROL IS WARNED AGAINST

Highway Minister Says Roads Belong to Small Car Owner

Toronto, Nov. 30—(CP)—Ontario automobile transport men had before them today a warning against rate control by the Dominion Government. Commission and a suggestion that the highways which made their industry possible belong more to the people, the small-car owners.

Cautioning members of the Ontario Transport Association at their banquet last night against any control by a dominion body, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Highways Minister, said that since the Dominion Government was burdened with solving many difficulties it could do little else than make the trucking industry contribute to the solution.

"Any federal commission dealing with your industry will use it to bolster up railway transportation," he said. "Gasoline taxes will not be increased and determined on a comparison with the railroads. With the increase in rail rates, however, so will the cost of maintenance and of new transportation equipment increase.

"We have seen this happen in the federal regulation of railways to the point where they were and are facing extinction unless rates are to be reduced."

The minister told the transport men use of highways for truck transportation was secondary to the rights of "the humble citizen, who made possible this great highway system."

"Since your industry finds part of its necessary capital investment made to hand in the construction of highways suitable for its purposes," he said, "it is important to remember the source from which the highways are provided. They are sometimes charged by the railways with failing to impose upon truck users a fair share of the burden of the cost of maintaining and building them."

Use of the highways for truck transportation was a secondary consideration, he added. Of 550,000 passenger and commercial vehicle permits issued in 1935, only 67,000 were for commercial vehicles.

PUBLIC TO BE TAKEN INTO CONFIDENCE

New Policy of Automotive Industry Inaugurated in Press Campaign

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 1—Urging that Canadian industry as a matter of immediate national importance undertake a new public function which, for some, would be a complete reversal of past policy and for all, would involve a new educational technique, J. L. Stewart, speaking for the automotive industries of Canada told an executive group of these industries here last night that the function to which he referred could be described as "taking the public into its confidence".

The meeting was held following the sessions of the Automotive Transport Association which closed on Saturday. It marked the formal launching today of closer relationships between the automotive industries and the general public throughout the Dominion. Newspaper from coast to coast constitute the medium through which this development is to be accomplished. In his address, Mr. Stewart was presenting the results of a detailed survey of the subject which he has just completed.

Mr. Stewart first explained what he meant by industry taking the public into its confidence. This was not, he said, as simple as it might seem but a proposition which had not been carried out in the past in anything but the most modified form. It was not a question of issuing unexplained sheaves of statistics. It was something which except indirectly, was likely to be completely divorced from sales. This was a problem in interpreting Canadian industry to Canadians in short-and-easy phrases. It was not so much a question of stating what industry was doing or how much it was doing but what it was going to and why it was doing it, why it was doing it at all. What effect all this had on the life of John Smith.

No Mere Secrecy.

"In the past, industry has suffered because the public was not in its confidence" the speaker declared. "There was even the feeling that industry's part in general activity was to a degree mysterious and carried on behind closed doors. It is not going too far to say that this attitude of mind was encouraged in an endeavor at the time for that brand of secrecy in which if is definitely injurious. All it can achieve is to breed misunderstanding and place an industry in the same relative position as the man who complains or lack of appreciation on the part of his best friend and most severe critic."

Mr. Stewart then went on to emphasize that it was primarily from the viewpoint of industry itself that he urged these radical departures in business policy.

The Man on the Street

"The reason for their necessity at the present time is partly a matter of vital national concern and partly for the benefit of that individual personage, the man on the street, who is entitled to know what is going on," he said. "The automotive industries, for instance, through payrolls, purchases, taxes and automotive transportation, touch the life of not own a car and has no direct link with them. In only one way can such a man know that this influence is and that way is by the interpretation and interpreting of it for him and explaining it to him. Certainly in such an interpretation, the press of Canada plays a key factor.

"In general public has an intelligent insight into current conditions,—which can only be secured if industry takes its case to public into its confidence.—then Canadians will be in the best position to win all the advantages that are accruing at present from the business is rising rapidly.

"A vital statistic upon which our current studies have revealed is the present public attitude." Mr. Stewart stated. "Not only is it advisable to let the general public in on industry's secrets but this should include education in the formal, stereotyped and standardizing subjects of study curricula. I think it would be well worthwhile to establish whether or not insight and appreciation of such adult education had to do with changing and moving subjects such as the future of the motor industry which have a direct and far-reaching influence on daily life."

Mining Industry Quoted

Mr. Stewart illustrated his thesis by research the case of the mining industry and the relationship with the public was much closer than average. The dramatic aspects of this branch of business had given the movement its original incentive but this had been followed by a policy of revealing details of developments, operations and results. In the automotive industries, the complaint was formed in remarks which we have just quoted during recent years provided a similar stepping-stone from which to begin.

In his report, Mr. Stewart noted that the growing belief in the importance of keeping the public informed was not confined to Canada but was a general one. But in this country, it did have certain special aspects. With a relatively small population by world standards, the Dominion's industrial output was by comparison, enormous. The fact that as a leading trading nation, Canada did business all over the world and that this business meant, in effect, money in the pockets of every Canadian citizen, gave the matter both its increased importance and its distinctly national complexion in this country.

"We have just, during recent years, had a most disturbance had a most clear-cut, if distressing, demonstration of how closely-parts and interrelated the fabric of our national life has become. The effects were not confined to any one way in which, if perhaps two or three threads become loosened, the unthreading may spread through the pattern until it can eventually affect it all. Now that we recognize how an economic condition which may at first glance seem localized, may in fact be a matter of concern by the lives of those who may have no direct interest in it, or separated from it altogether, we must likewise appreciate that the reverse is also true," Mr. Stewart said in conclusion.

They Live By The INDUSTRIES of CANADA

Jobs are vital to Canadian homes and families. No matter what the job may be; in a factory, office or store, in a mine or in the woods, on the farm or on the railway, it is effected, directly or indirectly, by the industries of Canada. Thriving industries mean more and better jobs at steadier, happier industries mean fewer and poorer jobs.

For Instance, take Our Own Industry

The plants of the automobile manufacturers employ about 14,000 men and women engaged in the building of cars and trucks; an impressive figure, but merely the start of a chain of jobs.

The plants of the Parts Manufacturers employ many thousands more, and those engaged in the rubber, textile, paint, glass, chemical and steel industries add yet other thousands to the total, dependent in part or in whole, on the production of Canadian-built cars.

To this impressive total must also be added the employees of those dealing in raw materials, food, clothing and other living necessities, and employees of the various ways who live by traffic.

All these people are vitally interested in a sound and well-supported Canadian Automobile Industry.

For statistical and further information about this Industry, write to Automotive Industries, 1006 Lumsden Building, Toronto.

Industry provides a home market for our natural resources; for the produce of the farm, the output of the mine, the cut of the forest and the catch of the fishing fleet. Each industrial unit buys the manufactured product of many other units. All buy raw materials from every domestic source. The employees of each of these units constitute group of consumers whose mass purchases of food, clothing, housing and assessment, spread prosperity over industry and the country as a whole.

The interests of industry and of the individual, be he business man, mechanic, laborer, clerk, farmer, fisherman, miner, railroader or lumberman, are identical. What hurts one hurts the other. What helps one helps the other.

REDMEN LOSE 8-3 TO FLIERS IN KINGSTON

R.C.A.F. Present Fast-Skating And Sturdy Team of Pucksters

LOCALS WEAKENED

Teams Play Under Professional Rules, With One Exception

Presenting a fast-skating heavy team of pucksters, the R.C.A.F. "Fliers" defeated the Belleville Redmen 8 to 3 in a regular Kingston City League hockey fixture played at the Jock Harty Arena last night. Skilling at first and Bell, former Kerns team, scored for the first 30 minutes of the game, the shentee-riddled "Redmen" faded badly before a stunning onslaught at the hands of the Fliers throughout the entire second half, when the winners forged rapidly to the fore.

The game was played under the new Dominion amateur playing rules with the exception of the permitting of body-checking in the offensive ice area. One penalty shot was allowed Bill McNeely of the R.C.A.F., getting the shot in the opening half in the final stanza. The Redmen were minus the services of goal-keeper, Don Morton, forcing Manager Thomas to put on the ice and pair for player between the flags in Jack McGrath from the Kingston City. Instead of the usual team the Fliers unleashed a late-game barrage to score five goals in the last eight minutes of the middle frame. The Presentee kid line of Saunders brothers and Tompkins played the best hockey for the local Redmen, however.

Lalonde, sturdy fast-skating defenceman of the Fliers, was the big scoring threat tossed over the boards by Coach Lawrence of the winners. Lalonde flashing the red light on three occasions. Jack McNeely, former Ottawa Hiller star forward, bagged a brace, while his brother Bill counted once, as did Cowley while Le Compte rifled two past McGrath for nine counters. The Fliers presented a bruising system of defensive hockey, that tend, ed to wear the Redmen down, but also possessed plenty of speed on the forward line to prove prolific on the offensive.

Burley scored the first goal for Belleville on a beauty from Carl Morgan. Jackson put the local Redmen gang in the lead, early in the middle canto as he whipped home Tompkins' pass in front of Gibson, but their lead was short-lived as the Fliers went on a scoring rampage and notched five goals in the last half of the period. Belleville scored from a scramble in front of the Fliers' net early in the third period to end their scoring as the Fliers added two more to make the final count 8-3.

Referees—Bellringer and MacDougall.

JOHNNY WING IS GIVEN TRANSFER

Queen's Star Will Play With Quebec Aces This Winter

Montreal, Dec. 1 (CP)—Johnny Wing, centre with Queen's University hockey team last season, has received his transfer from Kingston where he is employed and will play for Quebec Aces in the Montreal senior hockey group, Secretary Registrar Alphonse Therien said last night.

It was learned George Brown, former Winnipegger and last season's leading scorer in the senior group, had been turned over to the amateur Canadiens by Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

Brown signed a contract with the professional team early this fall but never got into action in the big time because of a foot injury suffered during training.

MAX SCHMELING COMING TO U. S. ON DECEMBER 11

Believes He is Being Given The "Old Run Around"

APPEARS PERSONALLY

Not Trusting His Manager Joe Jacobs, To Do Business

By EDDIE BRIETZ
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—Max Schmeling, who apparently trusts nobody in the United States, is coming here personally to see they do not give him what is known as the "old run around" in the matter of a title shot with heavyweight champion James J. Braddock.

From Berlin the German, who leaped back into the pugilistic spotlight with his surprising 12-round knockout of Joe Louis last June, cabled the New York State Athletic Commission he would be on hand December 11 when contracts for his promised June fight with Braddock are scheduled to be filed.

When his September bout with Braddock was postponed because the champion was temporarily sidelined by an arthritis attack, Schmeling sailed for Germany with the promise of both Braddock and the New York State Athletic Commission that he would be the first to get a chance to take the title from the erstwhile New Jersey longshoreman.

To Protect Rights

Since then Schmeling read with considerable alarm reports that they are planning to match Braddock with Joe Louis in a return decision go in Atlantic City in February. He knows that if Louis should knock out Braddock, the crown would be hailed by the public as the unofficial heavyweight champion.

Therefore, he is going to make the long trip to protect what he regards as his rights.

The New York Commission, pledged to see that Schmeling gets a fair crack at the championship, has been trying for weeks to have Braddock post a $5,000 guarantee that he will go through with his agreement to meet Schmeling in June.

Last week in New York state fathers ordered Madison Square Garden and the 20th Century Sporting Club, co-promoters of the June bout, to file contracts for same on Dec. 11.

Schmeling was asked to be present in person, or was represented by some one with power of attorney. Schmeling's terse reply was that there was no one here he could authorize a power of attorney, not even his manager, Joe Jacobs. He said he would appear in person to plead his case.

This cable is expected to bring about a showdown between the German and his manager.

TWO RECALLED FROM SYRACUSE

Art Jackson And Reg Hamilton to Play With Leafs

(By The Canadian Press)

The rest of the teams will take a fifth off Sunday for a look back and watch the two underdogs of the National Hockey League's international section fight it out to prove the other is worse. The result of the matter much to the other clubs as neither of the contestants, Montreal Canadiens or Toronto Maple Leafs can upset the standings.

At home, Maroons will be slight favorites, but Conny Smythe's blueshirts with two straight wins under their belts after a pitiful start, may be hard to stop. Leafs will have two men up from their Syracuse Stars farm team—Art Jackson and Reg. Hamilton. Tom Gorman also threatens to stage out a new comeback for Montreal.

Jackson started with Leafs but didn't please Smythe and was shipped down the river. Fighting for another chance under the Leaf boss he played spectacular hockey for Stars and latest accounts have showed him to be with his teammate, Jack Markle, for International-American scoring honors. Hamilton, a defenceman, has yet to have a real test in major league company. Carl Voss still on the sliling list, Gorman said. "There is a strong possibility Maroons will sign a centreman" for tonight's tiff. "There's no question a first-class playmaker on his club which to date has failed to find a trace of the scoring punch last season brought it the section title.

The best start the Leafs can do is a two-all third place in the group standing, two points behind the Black Canadiens. A win would leave them still linked as the bottom of the heap. Just what type of hockey the teams will play is a question both managers claim they favor the wide-open style—but when teams need points managers sometimes change their minds.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Old King Winter swept down with force and old time vigor this season, much to the satisfaction of the coalman; but to the chagrin of the old man's wallet. 'Tis funny, but Dad and Santa Claus have to "take it" and bear up under all strains regardless as to their feelings wants. Of course 'tis an ill wind, that blows no person some good and with the sudden and early advent of winter young Canada is rejoicing at hope of getting down to some serious hockey playing, skiing, snow shoeing et al, while over at the Belleville Arena a 24 hour shift is on making ice and while the sun shines, but—making ice, while the moon hangs high and cold these nights. "One more stiff night like last night and we'll be about ready to throw open the doors," stated Manager Coy this morning. Forty or 50 minutes last night the skating surface at the Arena was flooded. All dressing and rest rooms are also completely renovated and a banner season of ice hockey is looked for now being anticipated in Belleville.

As has been their practice for the past few seasons, the Belleville Athletic and Yacht Club has prepared a skating rink on the harbor, directly in front of their clubrooms. The energetic club members installed a set of floodlights and today as the skaters will be afforded adequate lighting for nocturnal skating, although not as bright as moonlight nights, such is not needed. Secretary Charlie Jeffs has spared no efforts are being made to assure the skaters better ice than in recent years. "We intend to flood the ice surface more frequently as our lights are now in operation over the rink, especially among the adult hockey players and those who enjoy skating. As has been the custom in previous years, the dressing and rooms of the Yacht Club are at the disposal of skaters, who wish to change to their skating attire under favourable and warm surroundings."

Although they have made no official announcement as yet, it is learned that the Belleville Intermediates will not operate in the Hastings County League this winter, choosing to some talk of "Duke" Smith taking his Yacht Club team out into the Hastings County League in self of a Belleville entry in the Intermediate ranks. Plans for the formation of those interested, the Trenton and District League will hold an annual meeting in the Town Hall at Trenton on Friday night at 8 o'clock and those interested are invited, we heard in a round about manner today.

We welcome Belleville Ernie Whitehead formerly of Toronto. Ernie has been refereeing in the Toronto Intermediate ranks for the past few seasons, especially in the Stanley Intermediate series in Toronto. He is employed as accountant at the local branch of the Bank of Montreal and was married in Belleville recently. There is always room for one of his personality for a good hockey official.

Sometime this week the annual vote for the best football team in the O.R.F.U. will be cast by the fans. It's our guess, that the Minnesota Gophers will get the call, based on the fact they received a set-back from the Notre Dame Fighting Irish and Wildcats, who in turn won the Big Ten. For the Rose Bowl game it looks like Loudians or Alabama versus Washington, with the latter receiving a bit of the public call although Louisiana has the better record on the field.

Fading badly before a sturdy opposition, the local Redmen absorbed an 8 to 3 defeat at the hands of the R.C.A.F. "Fliers" in the Kingston City League last eventide. Setting Thomas-led aggregation was shorthanded in regulars, more especially being without a regular goalkeeper as Don Morton failed to put in an appearance. It was the "Fliers" first game and they showed up at their best when their wide margin, as they showed more condition and team play than a weakened team. Incidentally last night's game was played under the interpretation with the exception of permitting body-checking in the offensive zone. Even the penalty shot came into effect and saw the Fliers score one counter in this manner.

Postponed from last week the Quinte Motorcycle Club will stage a closing banquet at the "Y" on Friday night. Members of this get-together is to talk over the possibilities of staging a second 200 mile Canadian motorcycle race in the Belleville again next Spring. The officers of the Motorcycle Club are entertaining all those who assisted in making the first such a marked success, George Pepper will act as chief host at the secretary's report and also may make some announcement regarding his future plans, should he be racing in concerned. Any person, even those, having assisted on the Labor Day who assisted in the program is requested to attend. Contact Gordon Davies immediately. It is important that a large turnout be present as the club's plans for next year's race may be decided at the "Y" on Friday night.

During Saturday's C.O.B.L. meeting we learned that the roster of the 1936 Peterborough senior team was re-signed for another winter, sometime this week. Now with the Petes finishing something like $13.00 on the wrong side of the ledger, this gesture on the part of the Lindsay officials and fans will not only create a marvelous spirit among the players in their town, but also go far towards stimulating interest in the game in that city. Incidentally we understand that Ed McIvor, who has been employed in Belleville since the baseball season terminated, pulled up stakes and is located in Lindsay now. To us McIvor looked like a mighty sweet pitching prospect when he was with Belleville and will travel far and come home four-bagger-ing before long, once Peterboro they will find his equal in the amateur ranks. Incidentally the National Commission of Professional Baseball is about to take a look at Belleville baseball material, what about the future of the baseball outfit in Belleville? (That is if one could possibly compare or link the two).

"It's rumoured that the O.A.C. Aggies are angling for a senior football franchise and have threatened to withdraw from Intermediate and join an American college conference if their demands in the matter are not met. Personally it sounds like so much hooey, but one thing is sure and that is that the time champions will do. Look at the Oshawa ballsters for example.

PROSPECTS FOR FUTURE STARDOM

Jack Portland, Ray Getliffe Highly Praised by Hooley Smith

Boston, Dec. 1.—(CP)—On the roster of Boston Bruins one of the best crops of Canadian prospects for future stardom in the National Hockey League is being developed, said 'Hooley' Smith, veteran centre and defenceman who is only one of the many cogs in the Bostonians drive for American group leadership.

The Bruins, like New York Rangers and Americans, are enjoying a successful rest after a gruelling schedule. Eddie Shore and Joe Jerwa, defencemen on the sidelines with injuries, will be back in the match with Canadiens at Montreal Saturday. Bruins have been undefeated in five starts and Smith and Jack Portland, Toronto Cork Leaguer and Allan liner, have borne the brunt of defensive duties.

Smith attributes much of this recent success to the great work of Portland and Ray Getliffe, Moose Jaw wingman formerly of Stratford, Ontario.

"There is no doubt in my mind" said Hooley "that Portland will be the outstanding defence man in the league before another season rolls around. He's still the baby and you have to tell him only a few things in the heat of a game.

"Getliffe reminds me of Punch Broadbent when it comes to goal scoring ahot. He has already proved he has the ability to step in the Canadiens meeting Dec. 11, when articles of agreement will be signed between him and titleholder James J. Braddock. Louis will be rewarded with a probably fight. Schmeling later will make an exhibition tour of the United States.

Eddie Simms, Cleveland heavyweight, will meet Jack Roper in the Joe Louis in the main bout of the Cleveland News professional show, Monday night, December 5, at Cleveland. Johnny Risko, originally slated to meet Louis, withdrew when he suffered a fractured rib in training last week.

TRUSTY TOE KICKED OTTAWA TO VICTORY

John L. Wasn't Hoaxed

One of the greatest "Damon and Pythias" fistic combinations of all time was that between John L. Sullivan and Billy Madden. Eventually the boys, who were together for years as fighter and manager, split, and were enemies thereafter. This is how it happened:

Sullivan and Madden went to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to give a boxing exhibition. It being arranged that Sullivan was to spar with Madden. They arrived in the afternoon. John L. hustled to a hotel to rest up, but Billy met a lot of "good fellows" in one of the town's cafes. One as Billy was parting from his friends, one of them remarked:

"Well, Billy, I suppose you're going to hustle away so as to let John L. give you the nightly licking, eh?"

Madden fired up. "He couldn't lick me if I didn't let him."

"Say, Billy, cut in another member of the crowd, "why don't you slip it over on John L. tonight and give the boys a great laugh on the champion."

"How?"

Sullivan doesn't look for you to fight him. All he expects from you is for you to stand up and let him land a few. That gives you a good chance to slip one over on him and if you hit him right you can knock him down and that will be a great joke on John L."

"I'll do it," declared Billy. "It will happen in the third round."

Through the first two rounds Billy acted according to the highly unofficial rule for exhibition sparring partners. He was just a foil for John L., never attempting to hit back and was safe with the idea of missing so as to make the champion's defense look all the better. He took all that John L. handed him and performed his sparring role admirably for those two rounds.

With the call of "time" for the third, Madden swept across the ring and the fun ended said: "Watch me now, boys," and at once sailed into John L. with fists flying and with everything he had behind those punches. The attack took the champion by surprise. Billy landed several times before John L. awoke to the situation. Then he changed pushed Madden back and shot a look at the crowd which, by that time was on its feet yelling:

"Hand it to him now, Billy—hand it to him!"

At once John L. realized that Billy had attempted to trick him into a knockdown. So John L. who always had pulled his punches when mixing it with Madden, and now seeing Madden leering at him, lost his temper. He caused Madden into a lead, then whipped over his famous right hand and Madden went down in a crumpled heap.

Without the slightest show of excitement, John L. Sullivan walked over to the wings of the stage where there was an empty trash barrel. Rolling it over to where Madden lay, John L. picked up the unconscious Madden, stuffed him into the barrel and then walking to the footlights and brandishing his fist, said:

"If there is anyone in the crowd that would like to come up here and try to do what this fellow tried to do—let him step up here."

No one accepted the offer.

Sullivan and Madden broke soon afterward and the once inseparable pals were bitter enemies for many years.—(All-Sports Magazine).

ATTENTION FARMERS!

We want to meet a limited number of experienced farmers who would like to increase their income by several hundred dollars annually growing a fancy variety of Red Raspberry. The berries may be sold on your local markets or shipped to outside wholesale dealers recommended by us. The variety to be grown is very large and showy and generally commands a price from one to one and one-half cents per quart higher than the ordinary berries. Throughout the colder sections of Ontario where proper care and cultivation is given yields in excess of 5,000 quarts per acre are secured.

Heavy 2-year-old plants, Government Certified, will be furnished for spring planting, 1937, on very easy terms.

If you own your farm and your credit standing good, write Box "D" Ontario Intelligencer, on or before December 7, and a personal visit will be made to your home and the whole business from growing to marketing will be explained in detail. If you want a cash crop sideline of the very highest nature do not overlook this opportunity. N30-3t elsewhere was nothing but a measure to get votes, he charged. He challenged Mr. Hepburn on the basis of good sportsmanship to play the game, stating that he would sooner go down to defeat than use such tactics to win a favorable vote on December 8th. He would stand or fall on principle, not gratuities a heritage of which they could be proud, where goodwill would reign, and where the conditions of our forefathers would be upheld.

ROWE CONDEMNS

Major Merrifield said that we are in the midst of the greatest by-election in the history of the province. Premier Hepburn had all at Madoc at the nomination meeting that he failed to tell them that by electors to give him a mandate to carry on, but he now says that this is not an election but the will 1934 when the first of the present government expires.

Says Furnishings Cost $967.76

"The present administration," stated Mr. Price, "went into office to effect measures of economy, yet the new furnishings, the new window blinds and drapes—purchased for Arthur Roebuck and the Queen's Park cost the Province of Ontario $967.76!

"The leader of this province should uphold the honourable traditions of the province," said Mr. Price.

D. C. Metcalfe of Deseronto spoke of Dr. Boyce as a close personal friend of his, and his family doctor, but to whose political views he could not subscribe, and for whom he did not intend to vote. He stated that this election is not Dr. Boyce or Dr. Welsh, but the Hepburn administration which has been guilty of taking away the rights of the people of the province. The premier had said that he would sooner lay down the premiership of this province than give up his friendship for Senator Frank O'Connor, I hope this friendship continues many years, but I have never have made a success of life without "Aggie."

Mrs. Henry Emerson of Moira, an ex-school teacher, also spoke giving several reasons why she is supporting the candidature of Dr. Welsh. "There are many Roman Catholics today who are willing to sacrifice much for the good of the people of this province in general." To those who have been agitating for consolidation of the separate schools, Mrs. Emerson said, "Has there been one Roman Catholic who has been turned from his home by the teachings of the public schools of the Province of Ontario?

Mr. E. Tumpson, K.C., M.P., who introduced Hon. Earl Rowe stated that the Highways Department of the Hepburn government had taken from the County of Hastings $178,-177.50 for road construction, but in 7 highway the Henry government never interfered with the money. This statement was borne out by the evidence of the County Commissioners and information received from the office of the county treasurer. Through the County Council he was sent a deputation to Toronto to have this matter discussed, but the only concession they could get was a subsidy of three years to pay 40 per cent. interest, raising the county debt by millions for 3 years. A strip of sidewalk 1 1-3 miles long from the Trenton airport to the town of Trenton was to be paid for by the Dominion government on condition the province would buy the cement. This was not to be accepted by the County of Hastings but the Hepburn government had again billed the County Council with a bill of $30,000, taking this amount out of the pockets of the ratepayers.

There were many corporations at that time (citing the names of several). This same question (corporation tax) drifted on for a very long question for 23 years with the pioneer statesmen during eight consessions of Parliament and when the matter was passed in, Hon. Hon. George Brown and Hon. John Macdonald after statement stated it was a satisfactory settlement. Since that man has revived it since. Any concessions made during those days have been trivial as to detail.

No Choice Given

"Now Mr. Hepburn says 'you no longer have the choice of whether your corporation taxes go to us or not go to support separate schools, you must pay them to us.' Now, if a company is one hundred percent owned by public school supporters, if they live outside the province, that must be divided. Thus is broken the principle established by public school system.

Quoting what has claimed was a garbling of a statement made by Earl Rowe at a previous meeting Mr. Rowe said "the Premier stated that a total $500,000 taxes in Cornwall would be turned over to separate schools." My statement was to reflect that Hepburn had stated (and the tax thereon) would go to the public schools. Now let's see what the effect will be: Why should we pass such a piece of legislation, if no one will benefit? He has fooled the public school supporters and tricked the separate school supporters. He has broken the principle of constitutional right of the minority and no class should be more concerned about this at the present time than the separate school minority. The minority rights are violated if you warp and change the constitution so that they are taken away and privileges to which they are not entitled. I promise if in the general election of 1934 the conservative party is returned to power in the office of the statute book this iniquitous piece of legislation."

Speaking for the separate school supporters present, Mr. Rowe said "I am sure other legislation means as much to separate schools as the constitution can be altered to make little change and that is why I have no changed as to abolish separate schools, which the province can ill afford to oppose the repeal as the separate school supporters. No one has asked for the right to be a minority and fair play to them so as well as a majority.

"Premier Hepburn states that he is going to discontinue passing money under the table to separate schools. What does he mean by that? Does he mean that grants to separate schools will be discontinued?

Farms Sold for Less Than Value

"Hon. Harry Nixon has sold many farms by the Hepburn government, and there are instances where the farms have been sold for less than half-their Value to his friends. This is the Way Hon. Harry Nixon pays for the men who live in the back concessions" Mr. Rowe said.

Holding up a copy of the Tweed News of recent date, Hon. Earl Rowe stated heavily the increase in secure votes engineered by the Hepburn government. "Here is an ad. advertisement which said, 'Big Sale Now on' and referred to 'Five men from Hungerford put to work.' Ten men from Tweed given employment in the new road construction at Tweed."

Hon. Earl Rowe said political parties trying to buy votes from the people With their own money was new to Mr. Rowe caustically, but this is the first time I have ever known them to advertise it.

Mr. Fraser has said no trick will be applied to Ontario in the future but East Hastings is tired of a trick campaign as Ontario is tired of the trick government. Reiterating his former statement that the provincial debt had increased $80,000,000 in two and a half years, as shown by the premier's own figures given on two separate occasions, Mr. Rowe stated that interest alone was over seven hundred million dollars as against one hundred and ten million dollars in 1934.

The Hepburn Liquor Control policy might more aptly be named the Liquor out of Control policy as the number of hotels in 1934 was 977, 1935 had 1,000 licences to sell beer and wine have been issued, 45 per cent. of which are not listed as standard hotels.

Would Not Break Contracts.

"Hydro reductions have been secured before but never before have we had a premier who broke contracts. I never said, as stated by the premier, that I would break these contracts, I said I would not break contracts to secure a reduction in Hydro rates," stated Mr. Rowe amid rounds of applause.

Denies Incompetence.

Col. Geo. H. Drew who spoke last stated in the course of incorrect statements from the beginning to the end of Premier Hepburn's speech regarding himself at a meeting held in Tweed on Friday last." He referred to my associations with the department of Public Securities and that I had questioned Mr. Price's competence. This is untrue. He has accused Mr. Rowe and myself of telling one story regarding separate school question in one part of riding and another story in another section. That is absolutely ridiculous and untrue. Regarding the separate school question. Col. Drew said, "I am prepared to be discussed why are not the Roman Catholic members of the provincial cabinet in favor of the present discussing it. If the agreement is in force then why are they not explaining it?"

Regarding the statement that I had mentioned bloodshed, what I said was that every time in history when religion and politics had been mixed up there has been bloodshed, and I defy any student in history to say that I am wrong. In Canada we do not want religion in politics, and it is to the interference of the Roman Catholics to vote for the repeal of this legislation."

AT THE CAPITOL

"The President's Mystery"
"The Man I Marry"

Coming tomorrow for three days the Capitol presents another great human story in the form of "The President's Mystery" and "The Man I Marry."

The greatest screen role I have ever been fortunate enough to play," declared Henry Wilcoxon, noted stage and screen actor of "The President's Mystery", a powerful drama, starts tomorrow at the Capitol as Hit No. 1. Betsy Purness, Evelyn Brent, Sidney Blackmer, and other stellar names are featured with Wilcoxon in this gripping, timely drama.

The author of an influential corporation lawyer," explained the handsome actor, "presents a personality part that gives an actor genuine opportunities. It is one that many other players would have been happy to have. It is closely and definitely tied up with the American condition. The role, and the picture as a whole, will appeal to millions of people with food for thought and inspire them to take an active part in the destiny of their country as well as themselves."

"The President's Mystery" is the story of an average American town in which the people become desperate through unemployment. How they organize a cooperative movement to reopen a closed factory and provide their families with food and clothing is a thoughtcompelling screen play. The story, suggested by President Roosevelt himself was written by Gerald Beaumont and is said to rank next again to Frame in the realm of Napoleon Bonaparte.

The dramatic scenes of portions of two operas add to the magnificence of the production. Whichone was written especially for the picture by Aldo Franchetti, former conductor of the New Orleans Opera Company. The second is the famous Sextette from Donizetti's opera, as a mammoth scale in a replica of the interior de la Scala in Milan.

Fredric March, who proved himself a dashing hero, in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Anna Karenina" and "Dark Angel" and many other big productions, has the title role.

The leading feminine part is played by Miss de Haviland, who started the film world by her exquisite performance in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and "Captain Blood."

Stefli Duna has the part of the half-caste Indian American sweetheart of Anthony's at the time he is conducting a slave market on the Dark Continent. The role of Anthony's grandfather's sagacious housekeeper is handled by Cecile Cloutesworth. The grandfather, a rich Scottish laird, is doing business in Lagghorn, Italy, as portrayed by the noted English actor, Edmund Gwenn.

Anthony's mother, married under persuasion of her father to a Spanish nobleman, and who dies at her son's birth, is portrayed by Anita Louise. Anthony's father, the black sheep of the grandee of Spain who slays him in a duel over his wife, is later part is enacted by Louis Hayward. Billy Mauch plays the part of Anthony when he is a boy of ten.

Note Starring Times

The management wish to call the attention of the reader to the special starting times of the performances on Wednesday and Thursday and Friday of this week, performances start daily at 2.30, 6.45 and 9.10. And for your full enjoyment of "Anthony Adverse" see it from the beginning at 2.40, 6.40 and 9.20 p.m.

Jack Benny Leaving

Lavishly produced, tuneful, sometimes uproarious and always gay, and boasting a cast which includes the top names of radio and screen, Paramount's annual tribute to the air waves, "The Big Broadcast of 1937," will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times.

Jack Benny is the feature star's role. "The Big Broadcast of 1937" includes George Burns and Gracie Allen, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Benny Goodman and his orchestra, Ray Milland, Ray Walker, Frances Forest, Benny Fields, Leopold Stokowski and his Symphony Orchestra and a host of others all of whom blend perfectly into a delightful mélange of music, beauty and wit.

The Belle World News and Views and a very funny Mickey Mouse Kartune complete the program.

TO CALL SPECIAL

Mr. Hepburn lamented the references to the alleged influence of Premier Taschereau in the politics of his government. He reiterated his denial of any discussion of the Assumption amendment with Senator O'Connor.

Farmers To Minorities.

His action regarding this matter had been prompted by a desire to fair dealing to minority interests and the whole matter should be viewed in the light of fairness and not as a social manner. Mr. Hepburn declared that he had been responsible as to the faith we belonged to and he was very pleased and should not be held against any one if he had been born a Catholic." Each individual is entitled to his religious belief. Mr. Hepburn said that the Conservative party was really a minority interest and that he could not understand how an audience who appeared so intelligent could be fooled again and again by the verbal financial artifices that constituted the Tory machine.

Accompanying Mr. Hepburn was his friend Whitart Campbell of Toronto. Mr. Campbell provided excellent musical entertainment. Despite the cold weather (about one hundred people were at the hall from both Eldorado and Bannockburn. Many attended from Madoc village.

"Anthony Adverse"

Harvey Allen's monumental literary classic, "Anthony Adverse", brought to the screen with all its wealth of color and dramatic fire, romance and adventure, comes to the Belle tomorrow, Thursday and Friday, matinee daily.

Frederic March has the stellar role, with beautiful and talented Olivia de Haviland playing the leading feminine role.

In order to give this sweeping panoramic story the magnificence and magnitude it merited, Warner Bros., the producers, are said to have spared neither time, nor effort, nor cost. In fact more than two years were spent in preparing the script, in research work to make perfect the atmospheric settings, and in the actual filming of the many and intricate scenes.

There never has been a cast to approach the one in size, and few will equal it in talent. There are ninety sight principals with speaking parts, and but players and extras, and nearly 3,000 actors and technicians worked behind the camera to make the picture letter perfect. More than 1,000 scenes were shot, and 1,000 costumes in 131 mammoth sets.

The most picturesque background grounds are set in five countries on three continents. The scenes open in France, in the beautiful countryside and a great chateau, deep Italian forests and the Swiss Alps to the quaint city of Leghorn, Italy, Naples, Havana, Cuba, on to Africa and the great slave marts of ebony, back to Italy and again to France in the court of Napoleon Bonaparte.

The dramatic scenes of portions of two operas add to the magnificence of the production. "Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

"I've tried Rose. I wanted to give a series of talks, hygiene, and edneecation, you know, of course, to the ages...ons for the older children in the grade schools. Another for the high school classes. I buzzed around and saw people, and was told to lay off. I was told they got all they need in the regular way in their courses and that the parents would object seriously to a more detailed, more adult session....No that's that. It simply can't be done, not in Riverport at any rate."

"No," agreed Rose, "I don't suppose it can."

He didn't exactly like her tone. Her tone said: You have the facts. If you want to you can force the issue. You can call a meeting of the School Board and put your views to them forcibly. You can make them see."

He argued. "I've talked to Sutton. He deplores the narrow-minded attitude of the Board and the parents and many of the teachers. And I must agree with him that there's nothing to be done at present. Maybe by and by. I'll have to. I'll be education."

Rose said slowly: "Of course if you can't talk with Sutton, there's no more to be said."

"Oh, Rose," cried Jonathan, in real despair and sickening suddenly at the very name, the name which came cropping up in ruth which came cropping up in ruth all their friendly conversations, their sense of congenial companionship. "Please don't let's quarrel ...If it weren't for you, I'd say that I couldn't stick it out here, I'd be so desperately lonely!"

She smiled at him, then. She said gently, "I'm glad you feel that way about you, Jon."

"Rose" he said after a minute, "I haven't the least right in the world to think that you are engaged to Bill Lynd!"

"No" replied Rose steadily, "I'm not. I'm not engaged to anyone." She got to her feet and went toward the door. She said, over her shoulder, "And I mean that, Jon."

At the door, she called her name...she said, "Now about those doughnuts!" and Mary Ward appeared almost instantly with a platter piled high with fried doughnuts and a pot of coffee. "You get the cups," she said to Mary, and then came forward to relieve her of the laden platter.

He thought, well, she warned me, well enough; keep off dangerous subjects. She could have let the doughnuts wait a moment!

After he had gone Rose went upstairs to bed. Her mother dozed around pulling things away, straightening up the room. Presently she would come to Rose's bedroom and go through the usual maternal cross-examination which, however, she'd apparently never failed to be forthcoming at the end of an evening during which Rose had had a caller. For a few minutes however Rose would not be home and Mrs. Ward think her own thoughts. She sat down at the dressing table, fell to idly fitting capped hands and regarded her reflection. She said to herself, "Poor Jon!" in love with Sally. Not, Mrs. Ward mused, that Sally was not pretty. She isn't in love with Jon. Not yet. He's just lonely. But—

Her mother pondered. After a few minutes later she astonished to hear her self-claim to be, and of firm tone of voice, "I could of course, fight her with her own weapons. That's what they call you do. She'll be back in somewhere about the middle of December. Then it's only a few months until Christmas. Then—"

Spring comes slowly to the North. It is a true transition. It is not in the least the spring of more southern climes. It is not, as Rose said at first sight, an alteration over night. It is more like the way in which folk-lore friendship, which waits, which weighs, shy, a little restrained, a little cool, but how magnificent when it comes.

In May the roads were still rutted, and back of the camps along the river's edge ice was in the gullies. But the sky was a flawless blue and the brooks and streams were swollen with the fresh running of water.

Jonathan Ward's spirits began to soar in his first color. He knew next to nothing about the names of those who came along after school and walked and talked with Billed. often he would not see her except to wave through the window as she took out from the office now and then when a patient permitted, to see her, her gloved hands already wielding shears, a silly little tam perky over her head, and in her unaccountably shabby skirt and sweater adorning her slender figure.

Sally had been right. This time. She did not return to Riverport until early June. One night, after dinner in the house on the hill, Rose said, casually, remembering that she was bored, that she could scream with boredom and that it was indicated that she take a trip to New York and buy some clothes.

Jonathan added firmly, "Lots of clothes and what's your favorite color, Kiss?"

"Color?" repeated Jonathan vaguely, "Oh, I dunno. Any color that's...it's blue—or pink," he added.

Sally laughed.

"Marvellous imagination!" She stopped laughing. "Seriously, I'm crazy about yellow. Or green. Or maize

THELMA CONNORS quickly dried her eyes when she heard her mother coming down the stairs. Going to the window, Mrs. Marston looked out at the dripping trees of the lawn. Without turning, she addressed the young woman on the divan behind her.

"Even as a little girl you were too didactic, Thelma—and as pedantic as you were sweet," she said softly. "I'm afraid she [illegible] was your's not Paul's. He has pride, too, remember. Why don't you go back to the city and—"

"Never, Mother." There was choked bitterness in the exclamation. "He didn't make a single overture when I started packing my things. He actually helped me pack. Even when I applied for the divorce he never said a word about it, Mother!"

Mrs. Marston, turning slowly, half suddenly bent forward with hands gripping her sill. A low moan of pain had escaped her lips. Thelma sprang from the divan and hurried across the room to her.

"That — appendix — of mine!" gasped Mrs. Marston. "Acting up again." She managed a rueful smile. "I'm in for another lecture from Doctor Clarkson. Call his office, Thelma."

Paul Connors, sitting at the copy desk, leaned forward with brown head cupped in his hand. The duties were busy with a scene of long ago.

He was a freckled-faced boy of ten, wearing ragged blue overalls, pants and a faded brown blouse, the day of Thelma's party. He had been drawn to the open door by the shouts of merriment coming from the lawn.

He was leaning unobtrusively against the gate post when a girl of about seven, with golden curls flowing to her shoulders, approached slowly from within. There was a blue ribbon in her hair, and her eyes were blue and friendly.

"Hi," she said graciously. And then, with the abrupt naivete of childhood: "I never saw you before. What's your name? Mine's Thelma Marston."

"Way name's Paul Connors. We moved in here yesterday. My pop's a bricklayer. I'm gonna start school tomorrow."

Little Paul was dimly conscious of another person in the background. A black-haired woman in a white dress. Mrs. Marston. She was pretty!

In an instant Thelma was smiling. "Won't you come in, Paul Connors?" She reached out and took Paul's hand. "Mother says the ice cream and cake will be served at four. Please."

Mrs. Marston came down off the porch quickly. "Yes, Girl" she cried. "Paul must come in." Her eyes met as she leaned down to kiss Thelma. And heard her say: "Brave, my darling!"

"Connors! You've wanted on the phone!"

It was Thelma's voice calling from the Hedgerow hospital to tell him her mother was about to undergo an operation. Could he come over? Her mother wanted to see him.

"I'll be there in ten minutes," said Paul Connors; and he was. He found Mrs. Marston lying incredibly still under the white sheets with Thelma sitting white-lipped and silent at her side.

Dark eyes gazed up at the ceiling with a fixed purpose in them. And Mrs. Marston's lips moved slowly, grimly, deliberately.

"They'll be taking me into the operating room soon, Paul. Before I go I want to tell you what I think of you. You ruined Thelma's life. You're an utter cad, Paul Connors. You—"

Connor's mouth dropped open; his hands clenching of Thelma's chair drowned her mother's words as she leaped erect, her cheeks flaming.

"Mother Don't—don't talk to Paul that way!" A heel of her shoe rapped sharply against the floor. "That isn't true! He's not a cad!" She bent down over the white head, suddenly contrite. "Oh, forgive me, Mumsy!" she sobbed. "But I couldn't let you be unfair to Paul. I—"

"Love him," said Mrs. Marston, faintly but yes, do. Why don't you stay where you belong, where you've belonged ever since that first day at the open gate—in his arms?"

Connors never knew afterwards whether it was he or Thelma who made the first move. Neither did he nor Thelma know, ever what Mrs. Marston said to Mrs. Marston as she was wheeled into the operating room.

"I can't see any reason for the beaming smile," the doctor scowled. "Doctor Clarkson told me he wanted you to undergo the operation a year ago. Why the sudden decision? It's no emergency."

"Emergency?" Mrs. Marston's smile became almost a grin. "That just what it was, doctor."

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Old Timer was without weapons for defense. His only chance was flight, but even that was hopeless. The canoe of his enemies, well-manned with strong-armed savages, could easily overtake him. But at least he could try. Old Timer dug his paddle into the water.

Bobolo's warriors, however, bore down on him powerfully. With eager eyes on their quarry, they neglected the ordinary precautions which should have governed their excited pursuit. A treacherous current caught their delicately-balanced craft and flipped it over.

Horrible screams filled the air as the overturning canoe disgorged its crew and delivered them to the lurking crocodiles. Almost immediately the reptiles began their ghastly feast, and soon not a single warrior was left alive. It was a horrible picture to watch.

Being only human, Old Timer exulted at the destruction of his enemies. But actually, their death might well Mall Wagan's doom. Now Schoko could not bring food to his pygmy custodians as he had promised. And the little people were cannibals—hungry cannibals.

The two essentials for the success or failure of investments are:

1. Know what to guard against!
2. Know what to choose!

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

Newsprint is the Fore

This indication of the reliance of United States publishers on Canadian mills for their supplies of newsprint was further strengthened by the earnings issued in the current bulletin of the American Newspaper Publishers Association warning its members to watch their stocks of newsprint. This is rather unusual advice from this publication, which has generally tended to discourage anything like bullish enthusiasm on the part of the American newsprint industry. It points out that further business improvement coming in 1927 would make it prudent "not to permit newsprint inventory to fall below normal and also to make certain that 1927 requirements are fully contracted for."

The above would appear to indicate that the impression across the line is that higher prices for newsprint paper is only a matter of time, which further explains the avidity with which the public has been purchasing newsprint securities.

If War Breaks Out What Stocks Should One Buy?

The situation on the other side of the Atlantic is so fraught with pitfalls that investors are often turning over in their minds the question —what stocks should be held under existing conditions? Should such a terrible event happen stocks would naturally go down as the effect because of nervous selling but on analyzing the list thoroughly Financial Service has arrived at the conclusion that such issues as are given below would benefit very materially from such a catastrophe as war in Europe: International, Nickel, Steel Company of Canada, Steel Corp., Noranda Mines, Consolidated Mining and Smelting, Dominion Bridge, Canadian Industries, Ontario Steel Products, Ogilvie Flour, Lake of the Woods, Dominion Chemical, and many others.

REBELS DISLODGED FROM HOSPITAL

Government Source Issues Information To-day

Madrid, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Capture of the strategic "Hospital Clinico" building in an all-morning battle in Universal City was announced today by a reliable government source.

A violent government attack on the rebellious stronghold, one of the most important in the west, was made for Fascist strongholds in the northwest section of the capital since the beginning of the war.

Then a great blast from Government mines tore at the structure. Reports said it was half destroyed.

Government infantrymen swarmed at the ruins and, in desperate fighting, officers and troops remaining of the building was wrenched from the defending insurgents.

Heavy Engagement

At the same time there were reports of a heavy engagement in the model prison area. It followed heavy insurgent gun and airplane bombardment of government lines in the Rosales and Casino Campo districts of northwestern Madrid.

Socialist Commanders described the attack as the "greatest since the beginning of the war."

Two powerful mines were exploded in the attack on the Hospital Clinico, where last week 2,000 insurgents were reported hemmed in.

Bayonets glinting in the dim morning light, the militiamen charged in.

The struggle began shortly after midnight, and 12 hours later came the announcement that the fourstory building driven from the ruins of the building.

RAISE EMBARGOES TO PREVENT WAR SAYS CABALLERO

War May Spread Unless Step is Taken He Warns

SAYS FASCISTS AIDED

European War on Small Scale" Being Waged in Spain

Valencia, Spain, Dec. 1 (Delayed in transmission)—(AP)—A European war is now being fought "on a small scale" in Spain and may spread unless arms embargoes are raised, Premier Francisco Largo Caballero told the Socialist parliament today.

The premier devoted the major part of an address to an attack on alleged aid furnished by Germany and Italy to Spanish insurgents.

"The formality of recognition (of the insurgent government by Germany and Italy) might just as well have been carried out months ago inasmuch as it was apparent from the start of the war what the Fascist nations had planned," he said. "Without their aid the rebellion would have been stamped out in a few weeks."

Foreign Aid Alleged.

The Socialist premier declared Spanish Fascists never were only able to carry on their warfare against the government by the "direct assistance" of the two Fascist countries.

"The only explanation of these two nations—and another whose importance is insignificant—is that they are spurred by the tolerance and passiveness of other nations, and therein lies the great danger," he told members of the Spanish cortes.

"A European war is now being fought on a small scale on Spanish terrain and unless the League of Nations takes steps to prevent the legitimate government to purchase arms and supplies it will spread all over Europe.

"Only prompt action can prevent a world catastrophe."

FASCIST BOMBERS CAUSE 30 DEATHS

Rain of Projectiles May Have Killed no Fewer Than 100 Persons

Madrid, Dec. 2 (AP)—Sixteen Fascist bombers raided Madrid homes to splinters, killed between 30 and 100 men, women and children in a swift, surprise attack today.

The emergency Red Cross station said the known dead totalled 30 and that the list might go as high as 100. Many of the victims were women and children.

Bombs fell in Ferraz street destroyed three houses; in Valle Herrozos street three others were ruined. Others were blown up in the section around Montana Barracks.

Thousands of frightened Madrilenos fled to shelter cellars as the bombs smashed down into the northeastern parts of the city.

The raid was the second of the day. The insurgent air raiders had launched an earlier attack on the heart of the city after a violent land assault had been repulsed by reinforced government troops.

The air raid against the northern section of the city seemed directed at destruction of houses and barracks, indicating the Fascist forces are seeking to clear the way for an even more determined effort to take the city.

Many of the bombs fell near the model prison, one of the government-strongholds barring the road to the main avenue into the heart of the capital.

Directors of the bombardment almost exclusively against the defence fortifications; rather than the civil populace, lent color to the belief the bombardment was in preparation for a major push to reduce the city.

Socialist officers declared the insurgents' "striking power" had been weakened and possibly broken after the most bitterly fought battle in the nearly month long siege of Madrid.

Premier Hepburn Discusses Issues at Thomasburg Rally

Declares He Will Fight Monied Interests With All His Power

CHARGES LEVELLED

Defence of the policies of his administration since coming into power, and attacks upon the people of Ontario from those politics and not appeal to the electors of the province to give the Liberals School Bill a fair trial, "to await its application and then to judge its effect and if the people are dissatisfied they will have an opportunity to vote out the government and to place in power, Mr. Rowe, if he is still 'Pat' Leader, who has pledged repeal of the act," was the theme of Premier Mitchell Hepburn to a crowded hall in Thomasburg on night, in a stirring address in support of Dr. H. A. Boyce, the Liberal candidate, in the forthcoming East Hastings by-election.

Mr. Hepburn did not deter a packed Oddfellows' Hall from giving the Premier a vociferous welcome as he entered with Dr. Boyce and party. Accompanying the Premier were Hon. Peter Heenan, Northumberland, Harold Carr, M.P.P., Northumberland, D'Alton Clark, Reeve of Percy Township, and Mr. Boyce, Secretary of the Tweed Liberal Association, whose vocal offerings were loudly applauded and encored. J. RINGLING DIES LIFE ASSOCIATED WITH BIG CIRCUS

LAST OF 7 BROTHERS

Ringling Circus Mounted on Wheels to be "Greatest Show"

New York, Dec. 2 (AP) — John Ringling, whose name was synonymous with the "big top", sawdust ring and circus parades from coast to coast, died today. He was 70 years of age.

The circus magnate was the last of seven brothers whose backyard playtime show in Baraboo, Wis., grew to become perhaps the largest entertainment combine in the United States.

At Ringling's bedside at his Park Avenue home when death came were Mrs. Ringling, his wife; John Ringling North, a nephew; Dr. Maurice Costello, his physician; Frank Conway, a life-long friend, and his servants.

Ringling's interests during his late years were not devoted entirely to the show business. He owned valuable Florida real estate in Florida, railroad stock, and was a collector of art masterpieces. Many of these became the centre of his interests.

Ringling's first wife died in 1929, and in December, 1930, he was married to Mrs. Mable Burk, from whom he was divorced.

The son of a German-born bandmaster whose name originally was August Rungeling, John Ringling was born in McGregor, Iowa, but his family moved to Wisconsin when he was a small boy.

At the age of five he collected pins for admission to the performances of the Ringling Bros. circus by his father's back yard. John also played the bass viol in these shows.

Joined Show in 1870.

In the early '70's he began showing varied talents, though, harness from the Ringling boys' father, and started a small circus of his own. After them went four of the boys to collect. They joined the show in 1870.

The classic Concert Company was the first real venture in the show business. Successful in this, they formed the Ringling Brothers' Variety Concert Company and a short while afterward bought a full-fledged circus of their own. The first spring wagons, home-made tents, stock, stakes and ropes.

John Ringling showed a genius for transportation details, and it was his faculty that enabled him to enlarge and build up the extensive show business that they had formed.

In 1890 the Ringling venture was pointed out as "the most splendid the greatest show in the world", it became a rolling stock from coast to coast.

The merger of the Ringling Brothers' circus and the Barnum and Bailey show made famous by the famed Phineas Barnum took place in 1907. The brothers paid $410,000 for their rival business and soon brought the two great shows under one banner.

Premier and Janitor Collaborate in Story

One of the most humorous situations of the entire by-election campaign occurred last night at Queensbury where Premier Mitchell Hepburn and the janitor of the Oddfellows' Hall unwittingly "teamed up" in an illustrated story.

Telling a story of the boyhood days of himself and Wishart Campbell, Toronto radio star, he was present at the meeting, the Premier related how Campbell encouraged to raise a window in the room in which they were staying.

The crowd reared with laughter as the janitor of the Hall walked towards a window and alighted. "Anyway Wishart returned with a stick . . ." Again the crowd rocked the hall with its merriment. The Premier turned and looked at the window. There stood the janitor with a broom trying to push up the window. Mr. Hepburn smiled, turned away, then burst into unrestrained laughter.

"If that gentleman is all a minute," he said, "I will tell him the story of Wishart Campbell's boyhood days." But the janitor seized his broom and fled to the safety of the back of the stage-curtain.

CLAIM GAS USED IN AIR BOMBING

Spanish Loyalists Say First Cases of "Gas" in Hospitals

Madrid, Dec. 2—Hospitals today coped with what authorities called "the first gas cases" of the siege in a Fascist attack.

In all, close to fifty heavy bombs were dropped by the sixteen roaring Caproni, mostly in the University Rosales and Cuatro Caminos Workers sections.

One bomb wrecked one side of the Red Cross Hospital. In the ambulance Two visiting British members of parliament narrowly escaped flying shrapnel.

One of them, W. H. Green, said they jumped into an adjoining cellar the first explosion and rushed to the Republican district. There, entering wrecked homes, "we saw scores of injured women and children—two dozen or more children were thrown in one pile."

Visitors In Town.

The M.P.'s said the defence junta had made no secret of the fact their presence in the capital had kept Madrid' from being "bombed to bits" and they explain that the morning's raid, the first daylight attack on the city since the Fascist revolt, spurred by an announcement from the insurgent Seville radio that they would raid Madrid yesterday.

The Junta promised to conduct the operations on a "non-hospital" where, authorities said, University City Foreign Legionnaires were suffering the effects of a gas attack launched yesterday.

Although the defence officials insisted gas had been used by the insurgents, some military sources said the normal fumes of the violent, close-range bombing had caused the dread symptoms of gas poisoning.

Nevertheless, the newspapers quoted the defence reports by government lines in the Cordoba sector as alleging the insurgent officers had repeatedly declared: "We'll use gas." Each of the documents' press reports said, was equipped with Italian type gas masks.

Young Mother Sees Light Weight Babe For the First Time

Brampton, Ont., Dec. 2—(CP)—Mrs. Norman Wallace, 20, saw her baby daughter yesterday saw for the first time her baby. Weighing only two pounds ounces.

Snug in a cozy incubator in hospital in this Toronto district town, Canada's tiniest baby slept through the momentous interview. Mrs. Young was accompanied by her husband and afterwards asked him:

"Isn't she the smallest thing! It seems incredible. I can hardly believe my eyes. She's only 32 ounces, just two pounds, now."

BAN VOLUNTEERS SERVING IN SPAIN BRITISH PROPOSAL

ANXIETY ADMITTED

Britain Not Satisfied With Working of Agreement

London, Dec. 2 (CP)—Disturbed by the threatening international scene, the British government today made two diplomatic moves.

A note was presented by the foreign office to the German embassy, expressing concern that Germany by unilateral action had denounced the treaty clauses of the Versailles Treaty.

Ban On Volunteers.

Before the international bands off committee meeting, the Earl of Plymouth, parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, took the first step towards a ban on volunteers for Spain.

Lord Plymouth expressed the "anxiety" of the British government regarding reports of the arrival in insurgent Spain of large number volunteers in Spain. He asked the chairman, Count Charles de Kerchove, to consider the question at a meeting to be held Friday.

The question of volunteers, Lord Plymouth added, had been touched upon at the non-intervention sub-committee but never examined in detail. Although the British government agreed the question of volunteers fell outside the scope of the non-intervention agreement, it was defined at present, they felt it was a matter which called for further examination. The committee then agreed that the chairman's sub-committee should be called for Friday.

Britain Dissatisfied.

The committee further agreed to the immediate despatch to the two countries of a plan for supervision of the importation of arms and other war materials into Spain as the principal points of entry by land and sea. The Portugese reported by his government to abstain from voting. Various other representatives entered reservations on behalf of their respective governments with regard to details of the scheme and apportionment of the costs.

The British representatives on the non-intervention committee were satisfied with the working of the non-intervention agreement. They were confident that it was in the interests of Europe, and therefore of every country represented on the committee, that the agreement should be scrupulously observed.

Lord Plymouth said: "Much interests lightly," commented one British delegate today, on the departure or arrival of 5,000 Germans at Seville and 5,000 Italians disembarked at the German Embassy denied that 5,000 German volunteers had landed in Spain.

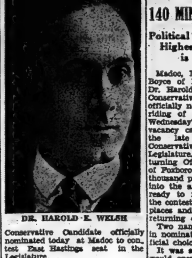
CONDITION SATISFACTORY

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP)—"Entirely satisfactory" was the report on the condition of Bud Kuntz, injured Toronto rugby player, made by Dr. F. A. Logan, attending physician, today. Dr. Logan said his patient was resting comfortably in pain and, barring complications, had more than an even chance of recovery.

It was in last Saturday's playoff game here between Wexfords and Lindsay that Kuntz was injured after a tackle which contributed to Lindsay's 6-0 victory.

2 Men-of-War To Gibralter

Valetta, Malta, Dec. 2—(AP)—Two of Great Britain's mightiest warships—the battle cruisers Hood and Repulse—left today for Gibraltar to relieve other warships in accordance with a long arranged program."



The British steamer Thurston was held up by port authorities here en route from Odessa to Cartenga, Spain, with a cargo of 100 motor trucks.

Thousands Crowd Madoc Armouries As Dr. H. E. Welsh and Dr. H. A. Boyce Are Nominated for East Hastings Seat

Candidates Are Flanked by Leaders of Two Political Parties

140 MINUTES SPEAKING

Political Enthusiasm at Highest Pitch as Contest is Officially on

DR. HAROLD E. WELSH

Conservative Candidate officially nominated today at Madoc to contest East Hastings seat in the Legislature.

Madoc, Dec. 3—Dr. Harold A. Boyce of Deseronto, Liberal, and Dr. Harold E. Welsh, of Roslin, Conservative, were this afternoon officially nominated to contest the riding of East Hastings in the post Wednesday's by-election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late James F. Hill, former Conservative Whip in the Ontario Legislature. At one o'clock the returning Officer, Mr. Floyd Ashley of Foxboro, announced to the two thousand persons who had crowded into the armouries that they were ready to receive nominations for the contest, read the list of polling places and the list of the deputy returning officers.

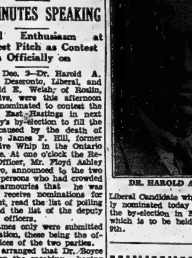
Then the names were submitted in nomination, these being the official choice of the two parties.

It was arranged that Dr. Boyce would open the speaking having the floor for ten minutes to be followed by Dr. Welsh speaking a like time. Premier Hepburn was then to speak on behalf of Dr. Boyce for forty-five minutes, and after Hon. Earl Rowe or Col. Drew for Dr. Welsh for the period of one hour. The Prime Minister was to speak fifteen minutes in reply.

Meeting Outside Crowded

The armouries filled to the doors but not content all who came far and near as fifteen hundred or more persons, content to stand outside, converged quickly and stamped their feet or brushed the snow from the shoulders as it continued to fall steadily. Outdoor arrangements had been made to carry the speakings of the speakers to those outside the hall. The streets were crowded with cars and some motorists.

Some twenty-seven newspapermen, writers and camera men were present to record the events of the day.



The crowd was very orderly and quiet "though interested" as their presence showed. The polling booths were also well filled throughout.

Political Centre.

Madoc, Dec. 3—Political centre of Ontario for a day, Madoc was thronged by thousands of country folk who came by cutter and motor car, buggy and wagon, to hear Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Conservative leader Earl Rowe speak from the platforms here at a Hastings East nomination day spectacle.

Hours before the armouries were opened, long before the Liberal Pre-

See Tripartite Defence Pact

London, Dec. 2—(CP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that Great Britain was negotiating a new defensive alliance with France and Belgium.

(Eden's remarks were the first British indications bearing out French reports of a tri-partite agreement among the three countries.)

The Foreign Secretary did not discuss the provisions of the treaty other than to say Britain's obligations "shall approximate as closely as possible those of the Locarno Treaty."

Eden declined to say whether Britain would be bound to go to France's aid if French troops marched as a result of her treaties—with the Soviet Union and others.

Railroader Killed in Toronto

Minico, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP) — Fatally injured while coupling freight cars in this Toronto suburb today, Patrick Francis George Scott, 54, Toronto, died in a Toronto hospital today. While crossing between two moving cars, Scott's clothing was caught and he was dragged along the right-of-way, suffering broken right hip and internal injuries.

Earl of Derby, 'John Bull,' Retires from Public Life

'Britain in Dust in Twelve Months if Gov't. Turned Out,' He Says

INTEREST IN PARTY

London, Dec. 2 (CP)—The Earl of Derby, often lauded in political and social life as the "uncrowned king" of Lancashire, announced today that his political life was over.

The intimation was given to the Manchester Conservative Club that in retiring from the presidency of the club.

"It does not follow that I in any way abate my interest in the (Conservative) party or my desire to help in any way," he said. "If anything should go wrong, government or no, should have a government which should bring the country into dust in twelve months."

Looks Part of John Bull.

The Earl of Derby has long stood for the typical John Bull. He looks the part and has always acted it. The essential middle-class outlook probably accounted in no small measure for his strong friendship with King Edward VII and King George V.

Before assuming the title, he was for some time postmaster general. His denunciation of the Postal Servants Union as "blood-sucking and blackmailers" lost him his Preston seat in the House of Commons, hitherto a safe Conservative seat in Stanley family.

During the war his name was associated prominently with an immense munitions purchasing drive. His success undoubtedly delayed temporarily the introduction of conscription. Subsequently he was for most pleasant impression in Paris where he was British Ambassador 1918-1920.

Success Was On Turf.

The Earl's success on the turf dates back to 1904 with Sansovino. It was the first time any member of the family which gave the reign its name had won since 1787. In 1932 he won the 1000th derby with Hyperion, the smallest derby winner of modern times.

He has wide-de-camp to his father, Lord Stanley of Preston, when the latter was governor-general of Canada from 1888 to 1891.

MINIMUM WAGE ISSUE DISCUSSED BY CHEESEMAKERS

Interesting Debate on Question Opens C. O. Convention

Whether cheesemakers of this central district will go on record as favoring a minimum wage law for their work will depend upon future action of delegates now in the city attending the ninth annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, it was intimated following prolonged discussion of the matter at this morning's session held at the city hall.

Salaries

Upholding the theory that cheesemakers were making their product for too little money, Grant Anderson, Campbellford maker, declared wages were not enough to enable makers to keep their families. It was added, should be asked to make cheese for less than 15 mills. As the manner in which cheesemen would be able to organize for better protection, it was suggested by the speaker that an annual fee of $20.00 be paid into a central association which would in turn regulate rates of wages and appointments to factories.

"A man can't live on the $500 a year which we get now," declared Mr. Anderson. "Yet as this price he is expected to make 100 per cent cheese. He can't support on this small, stationary salary for more years than any of us can remember, yet he has done little to improve his position."

Prices received for cheese under 15 mills yet, but I know lots of others.

GRADUATING CLASS HONOR TWO MEMBERS

The graduating class from Cobourg Hall in 1912 met at the University Club, Toronto, on Saturday night last for a reunion and get-together, the first since the class went out into the world to enter their professions. There were 26 members in the class of which 20 were present at the reunion and of the class, 24 are dead. The gathering honored two members of the graduating class, who have been recently appointed to the bench, namely, H. E. F. Cherry, Q.C., of Toronto, County and Judge Archibald Cochrane, County Judge of Peel County and a former resident of this city.

The toast to Judge Cherrier was proposed by Dr. McRae, Dean of the Law School and a member of the 1912 class, while the toast to Judge Cochrane was proposed by H. B. Collins, K.C., of Belleville and a former classmate of His Honor. The meeting was a most enjoyable affair.

ALDERMAN ARMSTRONG DENIES MORNING STORY

Alderman Harold Armstrong of this city says what reported in a Toronto morning paper as being present and acting as chairman at a meeting held on December 1st last evening at which Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto was the speaker, is entirely a denial that he had been at the meeting in question.

"How anyone else to confuse my name with it is something I haven't learned yet," he declared.

CORBIN LOCK EMPLOYEE IS PAINFULLY INJURED

Norman Meldrum, of 30 Green Street, an employee of the Corbin Lock Company of this city, sustained severe tear and back injuries while unloading machinery from a truck at the rear of the Corbin premises yesterday. Mr. Meldrum was assisting in the unloading of a large piece of machinery, when suddenly the machine swung loose from the truck on a pulley, and pinned Mr. Meldrum against the vehicle. The injured young man was attended by Dr. R. J. Gibson, who stated today the injured man's back had been severely strained, while his leg was crushed. No bones were broken, however. Mr. Meldrum will be able to continue employment for a considerable period, doctor officials stated today. The accident happened through accidental, however.

POLICE BLOTTER

Stalled on West Bridge St. hill as the result of a broken axle, a large Davidson transport and trailer from Toronto caused cautious driving in that vicinity early today. Sergeant Booth attended the scene and directed traffic until the damage was removed and the street cleared for traffic. The axle of the transport, heavy brake under the strain, leaving the vehicle unable to make progress. The vehicle was stalled on the south side of the street, making east bound traffic down the incline rather dangerous, owing to the slippery condition of the street. The vehicle was later removed by a large tow truck and traffic reverted back to normal.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, leaving the cell block at the police station free for the accommodation of the ten transients who applied for a warm night's lodging.

Under Inspector Frank Gardner a detachment of provincial police left Belleville late this morning for Madoc where additional constables needed to police that village during the political nomination that is in progress there this afternoon. "Just as precautionary procedure in case of arguments between factions", commented Inspector Gardner, when questioned on the matter previous to leaving Belleville at noon.

FARMER CHAMPIONS

Prince Edward County has come into prominence with the victory of two residents in the International Livestock and Grain Show at Chicago, Mrs. Maycock receiving the highest award for beans and T. C. W. Kent of Picton fourteenth place.

The name of Mrs. Maycock of Milford has appeared year after year as winner of the championship in beans. Her successes have had a sequence over many years, witnessing to the intense study of the growth of beans. One has but to realize the nature of these competition which draw the best in the world from all parts of the North American continent.

It was at this same show that a Canadian becomes the champion wheat grower, Herman Trelle of Wembley, Alberta. This is his fifth championship with wheat and third with oats, an unprecedented double. While the grower of championship grains and produce bestows unusual care on each head of wheat and oats, or bean plant, which would be impossible for the average flel dfarmer, yet the result is the production of a grain or a bean which adds to the wealth of the nation. Trelle's wheat weighs 66.3 pounds to the bushel instead of the standard 60 pounds. Descendants of the Trelle wheat will be growing in many parts of Canada and increasing the agricultural wealth of the country.

Canada must be proud of the achievement of her farmers in field husbandry and in championship-winning.

THE SMALL MYSTERY

The Small mystery has returned to as deep a mystery as it ever was, after the recent unearthing of bones in the county to unset the will of Mrs. Small, who had inherited the estate of the late Ambrose Small according to a will of 1908.

Despite the attempts to solve the mystery of the disappearance of the theatre magnate, it remains as much a mystery as it was in 1919, seventeen years ago on December 2nd when Ambrose Small left his office never to be seen again. Clues of all kinds have been suggested. No traces of the body have ever been found, though there have been numbers of suggestions as to what became of it if Small died or was killed.

The outlook is not clear for any solution, and the mystery will likely keep itself as dark and intriguing as it was when the wealthy theatre owner disappeared.

ZAHAROFF

Sir Basil Zaharoff, who held a British knighthood and 28 decorations from many nations, is dead. The man who is credited with knowing more about armaments than any other man for half a century has retreated into even deeper silence and mystery than surrounded him during the long life he lived in international circles. A maker and seller of armaments he is said to have made a fortune, the seventh largest in the world.

"Of the world and not of the world" it might be said of him. Born in the Levant his origin not being clear, Zaharoff though he became a power in the world which only money can bring was unostentatious and carried an air of secrecy with him wherever he went.

The close of his life was much of the same character. Surrounded with wealth and the things that wealth can buy, he died suddenly at Monte Carlo. On his vast estate of Chateau Balaincourt, the man who was a power among the great of the world, had peasant hands bear him to his eternal sleep in the vault of a steam-heated tomb beside the body of his wife who died ten years ago shortly after he bought the estate for her as a wedding gift. This estate once belonged to King Leopold of the Belgians and over it roam 4,000 sheep and hundreds of prize cattle and on which stand costly statues, six commemorative chapels and 60 farm houses for 250 peasants.

On his coffin rested a simple spray of carnations which he loved. Stepdaughters of noble rank followed him to the grave. They will share his estate.

He who knew the intricacies of governments and who wielded immense power spent his later years distributing presents to the poor and among his flower gardens. A life of contrasts has closed in his casket over the mystery of his birth and his rise to power.

THE LAKE ISLE OF INNISFREE

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles made;
Nine bean rows will I have there, a hive for the honey bee,
And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

And I shall have some peace there; for peace comes dropping slow,
Dropping from the veils of the morning to where the cricket sings;
There midnight's all a-glimmer and noon a purple glow,
And evening full of the linnet's wings.

I will arise and go now, for always night and day
I hear lake water lapping with low sounds by the shore;
While I stand in the roadway, or on the pavements grey,
I hear it in the deep heart's core.

—William Butler Yeats.

TURKEY TIME IS APPROACHING and soon the turkeys will be walking their "last mile" preparatory to sharing in the Christmas festivities as guests of honor on the festive board. Just how deeply the turkey tribe will appreciate this distinction can best be left to the imagination. This is the story of the old Hen Turkey, that came back, yes she came back with the eighteen baby turkeys she took away in the spring. Gaunt, hearty and rarin to go places and do things. It happened on a farm a few miles from Belleville. The farmer's wife always raised a few turkeys for the Christmas market for pin money, and this spring eighteen fine looking turkey chicks were hatched and the old Mother Turkey certainly was proud leading them about. So was the farmer's wife with visions of good marketing of Christmas turkeys. Then misfortune darkened the door of the farmhouse. The farmer's wife fell ill and her poultry began to feel neglect. The old Mother Turkey proudly watching the active antics of the turkey chicks, evidently sensed that something was wrong for the feed failed to come on time and there was absence of a familiar face. So old Mrs. Turkey decided to do something about it, and she did. She led her little army away from the farmhouse, away down to the bottom of the field, along the creek, under the bridge—and that was the last seen of Mrs. Turkey and the brood of eighteen chirking, cheerful chicks. That was a severe blow to the farmer's wife but after a prolonged illness she recovered and remembered her plans about the house and poultry runs. Not long after she heard a great clucking in the yard and ran out to be confronted with an amazing spectacle. There was old Mother Turkey strutting around as resident as Billy be-damned and with her were eighteen good sized turkeys, fat as butter and as cocky as they make 'em. The occasion was one of great interest while the turkeys seemed to sense for they clucked madly and gobble, gobble, gobbled all over the place—while the farmer's wife was shaken with emotion, betwixt laughter and tears, and could hardly believe her eyes. The old turkey mother came back and brought her chicks with her, and the only explanation that could be deduced was that she took her brood to the swamp where they lived wild on grasshoppers and other things that the swamp afforded and when cold weather came back they returned to the old barnyard. See you, "Truth is stranger than fiction" and this little turkey story is good truth, Believe it or Not, Bob Ripley.

THIS IS CHEESE WEEK IN BELLEVILLE and the presence here of so many visitors interested in the cheese manufacturing industry draws attention to the importance of this industry as affecting the prosperity of the city of Belleville and district, the dollars earned through the cheese industry spreading over more ground and affecting beneficially more people than any other industry is capable of. Belleville welcomes the delegates to the convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association and all members of their families who accompany them. BELLEVILLE ESPLANADE HAS GOT NO FORRADER since enough voters voted against the proposal to kill it, temporarily, and postpone the improvement several years until it will probably cost double what it would have in the beginning when property owners were willing to give their property free of charge for the project.

Touring Spanish Priest Refutes "Apostate" Rumor

Sitento que lo que hacen los marxistas españoles con los católicos españoles, la culpa no es de la Iglesia. La culpa es de los católicos españoles que hacen el juego a los marxistas.

Firma

By J. F. C. WRIGHT

Saskatoon, Sask.—"I feel sorry that those of my own faith are so misinformed concerning the Spanish situation . . ." With these words, written in Spanish, Father Luis Sarasola, Franciscan priest travelling this continent with the Spanish government spokesmen, began a statement in which he declared "ridiculous" innuendoes that he is a hostage of the Madrid authorities and an apostate. A translation of the statement appears ABOVE. A translation is BELOW.

To investigate "held as hostage" rumors and "apostate" charges emanating from Montreal and elsewhere, I met Father Sarasola on his train en route to Saskatoon.

Smilingly he accepted my invitation to come with me to a downtown restaurant where, in the presence of Peter C. Makaroff, K.C., prominent Saskatoon lawyer who flew to Halifax and stopped Padre P. Vergin's deportation to Russia—and W. C. Gitzula, Elite Cafe proprietor, he wrote this statement, translated by A. D. Thiessen, M.A., of the public library here:

"I feel sorry that those of my own faith are so misinformed concerning the Spanish situation, and my own standing within the church. In regard to the situation in Spain, I would recommend them to read Foreign Affairs of the month of October, and speeches of the great Catholic leaders as Cesorio Gallardo and Father Lobo, a Spanish Jesuit priest, who speak and feel as I do. These speeches have been published in the Journal of National Geneva.

"In reference to my own case I do hereby once and forever that reports appearing in the Canadian and United States press are absolutely incorrect. These reports are being circulated principally by those who are not with the true situation in Spain to be known. It is also ridiculous and stupid to assert I am anyone's prisoner.

(Signed) "P. Luis De Sarasola"

"I hope the press of this continent will give to my statement at least as much prominence as has been given to those unfortunate innuendoes," said Father Sarasola as we drove to the waiting train. "It is sufficiently sad to have one's country invaded by barbarian hordes and foreign warplanes without these insidious attempts to poison with false propaganda the minds of men and women of one's own faith."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 2nd, 1916.

Major Southby of the 254th Battalion, and his family have taken up residence in Miss Wills' house on Church street.

Mr. William Cornelius of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in the city.

Mr. T. C. Thompson has returned after a business trip to Montreal.

Mr. J. L. Tickell is in Toronto on business.

Mr. R. H. Lawson of Toronto is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. L. Cassidy, Yeomans street.

The following names were made last evening by members of the Belleville Rifle Club: R. Hall 100, H. Sneyd 97, G. D. Gratton 97, A. R. Symons 96, J. Donch 96, J. S. Peck 96, C. J. Wills 95, M. Wright 94, C. J. Symons 94, M. Dafoe 93, A. Woodley 90.

30 YEARS AGO

December 2nd, 1906

Mr. R. H. Simpson of Campbellford was a visitor in the city today.

Winter is here, all right, all right. The snow and ice is much more like Christmas. Business should improve now.

Mrs. Isaac Hall of Deseronto is visiting Mrs. Fred Holmes, Canniffon Road.

Mr. J. Barrows is spending a few days at Toronto.

Mr. Claude Wallace, who has been in Manitoba for six months, has returned to his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Stafford of Redcreville have come to the city to reside during the winter.

40 YEARS AGO

December 2, 1896.

Mr. Arthur R. Walbridge, a Belleville boy now located in New York City and a member of the staff of the Commercial Advertiser, was recently elected to the office of corresponding secretary of the New York Press Club of which he has been a member for only one year. We extend our congratulations to Mr. Walbridge.

At a meeting of the official board of Bridge Street Methodist Church the following officers were elected: Stewards, Messrs. T. W. Gibson, James A. Conger, C. F. Bolton, William Johnson, Andrew Koon, Henry Pringle and James Wallace; recording steward, Mr. John Johnson; treasurer of the Missionary Society, Mr. T. S. Clark.

The banks of the board was extended to the following ladies for their services as collectors for the Missionary Society: Miss Sawyer, Mrs. M. R. Bridle, Mrs. William Johnson, Miss J. B. Flint, Mrs. Hollinshead and Mrs. H. J. Gronlo.

Dec. 2nd, 1886.

Yesterday as Clayton Cobb, a young boy, was sliding with a sleigh upon the ice in the cove north of Ewick's Island, he suddenly broke through. The ice was considered safe at the east end of the cove, but the boy, not noticing, had got well toward the west end of the island and upon which he had formed only the night before. It was not sufficiently strong to hold his weight and let him into the water. He cried lustily for help and was heard by Mr. J. F. Thompson. At first she could not locate the sound, but finally ascertained its source and went to the rescue. She secured a piece of board from a fence and creeping along upon the new ice finally got close enough to reach the boy and help him out. He was about twenty yards from the shore and in deep water. The rescue showed great pluck. Messrs. James Gordon, D. P. Hollon and Walter Alford came up shortly afterwards, having been attracted by the cries for help. They carried the little fellow to Mr. Thompson's house, which was near by. Having been in the water about ten minutes he was benumbed by the cold. He was put to bed and cared for by Mrs. Thompson. This morning he was quite recovered from the effects of being in the cold water. Those who saw the thin ice upon which Mrs. Thompson ventured speak highly of her benvolent and heroic act.

MANY PENALTIES GOES WITH PLAN

"Bram Knuckle" Policy in Germany Outlined by Goering

Berlin, Dec. 2 (AP)—The "brass knuckle" policy of Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering's four-year plan for the rehabilitation of Germany was implemented today by a series of far-reaching laws and drastic penalties.

"The death penalty for economic sabotage" and a law for the "accelerated exploitation of Germany's mineral resources" were regarded the most important of the startling decrees promulgated by the Cabinet yesterday.

The Cabinet acted swiftly with Chancellor Hitler presiding. Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, said the action was taken before looked doors after Hitler had been given a "comprehensive review of the financial situation of Germany."

The "economic sabotage" law, decreeing death for German who "unscrupulously" hoard wealth abroad and "damage the German economy," strengthened the edict demanding deposit with the Government of German-held foreign securities.

Register All Property

It also filled a gap in the recent decree making it compulsory to register all property owned abroad by German which only announced heavy punishment for violations.

Yesterday's decree became a new threat against violators of the recent injunctions which put within reach of the Government the 1,500,000,000 and 2,000,000,000 marks ($600,000,000 to $800,000,000). These would be converted into foreign currencies should the necessity arise.

The other laws decreed were:

1. Incorporation of every German boy and girl without exception in the Hitler Youth Movement to be trained "physically, spiritually and morally."

2. Accelerated exploitation of mineral resources "even when owners are unwilling or not in a position" to undertake the production.

3. Standardization of real property taxes throughout the Reich.

4. Future administration of the Berlin municipality by a state official.

5. Conversion of the winter relief organization into a state foundation headed by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels.

We have certainly been gratified at the nice comments the early shoppers have made about our Gift Displays.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

PREMIER HEPBURN

Benefiting by Policies

"We are benefiting by the Liberal policies", the Premier declared, after drawing what he termed a "strong line of demarcation between the Liberal and Conservative parties". "During the years between 1920 and 1935 we had ten Conservative policies and under them the provincial debt increased many millions dollars. Irads fell off and we had one million on relief. When we went into power, we were forced to spend nearly twenty-one millions for relief purposes during our first fiscal year. This year our relief bill will be in the vicinity of twelve million dollars."

Referring to the trade agreements with the United States the Premier said with a smile "I understand I am speaking in a Tory stronghold, but years ago, in 1911 to be exact, you had cheese, wood and other products to sell. Your merchants were to the south of you; and you voted against the reciprocity plan. And yet twenty-five years later, Bennett had his emissary in Washington trying to open trade and establish agreements".

Deploring conditions of the province at the time he assumed office the Premier stated that the debt was 610 millions of dollars and the province had an overdraft of some 66 millions, hence the total debt was $676,000,000.

Attacking the former system of selling governmental bond issues, the speaker said "A little while ago I had a problem selling a two million dollar bond issue". They became, in the same month, two issues they gathered around them some advisers and it cost the province $60,000 for this advice. They fixed the rate of interest at 5 per cent, and offered it at a discount of 96. Then they sat back, watched the market go up and then bonded. Now we have to raise over three millions in taxation to pay for that interest."

Sold Own Bonds

"I told a group of bankers in no uncertain terms", continued the Premier "that we were opening Provincial banks. We did and sold the bonds, saving the $1,330,000 a year in interest. Now claims that we are going to borrow for road expenditures, but when you think we had to pay over eight millions in exchange on the debt incurred by the Henry Government, then the amount you are assessed for roads is indeed a small one."

Speaking of the 10 per cent assessment, the Premier said that "prior to the last election, the Henry Government had promised to cost you $60,000, but from the day it brought down the bill to now, not a single dollar has been assessed against Kent, Lincoln County for roads. True, $158,000 has been charged against you for the cost of highways, but in the Henry regime, but it has been spread over a period of years.

"We have led the fight for lower rates and have attained our objective and have decreased the purchasing power of the government by 13 per cent by fighting for lower rates. Now we have a well rounded completed. The municipal accounts are seeking to oust the government by injecting another issue into the political field.

Defending reputation of the Hydro corporation, the Premier charged "the conclusions were made before the facts were found" and referred to several things. The rates had been increased so that we were powerless. We had no money to pay for the large amount due last year. We found we had agreed to pay any tax placed upon the power imported from Quebec and we found, that payment was to be made in United States funds. I passed a bill cancelling these agreements and the result is that this year Hydro is operating at a profit. And as soon as we are able we are going to pass these profits on to the ratepayers. The province cited firms, which are now flourishing because of reduced rates. Under the old regime industry was threatened, production was slowed up and men were thrown out of work and placed on relief. But this situation was overcome through cancellation of the Hydro contracts.

Going to Save Province Claim

"They say there will be an appeal to the Privy Council", continued the Premier, "but I am not concerned about that. What we have in mind is the welfare of the people of Ontario. We are going to serve them."

"If Howe restores those contracts" warned Mr. Hepburn "you will have to pay ten millions a year for untried power and there will be no way now from which to draw. He speaks of reducing the royalties, but republication is a hard word. It means taking away a form of value and not paying for it. Will the money barons have their power plants, their forests and other things, but the only thing they haven't got is a stranglehold on the people of Ontario, and they will never get that as long as I am the Premier of Ontario."

Defending his investigation of succession duties, Premier stated that during the last twenty-one months his government has collected over twenty-one millions in succession duties. Only last week an estate paid 480,000 in these duties, he said, "and next week we are to receive about a million dollars from another estate. It was the policy of my government to make a searching inquiry of the succession duties and to enforce a bitter struggle was collected, $600,000, and then we asked Parliament to give the Treasurer power to investigate where fraud was suspected. The last ten years the Succession Duties Office has been deprived of ten million dollars. I say the province of Ontario has been deprived of forty million dollars this way, which it will take 200 or three years to collect."

MUSICAL PROGRAM — EVERYBODY WELCOME

Deals With Forests

Referring to the Lands and Forests Department, the speaker stated that due to maladministration the revenue had fallen so low that it was costing the people money to own their lands and forests. He found in that great empire of the North, that millions of acres had been given away to friends of the former government with the result, that the great empire was tied up in the hands of the speculators. He introduced a bill in the House giving the Lands and Forests Department the right to recover these acres, and since that measure came into effect we have got back over 56 million acres. With the former policy being one of utter stagnation we were forced to stand by and see American buyers go to Europe to purchase their pulp. But with our change of policy this year we have made an agreement for 600,000 cords of pulp and next year we expect to reach a million. We are employing twelve thousand. We have adjusted the rates and assisted the pulp mills.

"The trouble with the 'Tories' said the Premier, "is that they want to keep the people in darkness. We want to keep them enlightened, and as long as people are intelligent, there will never be another Tory government elected in Canada."

Attacking Col. Drew's regime as Securities Commissioner, the Premier quoted a Conservative newspaper, which stated that Drew Commissioner's office had never published a report. This was true at the time, but no responsible man will agree with that today," asserted Mr. Hepburn. Drew says the present Commissioner Godfrey is carrying on Drew's same regulations, but these regulations were not enforced by the old regime, Mr. Hepburn claimed.

Turning to mining developments in the north, the speaker said that "Godfrey had recognized the mining industry and had put a stop to the vendors sale of shares until the mine was operating." "It is the best step yet toward mining development, and has stopped the racketeering and fraudulent sales than anything else."

Col. Drew Challenged

The Premier issued a challenge to Col. Drew to name any prominent mining man who would endorse the Drew administration of the Commissioners office.

"I challenge Drew," he said "to have the Hon. Charles McCrea, former Minister of Mines, and one who stands as high as anyone in the mining world, make a statement to the effect, that better administration is not being given by the present Commissioner."

Touching but briefly on the separate school question, Premier Hepburn said he was "amazed and dumbfounded to find the Tories were making it the only issue in the riding. "No matter how any government feels it cannot wipe out separate schools," he said. Citing cases in other towns and cities in Ontario, he said that while the issue appears to be clear in other centres it appears to be confused in East Hastings. He claimed it to be a city problem and not a rural one. "After the splendid record of the present government after the abuse I have been subjected to, don't you think you should give it a fair trial; to wait its application and then to judge its effect and then the people are dissatisfied they will have the opportunity to vote for a new government and place in power Mr. Howe, if he will still Tory leader, who has pledged repeal of the act?" asked Mr. Hepburn. He mentioned the fact that Mr. W. A. Fraser had dealt with the separate school question before them.

"I do not need this riding," said the speaker in appealing for the support of the electors for Dr. Boyce. "I can give you just as good government with no men as with 71. I know you will use your good judgment and in this strong Conservative riding will give Dr. Boyce the biggest majority ever rolled up in Ontario."

In a vigorous defence of the separate school bill, Mr. W. A. Fraser, M.P., Northumberland, quoted statistics of the town of Trenton as the main base of his arguments. "In the town of Trenton," he said, "the public school assessment is $3,134,184, the separate school assessment is $443,885 and the high school assessment which is of both denominations is $2,577,269. As mayor of the town for eight years I have arrangements with both boards that the rate for school purposes would always remain the same for both schools. Both schools pay the same rate of 11.8 mills on the dollar. Public schools take care of 930 pupils while the separate school has 221, therefore the cost of educating a pupil in the separate school is $5.50 less than the public school with no added liability assumed by the municipality."

Fraser Defends Issue.

"Incorporated companies located within the municipalities receive the benefits of services paid by Catholic ratepayers and I submit that separate schools have the right to receive their proportional share of the companies' taxes."

Referring to East Hastings the speaker said Mr. Howe's and Mr. Drew had referred to the division of taxes for gasoline stations, banks, railways, etc. This is misrepresentation, because there are no separate schools in existence and consequently all the school taxes levied by the different municipalities in East Hastings with the exception of Trenton go to the maintenance of public schools. To arm the whole case up," continued Mr. Fraser, "the Catholics through their ownership of shares in incorporated companies are going to pay for their own schools instead of these schools being maintained as previously out of the consolidated revenue of the province."

Is this then a hideous Hepburn crime? This is the issue that Drew and Howe now claim is the question in this by-election. As I understand it, Catholics and Protestants are Christians alike; worship the same God and can any fair-minded person claim any unfairness in this act? Would any Christian deny his brother Christian the same right that he retains for himself? Does any Christian wish to retain anything that legally and morally belongs to another Christian? This is the question you must decide. On the other hand we are all citizens of Canada. If there is one thing of importance it is national unity. Mr. Drew in a speech mentioned that the French Canadians were a conquered race, but he apparently forgot that in the years of 1914-18 they stood shoulder to shoulder, fought and spilled their blood with good It ill behooves Mr. Drew to make such statements."

Emotional Appeal Is Charged.

"There has been enough abuse and tirade in this election campaign already," continued the speaker, "without me indulging in any, but in my opinion any public man who goes up and down the county inciting feelings between the French Canadians is doing a damage which some day he will be sorry for. He is not worthy of your support."

"It is an old Tory trick, when everything else fails to forget the real reason and argument to appeal to the emotions of the people. In 1911, they waved the flag, talked about annexation to Canada by the U.S.A., "no truck or trade with the Yankees", to defeat the Reciprocity agreement with the U. S. It has taken us 25 years to outlive the harm that was done in 1911. Only after Mr. King came in office in 1935 did we get, in an agreement with the U. S. a small measure of the benefit that the people voted against in 1911. The Reciprocity agreement in a short eleven months million of dollars of increased benefit for the Canadian farmer, lumberman and other basic producers.

"At this time I ask you to consider the situation from a practical business viewpoint. Do not be swept any argument to create the slightest feeling between yourself and your neighbor with whom you have lived on the friendliest terms for years. Do not allow unsupposed and economic question to cloud the issue of good government in the province of Ontario. Do not permit personalities to interfere with your judgment of the administration in the province of Ontario."

Dr. Boyce, the Liberal candidate spoke very briefly as he had engagements to attend at other Liberal meetings during the course of the evening. He appealed to the gathering for their support and stated the splendid record of the present administration. He asked for support in view of his fine record as a public servant in the village of Deseronto, the last election was largely made as their candidate on Dec. 8th.

LEAFS TOPPLE MAROONS INTO CELLAR HOLE

H. Jackson in Here Role as Leafs Win 2-1 Over Montreal

With Harvey Jackson in the leading scoring role, the Toronto Maple Leafs left the Montreal Maroons stranded lonesome and alone in the cellar position of the Canadian section of the N.H.L. after defeating the floundering Maroons 2 to 1 at the Montreal Forum last night. The game was marked with speed as the Maroons staged a furious attempt to overcome the Leafs who always headed the parade.

Jackson put the Leafs well to the fore within two minutes of starting time and in the middle stanza, Jackson added another on a solo effort. The third goal being the result of a pass from Drillon. A three man combination play gave the cellar-position Maroons their only counter, late in the second period, as Cain scored. The game was marked with fistic outbreaks with Ward and Thoms being the aggressors in a fight, that saw many of the players from both squads tangle. The two main ministers received major penalties for their misdeeds, however it was the major-threat tossed over the boards by Connie Smythe, the veteran Toronto winger being a threat in the styles of the Maroons on each individual effort. Broda starred in the nets for the Leafs also.

BUCKO McDONALD TO WED CANADIAN

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 2 (CP)—Bucko McDonald, veteran defenceman with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, announced last night he would marry Miss Lorna Lang, 23, of Sunderidge, Ont., Dec. 21. Miss Lang is a daughter of Willard Lang, former Canadian lacrosse star and now a director in the Provincial Sound district town.

The wedding will take place in the Lang home while the Wings enjoy a five-day layoff after a game with Boston Dec. 20, the team announced engaged last summer.

McDonald explained he met Miss Lang five years ago when he accepted an invitation from the girl's father to go to Sunderidge to teach lacrosse. He gave Lang credit for teaching him hockey and said he had never been on skates before going to Sunderidge.

COACH INELIGIBLE

ANY BETTER SCORERS THAN THESE?

Norman Schoen, star halfback of Baldwin-Wallace college, Berea, O., is the continent's leading point scorer as far as the grid experts can ascertain from records in organized football. Schoen collected 117 points of his team's total of 330 during the playing season. Anyone got any nominations for higher scoring?

REGINA MAY NOT COME EASTWARD

Alberta Union Against West Putting Weak Team on Field

Winnipeg, Dec. 2 (CP)—President Stan Pepler of the Western Canada Rugby Football Union today found his solution to the problem of western representation in the Dominion grid final apparently unsatisfactory to at least some of the examiners and Regina Roughriders' Grey Cup hopes were dimmed in consequence.

Pepler yesterday received protests from Alberta governors of the union, A. W. Matthews, Edmonton, and A. M. Manuith, Calgary, contending the union should withdraw from the national final rather than permit Roughriders to travel east with a team weakened by ineligibility, of five regular players.

As a result, Pepler telegraphed the nine governors as follows: "Alberta governors request this union withdraw challenge for Grey Cup in view of fact Regina unable to compete at full strength. Wire your decision."

Result of the vote was expected some time today. Meanwhile, in Regina, Coach Dean Griffing called for a resumption of daily drills in preparation for the eastern invasion. Griffing, Fred Ray, Jim Lander, Louis Chunich and Frits Fafaren are the players ineligible under the Canadian Rugby Union's residence rule.

Riders won the western title by defeating the 1935 Dominion champions, Winnipeg, in the semi-final and Calgary Bronks in the final. They maintained they would not play in the national final without their full team and persistence of C. J. Taylor notified Pepler to that effect last week.

Then, after, W.C.R.F.U. governors had approved substitution of Winnipeg as championship finalists, the Roughrider executive overruled Taylor and announced Riders would play without the five ineligibles.

Pepler announced Sunday he believed it was Regina's privilege as western champions to participate in the final and they would go east with the union's sanction. This was the decision protested by the Alberta governors.

PETES PLAY ST. MIKES

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—St. Michael's College and Peterborough Collegiate will meet Friday in Peterborough to decide the entrant in provincial interscholastic football finals, it was announced last night by Harold Bailey, secretary of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

CINCINNATI REDS OFFER $200,000 FOR DIZZY DEAN

Cards Ask For Low Riggs or Paul Derringer in Exchange

THREE WAY DEAL ON

Cubs Purchase Smart Outfielder From San Francisco

Dizzy Dean definitely was on the market and several clubs, outside and mixed so far by the swashbuckling Cincinnati Reds who have made a flat offer of $200,000 in cash for his contract, were hot in pursuit of the great Cardinal pitching star.

Behind the Reds came the New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Pirates with the Brooklyn Dodgers reported in the market for a backup man as a result of a Dean deal—if made to the right parties.

"Yes," we have offered $200,000 flat cash for Dizzy," admitted Warren Giles, new general manager of the Reds who so far hasn't learned the old magnate game of deny and rebuff persistent baseball writers. "We want Dix and $200,000 is as far as I think we will or can go."

Branch Rickey, general manager of the Cardinals and the club's big boss, Sam Breadon, denied the Cards were ready to ship the eccentric and loquacious right hander anywhere but persisted his club wanted players, not cash.

Only One Hitch.

No verification was available but those in the know said the only hitch in the big Dean-to-Cincinnati deal was one player—third baseman Lew Riggs or pitcher Paul Derringer.

Brooklyn was reported interested in the Dean proposition, from East Coast dispatches yesterday for three utility players and cash. The Cub players involved were outfielder Johnny Cull and first baseman Gene Lillard and Ethe Witter, a farm hand from the Portsmouth of the Piedmont League.

The American Association and International League voted to abolish their "little world series" but baseball's appetite for too much competition was shown from the world series were given as the reasons for the series abandonment.

DEAN ON THE BLOCK

Sell him? Sure St. Louis will sell Dizzy Dean—at a price. And at that Sam Breadon is asking to part with the Cardinal pitching ace is $175,000 and seven players. That's what Breadon demanded from Pittsburg Pirates, the players being Arky Vaughan, shortstop; Tom Padden, catcher; Woody Jensen, outfielder; Vance Lavagetto, second baseman, and three others. And Pie Traynor, Pirate manager, says he considers the deal "still on the fire."

HOCKEY'S "BIG SEVEN"

Harvey "Busher" Jackson scored two goals for Toronto Maple Leafs against Maroons last night and moved into a five-way tie for sixth place among the National Hockey League scoring leaders with seven points.

The Way Ward's assist gave the Maroon forward a place alongside Jackson, Earl Robinson of Montreal, Marty Barry of Detroit, and Neil Colville of Rangers. Bob Gracie's assist gave him a second place tie with Toronto's Nick Metz. Elsewhere the standing was unchanged.

By Ken-Calling

The local "rugby knockers" are right in the midst of the most torrid part of their season these days despite the frigid weather conditions on the outside. Although one would naturally be of the opinion that rugby should partake mournfully be predominated by the stronger (?) set, figures, not only in Belleville bowling circles, but elsewhere, prove to the contrary. Take for instance some of the records at the Recreation alleys this week, where we find the fair sex right up with, and in some cases a little in advance to their male contemporaries. Here's a case of figures, that don't lie. At the Recreation alleys we find Florence Walden and Marion Mondville well up with any of the male bowlers this year in the matter of high scores. Miss Walden bowled a 336 single score and a three string of 815. Mrs. Mondville rolled 297 for a single game. Now for some of the male better scores. Dan Sirois, the Belleville ace plins around one night for 350 as Charley Hepworth rolled ten over for an 812 score, both being three strings. Pat Drummy's is the highest for the month's single thus far this season, however.

The fair sex bowlers are faring quite as well at the C.M.C.A. alleys also, but nine years ago today in Paris, Ontario, Miss Mildred Bowsfield made in the bowling game. It was not at five pins, as is the case in Belleville, but ten pins where the large ball, weighing sufficient to anchor a battleship, is used, and as the medium of attack upon the maples. Miss Bowsfield, amateur champion, wanted no part of a lady bowler, but finally consented to take on the male competition. That's where he made his first and only mistake in the alleys. The novice, Mrs. McCutcheon cracked the maples for 1,000 pins, and when it was all that night, the lady ever made by a woman when in competition against a man. Hunny's score was 696.

Since that memorable night plus years ago the Paris maples have established the following records at ten plus. She has rolled nine per cent games of 300, ten games of 299 and nearly 100 over 285. She has been a regular bowler to ever roll 300 over once and had an average of 240 when competing during the past four years ago. Her crowning record is the fact she has never been below 201 in 1940 games during eight years of touring. Mrs. Mondville will be with the ladies in pin bowling to girls throughout the United States under the auspices of the Belleville newspaper. She is assisted in her teachings by her daughter, who also is a proficient bowler. Now you mainly bowlers, get into conversation some of the records Leo Barrett showed us last night.

Incidentally if you have any reason to doubt Mrs. McCutcheon's ability on the alleys, there is a rolling offer of something like $5,000 that she can beat any bowler in Belleville, and on a registered bowling alley on this continent. Mrs. McCutcheon with the cold water sprinkler can and lay your bets.

Twenty-four hours more of rub a freezing weather and the Belleville arena will likely see the season's initial skating. We could permit skating on Thursday night and almost be sure of a perfect sheet of ice, but we deem it more advisable to get as much ice made as possible in case of a short mild spell, stated Manager George Gay today when questioned as to when the arena would be open to the public for skating. In all probability Friday night will see the grand opening, however. At present they have a flaring and smiling sheet of ice at the arena, but as a precautionary move no skating will be permitted until Friday at the earliest. Incidentally if the weather conditions remain satisfactory efforts to have a hockey game sometime next week are also on tap for the fans.

No authentic information has been suggested as to just what grouping the O.H.A. may place the Belleville Bearcats in for the coming season. Manager Thomas entered his charges in "B" series and was understand Spaulding Leader has also requested his K.C.A.V. "Flyers" be lowered from a class "A" rating to the Intermediate "B" class also. With Trenton having entered an intermediate "B" team and Peterborough looking for a grouping most anything may happen. There was some pre-season talk of Kingston starting in the O.H.A., but Art Peterson, vice-President of the O.H.A. and President of the Kingston City League when it was in league worthy of mention, informs us that he little chance of Kingston City sponsoring an intermediate team this year. Where group will doubtless center around Cobalt, Newmarket and Port Hope will doubtless function, with whom the Redmen of Belleville will be grouped and the "Flyers" will be grouped with remain a mystery until following the sub committee meeting of the O.H.A. on Sunday. Full details relative to the O.H.A. closed last night will likely be announced.

Squadron Leader Lawrence is far from stinted within set-up in the City League. Flight Lieut. Vi is a far to rival for practice games. Woodall was also a star behind the Belleville team, there weren't enough elsewhere at the game to go by flights. Incidentally an exhibition game between the Belleville and town of Redmen would be in order to usher in the coming hockey season, we'd suggest.

The Quinte Skatic Club's new rink is fast taking form and is expected to be ready for December and Queen Streets. The Quinte Skating Club has extra membership at 180 this season, and that quota has nearly been reached. Skating is popular in Belleville competition fancy and figure skaters from Belleville and district have practically been compiled. Stan Wilbur informs us that the club has proven skaters will need no tuitors for the local meet and fig-tuitors for the local meet and figures over the designed week ends periods.

The Y.M.C.A. house basketball league will operate at Belleville this fall with four clubs already entered and explained. Gerry Cole, Mickey Whitelaw and Wickerson. We fail to see where the cage game has advanced to such a degree as to defy the warm surroundings of the Y gym the cold courts of the shooters. Games will be played every Wednesday night, however.

ATTENTION FARMERS!

We want to meet a limited number of experienced farmers who would like to increase their income by several hundred dollars annually growing a fancy variety of Red Raspberry. The berries may be sold on your local markets or shipped to outside wholesale dealers recommended by us. The variety to be grown is very large and showy and generally commands a good premium over ordinary berries. Throughout the colder sections of Ontario where proper care and cultivation is given yields in every case exceed 2,000 quarts per acre.

Heavy 2-year-old plants, Government Certified, will be furnished for spring planting, 1937, on very easy terms.

If you own your farm and your credit standing good, write Box "D" Ontario Intelligencer, on or before December 7, and a personal visit will be made to your home and the whole business from growing to marketing will be explained in detail. If you want a cash crop sideline of the very highest nature do not overlook this opportunity.

AT THE BELLE

"Anthony Adverse"

The long awaited Warner Bros. production of "Anthony Adverse" filmed from Hervey Allen's epic-pean noel, which boasts of 3,000,000 readers, comes to the Belle Theatre today. (Wednesday), for three days, matinee daily, with Fredric March in the stellar role and lovely Olivia di Havilland playing opposite him in the feminine lead.

In its panoramic story sweep through five countries and three continents, the magnitude of its 131 sets, the picturesqueness of its backgrounds, the gigantic scale on which it was produced and the vast number of talented players in its cast, "Anthony Adverse" surpasses any picture filmed by Warner Bros. and is said by those who have seen the preview to be the most pretentious piece of entertainment ever attempted in Hollywood.

The novel, which took Hervey Allen four years to write, was finally whipped into a finished screen form after more than two years of arduous labor on the part of nearly 1500 technicians. In addition, more than 2,500 players who portray the many characters seen in the film.

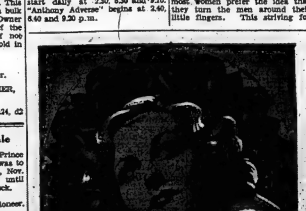
The cast is a tremendous one in size and remarkable for the number of talented players, there being ninety-eight speaking parts, with 2,550 bit players and extras appearing. Besides March and Miss di Havilland, some of the more important players include Edmund Gwenn, Claude Rains, Anita Louise, Louis Hayward, Gale Sondergaard, Steffie Duna, Billy March, Donald Woods, Akim Tamiroff, Ralph Morgan, Henry O'Neill, Pedro De Cordoba, George Et Stone and Zeta Alberni.

The management request that you please be early; performances start daily at 2.30, 6.45 and 9.10. "Anthony Adverse" begins at 2.40, 6.40 and 9.20 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The President's Mystery" and "The Man I Marry"

The Capitol presents another of our already outstanding double bill smash shows with "The President's Mystery" as 1st-no. 1 and of 2nd No. 2 "The Man I Marry" with a glamorous new star in stellar role.



One of the most daring screen plays this writer has seen, presenting the decidedly timely problem of current economic life, which is now playing the Capitol theatre, "The President's Mystery," a film version of the famous Liberty Magazine story suggested by President Roosevelt himself, Henry Wilcoxon, Betty Furness, Sidney Blackmer and Evelyn Brent played the leading roles in a picture notable for its excellent and vivid performances.

Wilcoxon was seen in a role so different from any he has previously played that the picture gave a decidedly fresh interest and revealed him as a versatile actor. Tied as it is with current economic problems of the country, "The President's Mystery" not only should be seen by every American but will go down in the annals of screen history as one of the most provocative ever presented.

"The President's Mystery" is a story of an average American town in which the people become desperate through unemployment. How they organize a secret movement to reopen a closed factory and provide their families with food has been made into one of the most powerful and thrilling screen plays. The story, suggested by President Roosevelt himself, was written for Liberty Magazine by such noted authors as Booth Hughes Samuel Hopkins Adams, Anthony Abbot, Rita Weiman, S. K. Lauren Dunn, and John Erskine.

Added Attraction

Most men like to feel that the world turns around them and most women prefer the idea that they turn the men around their little fingers. This stirring for mastery between men and women is the keynote of the romantic comedy, "The Man I Marry" which opens today at the Capitol theatre, starring Doris Nolan as hit No. 2. In the initial role, Doris Nolan runs away from a wedding with a man she dislikes. Then she encounters, in her uncle's country house, a handsome young playwright in the person of Michael Whalen, who is, trying to revise a play. Linda is a theatrical producer and his niece has been reading plays for him.

When the lady induces her relative to put on the scrip written by her and conceals her identity as the playwright to froth at the mouth, syn and sars. Then begins the struggle between the girl and the man she gain superiority. The fellow is a woman hater who can rate 48 hours a day. Then the girl steps in disguise.

Words fly back and forth. Fighting words, challenging words, inviting words, romantic words—and through it all the audience is kept in a hilarious uproar. The play scores a hit. "The girl who ran away from one wedding scores a direct hit on the man she runs away from all women.

A complete show starts at 6.40 with first show at 7.10 and doors open at 6.30.

INTER-AMERICAN MEET SUCCESS

Presidents Roosevelt And Justo Predict Fine Future

Buenos Aires, Dec. 2 (AP)—The Inter-American Peace Conference, sponsored by President Roosevelt to consolidate western world democracies against aggression for "our mutual safety and mutual good," launched into formal organization today.

They predicted Mr. Roosevelt and President Agustin P. Justo of Argentina had "set the assembly firmly on the path to success."

"The opening was magnificent and I am optimistic of the conference's results," declared Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentine Foreign Minister and president of the conference meeting.

Of prime importance, the delegates said, was President Roosevelt's combined warning to the old world and appeal to the new.

"We stand shoulder to shoulder," he said, "in the firm determination that others, who, driven by war madness or land hunger, might seek to commit an act of aggression against us, will find this hemisphere wholly prepared to consult together for our mutual safety and our mutual good."

Mr. Roosevelt arrived in Buenos Aires capital this afternoon.

The first official meeting of the conference will be held tomorrow when the steering committee, composed of the chiefs of all delegations, will discuss formal procedure for the forthcoming meetings.

The draft of a proposal to establish an Inter-American Court of Justice, which all the start may be limited to Central America, was completed last night at a meeting of several Central American delegates.

Impressions of these countries in a broadcast last night.

Regarding his trip to Canada, de Tezan said he was struck notably by the "atmosphere of amenity, cordiality and labor on all sides and the devotion to the cause of recovery."

He explained he extended pressing invitations for Canada to participate in the Paris Exposition next year.

"The welcome extended at Montreal and Ottawa to a representative of the French Government was particularly cordial," he said.

Letters to the Editor

"Malden, Ontario,
"December 1st., 1936.

"To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer,
"Belleville, Ontario.

"Dear Sir:—

Last night the Premier of Ontario made his Hydro-Radial speech. Please let me admit that I was, officially as an Ontario resident, delighted to hear Mr. Wilfrid Hamilton Campbell was of a high order. The playing of the orchestra was also very fine and pleasing. Honourable Mr. Hepburn himself addressed several audiences which were considerably above the average grade of humor in which politicians usually indulge, so to think it necessary to exhaust their audiences.

"In fact, in the whole evening there was only one jarring note. That was Mr. Mr. Hepburn's presentation of the main issue of the campaign. Surely the electors of this riding are entitled to expect completeness and accuracy of statement from one who holds the office of Premier in this province. There is definite doubt to hear Mr. Hepburn say: "The school legislation is designed to relieve the real economic situation, namely, the fact that the heavy load of corporations and that in the past there has been no way by which the Separate School could share of the corporation taxes." Has done not the Premier of Ontario to know that this statement is grossly inaccurate? Corporations, like individuals, have had the privilege in the past of paying to the Separate Schools of their choice and in proportion to the holdings of their Catholic shareholders.

"I do not quarrel with the Premier particularly, for the statement that formula for school tax legislation will divert Public School moneys to Separate Schools. His supporters will have to make up this amount in future in their own riding about it. But I charge the Premier with deliberate bad faith in presenting misleading representations of his family of legislation, very well for a certain section of the area error involved in his reasoning.

"The case of the statement that there has been, no way in the past, whereby Separate Schools could receive their just share of corporation taxes, however is in fact a different case. It is difficult to conceive the justification for a person in the position of Premier, possessing his intimate knowledge of the existing law and fact, which has an historic mission to perform in upholding the truth, and, in view of recent events which have taken place in the Toronto morning paper that Mr. Mr. Hepburn are more than ever dependent upon those who would uphold the truth the proud tradition of independence and fair presentation upon which alone a real democracy can be built. I have always considered, and that your good self will concur within this distinguished category and I address this communication appeals a Premier's unfairness in the confidence that you will be good enough to publish this letter correct a serious misrepresentation of a vital issue before the public.

JUMPS TO GROUND FRACTURES ANKLE

Collegiate Student Finds Self Locked Into Building

Horace Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Hall, 230 Charles St., sustained a broken right ankle, while several bones were dislocated in his left foot, after he jumped to the ground from a second storey window at the Belleville Collegiate Institute yesterday afternoon. The lad was found lying on the ground, unable to walk, and was later removed to the surgery of Dr. S. R. McCreary where an x-ray revealed the fractures. The lad had returned to the Collegiate Institute after school hours, to procure a key hook he had previously forgotten. While in the school he found the door locked and secured for the night. Finding himself locked in the building, young Hall opened a second storey window and jumped to the ground where the force of the impact upon the frozen ground caused a fracture of the right ankle and the dislocation of other smaller bones in the left foot.

Nurse Pleads Guilty to Forgery

Hamilton, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP)—A trail of W.S.P. cheques ranging in value from $5 to $1000 which started at Montreal several weeks ago ended in Magistrate's Court today when Margaret Stinson, one time war nurse and friend of the Crown and out, pleaded guilty to 34 charges of forgery and uttering. She was remanded one week for sentence.

NEW FURNITURE STORE OPENED

Lipson Furniture House Opens to The Public With Fine Display of Modern Furniture.

Belleville's business colony was augmented today with the opening of a new furniture store to the Lipson Furniture House as part of the group of stores operated by Lipson, well known business man of Picton. The Belleville store is completely equipped by the Lipson Dry goods and clothing store have been remodelled and transformed into a beautiful and modern business place with large display windows and abundance of light and plenty of room to display goods.

Messrs. I. Cooper and M. Salk are in charge of the new store, both men of much experience in the furniture business, and they report that a large number of people visited the store opening day and business has started off with a briskness that is encouraging.

who have," added Mr. Anderson.

Enforcement Problem

Difficulty of enforcing the proposed minimum wage statement pointed out by one member who cited the various factors which industry would be met with in separate districts. "The difficulties in the past have been so great," he said, "that I cannot thought feasible to have this legislation enforced. If we have to have it did one, but how can you regulate fuel prices, power prices and living conditions in such areas as are to be treated. "It's hard to make a fast plan of this kind.

"Before we are able to set a wage scale we must have control over the cost of living," declared Conservative Mr. J. H. Dudgeon, secretary. "And as long as the power monopolies continue to the people outside our association we are unable to do anything about it. But the government has never recognized our plea as yet as to what shall enter into wages.

Regular Own Business

Mr. L. A. Rehill, former superintendent of the Ontario Government Dairy School pointed out that it was to the benefit of makers to have such legislation enacted to have cheesemen regulate their own. Industry, "Still you do not think you will be unable to help yourself," it was declared.

"We have regimentation of other industries, and wage scales set for the benefit of the whole industry except for the privilege, but the choice makers of cheese in this province is possessing his intimate knowledge in mis-stating the matter that there was an historic mission to perform in upholding the truth, and, in view of recent events which have taken place in the Toronto morning paper that Mr. Mr. Hepburn are more than ever dependent upon those who would uphold the truth the proud tradition of independence and fair presentation upon which alone a real democracy can be built. THOUSANDS AT MADOC mier and Mr. Rowe were in the neighborhood, roads leading to this thriving country town 8 miles east-side of Belleville were clogged with traffic. We know felt in most parts of the provincial constituency overnight, making driving difficult on important highways.

The armouries, where the party leaders will speak tonight, were filled regardless of candidates, were crowded within a few minutes after doors were opened at 12.30. More than 1,000 were seated. Other thousands stood in the aisles and at the back of the hall. Still other hundreds had no chance of gaining admittance.

Formal Announcement.

Formal announcement that candidates in the by-election would be Dr. Harold Wesley Acker, Liberal, and Harold Welsh, Conservative, was to be made at two o'clock by returning officer Clarence Ashley of Madoc. The two medical doctors were nominated by official party committees.

Voting Dec. 9 will be to fill the vacancy in the Ontario legislature caused by the death of James F. Hill, Conservative Wahp.

Tonight's platform meeting of the two leaders, engaged for more than two weeks, has come about through pressure from all parts of the constituency to Madoc. While joint debates at a series of meetings between candidates are held prominent Conservative and Liberal leaders are rare in Ontario.

Contradictory meetings, at which candidates of all parties or their supporters discuss the issues, are frequently held in this province. They are still held in Quebec, too, especially in the rural districts, but not to the same extent as years ago.

Home of Jobn Deheke.

Prince Edward Island is the warmest home of the John Bracken. The provincial election campaigns are almost entirely fought with this handsome Island's leader. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, nomination day proceedings bring together candidates for provincial combat in county constituencies.

By 10 o'clock this morning, Madoc's main street looked as though the fair were coming to town. Most of the early arrivals went direct to the armouries, where they were told the doors would not be opened until 12.30, they gathered in the streets and around the town's only hotel.

Shortly before noon hundreds were lined up outside the armouries and each minute brought more vehicles to town. When scarcely another person could gain entry to the building, the Hecla band struck a lone note outside.

Fifteen minutes after the doors at both ends of the building were opened, Inspector Francis Carden of Belleville detachment of provincial police went to work with a force of officers to keep a clear line open. The crowd prepared to wait an hour and a half for festivities to open.

Candidates Shake Hands.

The opening candidates shook hands on the platform when they were first to arrive. He was followed by Mr. Rowe and Dr. Welsh. Mr. Rowe told reporters he would speak for the full hour and that Col. George P. Jones, provincial secretary, would not speak for the Conservatives. It had been reported Col. Drew would use part of the hour.

Planked by five provincial police officers, Premier Hepburn arrived at 1:55. The officers opened a path to the platform where the candidates shook hands with Mr. Rowe. It was estimated the armouries held 2,000 persons when the meeting began.

At two o'clock, the nominating meeting began. Returning Officer Ashley declared nominations closed and named Dr. Rowe and Dr. Welsh as the only candidates.

On the platform Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Colonel Drew, Liberal Leader Earl Rowe shook hands during the waiting hour. The same platform debates between leaders in Ontario's recent political history took place. Each was to speak an hour, climaxing more than two weeks of long-range flirting by by-election campaign.

Crowd Grows Boisterous

So boisterous was the crowd that Returning Officer Floyd Ashley threatened to adjourn the nomination meeting, which brought hundreds of electors from all parts of the Hastings County constituency to Madoc. Premier Hepburn and Mr. Rowe speak from the same platform.

"If you don't keep quiet we'll call the meeting off," the Returning Officer announced, a few minutes after the crowd's first cheering outbreak died away.

The armouries had been packed since 12.30, when doors were opened. The crowd had waited nearly an hour and a half for the meeting to open.

Dr. Boyce, Liberal candidate, started the speaking. He was allowed 15 minutes by the chairman, the time limit. A crowd of several hundred outside the Armouries heard the speaker over a public address system.

Dr. Boyce paid tribute to the late member for Hastings East, James F. Hill, whose death made the by-election necessary. Mr. Hill was a Conservative whip in the legislature. The Liberal candidate declared his opponent, Dr. Welsh.

"We're the best of friends," he said. "Our county practices action. So far as I'm concerned there will be no personalities in this campaign."

Dr. Boyce said he was a supporter of the government "for reducing interest rates, for collecting succession duties and for outlawing those hellacious Hydro contracts."

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

A factor that has tended to create some discussion has been the holding of stocks by banks for a remain active with good gains scored in many sections, in spite of a hesitant attitude in the market. The publicity that has been given to the chartered banking holdings by both the Federal and Provincial Governments in their budget speeches for investment firms is mainly responsible for maintenance of public interest.

The natural resources of this country are far from being fully developed and the rich mineral sections of Quebec and Ontario, as well as British Columbia abound in materials of practically every kind. The immediate years ahead will be a period of preparation for this country's mining industry, and the public appears to appreciate this fact at present.

The Trader in Barron's points out that Europe, of course, with an estimated investment of $12 billion in American stocks, is the "most important factor in the market. Officers of the Bank of England say that a careful investigation establishes that the leading foreign and English investment trusts have not sold a single share of stock during the present boom and the more recent setback, and that houses actively identified with underwriting will continue to buy liberally. The only investment-trust selling discernible to the market's eye is on the part of one that is going out of business because of the death of its founder, and another that is getting rid of the remainder of its gold-mining holdings.

Canadian Vickers Limited Received Order For Fifteen Ships

Word received from Ottawa today in definite form that the Department of Marine and Fisheries has awarded a contract to Canadian Vickers, Limited, Montreal, for the building of 15 aeroplanes of a heavy type at a cost of $1,260,000. It is anticipated that other contracts will follow.

WALL STREET MARKET

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Specialized groups in today's irregular stock division, scampered hitherto up the trading incline in Friday's abbreviated session. Many of the old-line leaders failed to find a recovery footing.

Rail bonds improved, along with an assortment of speculative issues. Foreign exchanges were a shade firmer in terms of the United States dollar.

Among Canadian stocks, sales were: International Nickel, 2,000; Nickel, fractional losses were recorded in Canada Packers, Preferred, and Canadian Pacific. On the curb, Lake Shore rolled even. Dominion Tobacco, Preferred, and Canadian dollars held unchanged to 1/32 of a point.

U.S. Steel common and preferred were both unchanged to close the session. The crowd prepared to wait an hour and a half for festivities to open.

Indian Princess Who Died at 109 Once Saved Life of Poundmaker

By PHILIP A. NOYKOFF

Crescent Lake, Sask.—Amiliea, 109-year-old Indian princess, who once saved the life of Chief Poundmaker, famous Indian rebel leader in the northwest rebellion, died recently in her squalid tepee on the Crescent Lake Indian reserve, ten miles southeast of the city of Yorkton.

Though blind for latter years, Amiliea had always been an outstanding personality in the Indian community life of this part of the province, and was not only held in high regard by her younger generation of redskins but also by their palefaced brothers.

Her features, dried up and wrinkled with age, were fascinating and magnetic. The wrinkle an impression of some memorable incident in the hectic history of the Canadian west—the savagery and blood lust of tribal warfare, the thrill of the buffalo hunt, the sad disappearance of this noble vanished race which brought about racial extinction among her people, and the struggle against the rumorious advent of the white man and the march of his baleful civilization.

Saved Chief From Buffalo.

She was modest about the time she saved Poundmaker from being trampled to death during a buffalo hunt, and allowed him to hire and attain historic fame as an Indian leader in a cause which he believed was beneficial to his people. It happened far back in her lengthy life when she was but a little Indian maiden in her late 'teens. A great buffalo hunt was in progress. A number of tribes had united to run down several hundred of these shaggy prairie monarchs. While watching the thrilling scene, young Amiliea saw a racing pony stumble and pitch to the ground with its rider. Though the mount scrambled up and sped away to join the chase, the warrior lay still.

Amiliea hurried to the prostrate brave and with the assistance of another squaw managed to drag him to the safety of her father's wigwam. A few minutes later the buffalo herd had wheeled about and thundered back over the ground where the young Indian had lain.

Might Have Changed History.

Had he remained there the entire course of the history of western Canada might have been different. For the fallen warrior was Poundmaker, who, in 1885, made himself the hero of every Indian and Metis in the west by joining forces with the fiery rebel from Manitoba, Louis Riel.

Amiliea tenderly nursed Poundmaker back to health. After he left she was never to see him again, but in later years by moccasin telegram, she heard the tales of his wild exploits: Poundmaker on warpath! . . . Poundmaker wins victory over Col. Otter at Cut Knife Creek! . . . Poundmaker captured!

War drums then ceased to beat.

Passes Doctors.

Some medical authorities are puzzled regarding the reason for Amiliea' longevity. Though she believed in the time honors of her tribe, she had not special privileges and did her own work as other squaws had to. Her daily routine consisted of cooking, cleaning up, washing her husband's, her children's and her own clothing, digging medicinal barks, picking berries, setting traps for small animals, and helping skin them after they were caught.

But despite that food, tepee through which cold drafts often swept, wet floors for a bed, and air heavy with smoke when weather conditions made it impossible to make a fire in the tepee, Amiliea lived on to the glorious old age of 109 years.

A queen in her own right, she carried the secret of her long life to the "happy hunting grounds" with her.

Relief for Henpecked Hubbies!

By JULIUS C. EDELSTEIN

Baltimore, Md.—"Henpecked" Baltimore husbands have started something. They have banded together to form an organization called "Doghouse, Inc.," which "promises" to become a national—perhaps universal—organization.

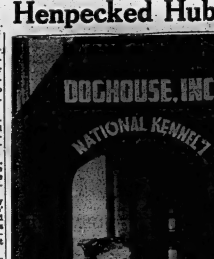
Already there is a branch, "Kennel No. 1," in Washington, D.C., and there are applications for local charters in many other large communities.

According to Alonzo W. Johnson, Baltimore business man and the founder of the organization, there will soon be "kennels" virtually everywhere.

No longer need men, previously consigned to a figurative 'dog-house' by their wives, sulk in poolrooms and neighborhood saloons. The sponsors of the new organization have provided for a clubhouse, entertainment facilities, and, of course, a bar.

"Doghouse Inc." is for all husbands who "seek harmony, consolation, good fellowship, and shelter among their fellows." It is a temporary retreat from the immediate scene of domestic friction and thus becomes entitled to the term of "wife-saver."

Women Barred.



No women are allowed in the Doghouse Kennel, which is the clubhouse. Incoming calls from women are not accepted. Members have the use of the clubhouse at any time of the day or night. The membership card states that the undersigned "has led a dog's life, has been bowled at by his best friends, and now has the privilege of taking shelter at the Doghouse Inc. where he can relax and forget his worries at all times."

At the head of every Doghouse Kennel is an official known as a "Dalie" who is head man. Alonzo Johnson, the national founder and chief, is known as the "Great Dane." The symbol of the organization is the picture of a man wearing a collar and chain, sticking his head out of the front entrance of a dog kennel.

When word first spread through Baltimore that Doghouse Inc. was being formed there was a considerable body of opposition from feminine quarters. Men were being sent to the doghouse on account of Doghouse Inc.

Persuasion, ostensibly applied by walking door-to-door delegations, overcame the main opposition, however, with a collection of fancy arguments, chief among which was the perfect grounch-chamber for aggrieved husbands! An ideal way of knowing where friend hubby could be spare time!

Alonzo W. Johnson of Baltimore, Md., who is the first official pose as "Great Dane" of Doghouse, Inc. He's founded the organization, which is rapidly spreading, for harassed husbands.

Romance of Youth And Girl Turned on Rocks by Officials

Glasgow, Dec. 2.—(AP)— The romances of a youth and a girl-not, however, for each other— were piled on the rocks today after could be taken the Atlantic ocean in his stride.

Stephen Cleary, 19, and Lillian Byrne, 18, crossed the Atlantic at night in quest of their sweethearts; but an uncromantic officialdom turned the course of their true loves into deportation channels.

Stephen and Lillian, it developed in sheriff's court yesterday, felt romantic ties tugging them across the ocean after they respectively loved one— a brother and a sister—were taken back to Glasgow by their family after six years' residence in New York.

So both stowed away aboard the S. S. Cameronia, sailing to their bonnies over the ocean. .

Lillian took over an unoccupied cabin and made the crossing in comfort. She was discovered only after the ship docked on Glasgow and a pair of stewards were discharged for not discovering her on the high seas.

Stephen apparently mingled with the passengers freely throughout the voyage. It was not disclosed where he slept or how he ate.

He managed to get ashore and was located his sweetheart's home, but unfortunately the young lady's mother was not overly enthusiastic about becoming his mother-in-law and had him arrested.

Then the whole story came out and Stephen and Lillian were brought into court together.

The court ordered them deported, Lillian on the next ship, Stephen, the court said, must spend the month of December in jail.

CHAPTER XXIV

Rose came down to find Nesbina almost in convulsions in the kitchen and Jonathan was remonstrating about it in the pantry. Rose scolded her and went to the detested ground to find Sally smoking, perched on a table and Jonathan shaking up the cocktails in a mammoth shaker he had borrowed from the Hyrons' pantry and saying: "I could have lent you Hardy and enjoyed you all this."

How sweet of her, thought Rose, how little faux pudeurs, smooth and cray. Her lovely heavy hair was burnished to brightness, and her lips were a softer crimson than Sally's. And her absurd little dress was entirely satisfactory. It was the color of her eyes and she had made it herself.

Sally said, "Oh, here you are, Rose. I was talking to Kim about a weekend. He says he can't get away. You persuade him. After all if he's really needed he can get to the mainland in the shake of a cat's tail, and we're only a little way out of town. I'm having some people up from down below."

"Why," said Jonathan, that I blame him. After all he has eyes in his head . . . which is probably simply otherwise." He looked at her appreciatively. "Sally said you'd been good to her. Thanks, Rose."

"I didn't really mean it. That is the last one of those things," said Rose. "What earthly reason can she have for asking me—?"

"I assume she wanted you", replied Jonathan obtusely, "and, after all, if Kim's contemplation went to school together. She's just being friendly."

"I see," said Rose, furious. After a moment she said pointedly, "I'm in that case, I think it would be fairly fun to go."

If he thought her jealous of Sally she'd want to curl up and die. "It is to be toward the end of the month," said Jonathan. "I hope the weather doesn't descend. I begin to look forward to it."

"Can you swim?" asked Rose politely.

Jonathan laughed.

"Born in the Middle West," he told her, "they are taken. Of course I can swim. I may not dance as well as Kim," he added a moment later, missing a step, "but I'm elegant in the water. I can even row a boat."

"That's good," said Rose, seeing that we'll be on an island. But the river isn't a lake, by any manner of means. You haven't even a speaking acquaintance with the river. And the Sutton Island don't very far from the swift water."

"I'm not concerned Jonathan, as the music stopped, "that your little pupil has consoled himself."

Rose looked up to see Larry and a girl leaving the room together. She recognized the girl. It was Millie Downing. She thought. He shouldn't have. Her parents probably don't know she's here.

"It's the Downing girl," she said abruptly.

"Yes, I know," said Jonathan frowning. "She's made quite a circus performer but I could see the outline of a face under it."

Some time later, Rose, who had been dancing with Bill Lynd, saw Phil Dentler, his face as dark as thunderclond, coming across the floor. He went directly to Sally and took her from her current partner. He drew her into a corner and spoke to her rapidly. Sally looked annoyed and then laughed. And presently Jonathan came in. He is was under one ear, his hair was ruffled and he was nursing the knuckles of his right hand tenderly. Bill said, with interest, "What's up? Let's go see."

They made their way across the room and Jonathan brightened as they approached. He said, "Well, we're looking for you two. I'm in a jam."

"Not already?" asked Rose amusingly.

He drew them out into the almost deserted lounge.

"Lazy Dentler and that little fool of a Millie," he explained. "I came on 'em in a parked car. I took him by the back of the neck. He seemed to resent my attitude," added Jonathan as if mildly astonished. "But" he went on with satisfaction, "he's a lot more sober than he was. He's gone home. I had words with his big brother, too, but apparently he decided that it was just as well if Larry slept it off. I suppose it will be all over town to-morrow. Quite a few people heard us and saw us—"

"Where is Sally?" asked Rose.

"Crying her eyes out in my car. Seems that Dentler was on his way visiting in Rome. She's staying in town with cousins. Told 'em— Oh, I don't know what she did tell you but anyway she's scared to death that her people will find out she was at the Club with Dexter. She's had rows enough about him before this. Someone will have to take her home, and I'm elected."

"Rose and I will," said Bill quietly. "You can't leave your party. It's late anyway. We'll get along and see if we can fix things up."

Jonathan asked, distressed.

"You'll come back, won't you?"

Rose put her hand on his arm. She said, "You get Sally. Bundle her there and make your peace with Phil Dentler. Otherwise it may be uncomfortable for you. I think if I you mention to him . . . that . . . that you averted something which might have caused a scandal — he'll see reason. We'll take care of Millie, Jon, and it's been a grand party. Now you get back. Bill will take me home."

They left a few minutes later. Jonathan, in the car, was full of apologies. Sally came up to him and slipped her arm through his. "Jill

KEPT FROM HIS SHIP BY SCIATICA

Sailor Who Could Hardly Walk For Pain

"I am a seaman," he writes, "and have travelled all over the world in sailing ships. Some time ago I was taken bad with sciatica and rheumatism. If I went out I had to walk two or three times before I got home. One day an old mate of mine said me what was the matter, and he said 'get some Kruschen Salts.' So I got some and I am pleased to say I felt a great ease. After continuing for a week, I was a good deal better and on the Saturday I was back on my ship."—J. N. W.

The pains of rheumatism and sciatica are frequently caused by too much uric acid accumulating in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid and other ingredients of these pains assist the internal organs to eliminate the dissolved uric acid from the system.

and Rose going?" she asked, looking after them.

"Yes . . . it—it was getting late."

"Rose is lovely this evening," I suppose it's Millie Downing. Oh, Phil, that is not the girl for you darling. But you did the Dexters a good turn at that. Of course all the girls were wanting Larry . . . she went on lily, "he's the next thing to a movie star to those youngsters." Her tone was tolerant and Jonathan looked at her with some disgust which deepened as she went on "and naturally his parents would hate his going with her. Well, I'm glad you got. "Come on, let's dance." she added gaily, "then I must be something to eat. Not that you didn't feed us very well. I'll ask Bill to the Island. She added, "for Rose to returned to the dance floor. "Rose, dear."

He didn't like that either.

CHAPTER XXV

Toward the end of June Sally gave her first house party of the season at the Sutton Island, an island a little below the town. She brought several pretty girls, house guests, from out of town, and an equal number of personable visiting young men. Rose and Jonathan drove over together. Bill had refused. "Too rich for my blood," he said, "and besides the river doesn't interest me till the bass season opens." The Dexters were on their island, over the weekend but Phil would probably spend much of his time across the bridge at the Suttons.

The Suttons owned considerable acreage on the mainland, a small farm run by a caretaker, housing the boatmen and gardeners as well as supplying them with milk, cream, butter, eggs, chicken and vegetables. The farmhouse was also on the mainland, and the toe house.

It was a short but through swift flowing water to the island itself, which was quite large for that part of the river. The main house was built in the Adirondack style, log cabin, with big wide verandahs. There were several guest cottages, and the boathouse had been built on the side where the water had less current and there were tennis courts. A croquet ground, bath houses and all the comforts of somewhat elderly home.

Around the house and cottages, with their big living rooms, their many bedrooms and baths, their own electric light plant, lawns had been cleared and they kept constantly cropped to a velvet smoothness. There were little gardens carefully tailored, well water, and a small artificial pool, painted blue and stocked with goldfish. The rest of the property had been left as man found it after nature had decreed it. There were heavily wooded slopes, wild flowers and pleasant, narrow, beaches.

Even Rose, who was determined not to permit anything Sutton to impress her, was enchanted. She rather liked Sally's casual out-of-doors friendliness. They were cordial enough in the completely casual way of modern youth and two of the girls "worked". One had been on the smart dress shop in Utica and another ran a little book store in New York. They were good-looking, healthy, slightly veneered young people who approached culture moderately, read "everything" saw all the latest plays, knew stage and bookish people, travelled, went in for mental candor and frank physical artificiality.

The men were just men. Rose wasn't interested. That was what frightened her. She had the normal, healthy curiosity about the new young men. Or at least she had had it. Now they were shadows, they were trees walking. Things had come to a pretty pass, she thought, when you could get only one man in all the world.

They had come down to the island Friday afternoon. The party was chaperoned only by Mrs. Sutton, the dowager having been called out of town to a meeting of some directorship she held. Mrs. Sutton's idea of chaperoning was vague and pleasant in the extreme. She appeared at meals, flapped her hands helplessly whenever Sally suggested anything, and retired to her big cool room at the back of the house to read and listen to the radio.

They swam, played tennis, went out in one of the boats . . . there were plenty of these, punts, canoes, a speed boat, a cruiser, and a stumpy boat with an outboard motor which the caretaker used . . . danced to the radio, ate, slept, grew tanned or burned according to the pigmentation of the individual skin. Jonathan suffered most, the unaccustomed exposure turning him an angry and painful red despite the oil with which Sally commiseratingly rubbed his head and arms and shoulders.

Rose, to her astonishment, found that she was enjoying herself very much. She was perfectly well aware that Bill had disapproved of her coming. He had said so much "First they seduce Jonathan," he told her, "now it's you." And to her horror she heard herself explaining, almost apologizing. She couldn't tell him the truth, which was that she had found that she'd accept the invitation of a box office sticker in order to be near Jonathan Kimber. But perhaps Bill surmised that, without her unthinkable confession.

But there were obstacles in the way of complete enjoyment. For one thing she wasn't alone with Jonathan at any time and for another Larry Dexter made himself a part of the picture. The little bridge which served to connect the two islands was easy enough to cross. Phil or Sally could hardly turn around without encountering him, there at her elbow . . . offering his arm to be negotiated a rough bit of walking, holding a sizzling cigarette lighter with the correct Wodehousian butler touch—a glass of iced water.

On Sunday afternoon the last out-of-town guests left to drive back to town and the house party was ours. Rose and Jonathan were the only remaining guests. Rose went to the room which was her own and saw the others off in triumph. She felt triumphant. Out of a list of three young men she had had two weekend proposals and, as a result, engaged to one of the dearest friends, also present at the party and Miss Right indignant, and as the other one had been almost to the rolling point as far as the girl was concerned, had brought him was concerned, she felt—she had done a nice piece of work. She went to her room, combed her head and footwork. So returning to the island she surveyed her lazy court with satisfaction.

Phil had gone fishing with his father and some men friends. Rose had not gone. In the meantime, there they were, the three of them with Mrs. Sutton absent and therefore solemn somewhere, something like a Sabbath observance.

"What's happened since I've been away?" she demanded.

"Nothing," replied Jonathan yawning. He added, "If anyone slaps me on the back when I get back town, I'll commit it murder."

"Well paint you a sign . . . soft shoulders, for instance," suggested Sally laughing. "Wasn't Larry around when I left . . . ?"

"He's not here now," said Rose, "He came over before you went and asked to shoot the rapids with him, or something." She laughed. "I have a real regard for the rapids," she said, "and for my own skin."

A very pretty skin, quickly and evenly tanning to gold. Her eyes were bluer than the river.

Jonathan supplemented "So he went off, sulking."

"He'll come back" said Sally, "you do treat him badly, Rose and I don't blame him. Come on, Jon, the river isn't like a mill pond. Let's go and enchanting in short shirt. She said a silly little like shirt. She said "I'm not tutoring this weekend. Hours off."

"Lord, it's hot!" said Sally after a moment. "How about a good long swim before lunch? Can your sunburn stand it?" she asked Jonathan with mock solicitude.

I guess it will have to," Jonathan answered.

It was a very warm day, with a brazen sun in a cloudless sky and the river was like fluid ice. They swam out to the anchored cruiser and rested there a while, and then swam back and sunned themselves on the beach. Jonathan crossed over for a large towel like a tent.

"You are having things your own way," Sally told him. Her bathing suit was cut from the minimum of material. Fleecy, white, knitted, it clung to the fine lines of her body. Under the hot sun it seemed to shook out her curls.

"Why?" demanded Jonathan half asleep. He heard a motor boat on the river, he heard a bird singing somewhere, and the plaintive cry of a gull. He heard all these and Sally's voice, out of a deep unthinking dream.

"Alone at last," she answered, "and with two young and beautiful women who love you madly."

Rose sat up and stretched her smooth arms to the sun. She said, calmly, "Leave me out of it. I don't love him madly. Not at all."

Traitor! said her heart, and Liar! said her pride.

"Come now," said Sally reproachfully, "is that nice?"

"Very," said Rose. "And I'm starved. I couldn't love anyone on an empty stomach."

Lunch was pleasant in the big rustic dining room. Mrs. Sutton in white, murmured drowsy amiabilities, Jonathan thought, I'll bet she doesn't know my name even yet and as for Rose, she's confused her half a dozen times with two of the out-of-town girls. It must be marvelous to live like that and never think under water.

After lunch they rested, exerted themselves for exercise and then rested again. Starting over past the Dexter Island, Sally said, "I believe that's Larry . . ."

"Where?" asked Jonathan idly.

"Leaving the mainland. In a punt. Phil and his party took the big motor boat and the speedboat isn't in commission. He's got a girl with him. I thought I saw Larry before. I saw him on the road, hell bent for leather in his car when I went uptown with the crowd."

Rose sat upright and looked across lawn and through the gap in the trees to the water. She said, "It looks like Millie Downing," in tones of apprehension.

"What of it?" asked Sally.

Rose said sharply,

"Sally, Her people have forbidden her to have anything to do with Larry . . . and you remember the spade at the Country Club? Is Mrs. Dexter on the island today?" she asked, knowing that the boy's mother had not been down the river during the week-end.

"Why, no," replied Sally slowly, "she isn't. Just Phil and his father and sons and Larry, of course. For heaven's sake, Rose, why get all hot and bothered? Larry's just taking her out for a row or something. It's perfectly harmless."

"It's not!" said Rose angrily.

Sally surveyed her coldly.

She said, "Dexters are bad friends I have. There's nothing the matter with Larry. He's a little grown up for a kick town, at his age, I admit. But he's capable of looking after himself. I wouldn't set myself up as a guardian of minor morals if I were you, Rose. Can't you forget you're a school teacher?"

"No," said Rose, "I can't," . . too worried for anger.

Jonathan roused himself. He had been dreaming of—he hardly knew what. He'd felt extraordinarily young again, and carefree and happy. Now he said, "Look here, you girls—"

"What about us?" asked Sally.

"Nothing, only I think Rose is right."

Sally shrugged again. She said, "Talk about tempests in a teapot. Rose, you're making the poor kid take a town girl rowing."

Rose spoke in her tone. Town girl indeed! What was Sally Sutton but a town girl, and one who couldn't change that, not all the interludes of Florida and Europe and yachting and boarding schools could alter the fact.

CHAPTER XXVI

"Speaking of tempests," said Jonthan, staring.

The clouds had come up swiftly, as they do on that great, magnificent, treacherous river. They were not more than a dozen in number, but of a swift, brief storm. They were bad clouds. The sun darkened and a wind came up. It blew up with the rapidity of sudden death, it whipped the glass-smooth surface of the water into choppy waves, and now the water was no longer blue but a sullen dirty green, angry and menacing.

"For heaven's sake!" he said staring at the phenomenon which was entirely new to him.

Rose had jumped to her feet. She said, with agitation,

"Larry and that girl! In that little punt. They must be half way across. We must send some one after them."

Sally said, troubled.

"We can't. There's no one at Dexter's and there's no one all our farm. Rose, you're the town. I let me men off, too . . . told them to come back in time to take us across after dinner tonight."

Rose said frantically, "I don't care about Larry Dexter . . . but Millie . . ."

"Come on," said Jonathan gamily, "are you sure they're in any real danger? Can't they get in somewhere," he asked vaguely, "until it blows over?"

"No," said Rose, "they can't. You don't know this river, Jon." She turned to Sally. She said, "You do."

Sally said, "Phil and his party didn't expect to come back until late. They're not on the river anyway." She stared at the other girl. She said slowly, "I came back to the island in the farm outboard this morning . . . It's the only boat over there . . . aside from a canoe and the punt."

Rose said, "It's the best . . . much better than the speed boat." She looked at Jonathan. . . "Can you run it?" she demanded.

"Yes, said Jonathan briefly, "I can."

"Then," said Rose, "we've got to get after them."

Sally said, "But you can't . . . I mean . . . they'll get back all right in a short time."

Rose was on her feet. Now the sky was black, the water grey and the wind was rising. Rain had begun to fall in alarming sheets. The little choppy waves were big waves.

Jonathan rose quietly. He said, "Sally, you'll have to show me the boat is, I'll go out after them."

"Jonathan," began Rose again Sally but he was running as she spoke. She said angrily, "Rose . . . I've never heard of anything as crazy . . .he hasn't the least idea—"

Rose said, "I have. I know the river. I was brought up on it. I'm going with him."

Sally said, "You're a fool!"

"Save your breath," Rose advised. She was running, too, following Jonathan. Wet branches slapped her face, but she was not aware of it, her lungs ached, her eyes smarted. Sally followed, too, much agitated and angry.

They reached the island landing. Jonathan had been right there, raced to the little dock. Jonathan jumped in, tinkered with the engine, found the can of gasoline under the seat.

"You girls go back to the house," he shouted. The storm was increasing. It was necessary to shout.

Sally said, screaming, "Don't attempt it, Kim... you're crazy."

Rose was in the boat. Jonathan turned. He said, "Say you little idiot, go back to the house with Sally."

"I won't" said Rose. "You run your engine. I'll tell you where to steer. You'd get in the current alone and if anything went wrong with the engine, you'd be over the rapids. Someone has to tell you."

Sally said, "You're crazy. I tell you, crazy!"

She hadn't much physical courage. She couldn't have set foot in the boat to save her life. She listened to the hesitating splutter of the engine which, after the longest minute in his life, Jonathan had got running. Rose had already cast off. She sat facing Jonathan, her thin frock drenched. She called "When we get away from the island steer clear across. I was watching them just before the storm came up."

Sister Act

By THAYER WALDO

They showed quite a regard for ceremony in bringing Leona Gray to the district attorney's office, this because she was a movie star's sister. Leona showed more than a little nervousness when she came. That became Jock Brenneman had been found dead at her feet in the mountains.

Of course it was suicide and this interview only a formality. The district attorney explained as much to Leona while she sat in the big chair by his desk and twisted her necklace.

"Please understand," he said, "that I truly regret the necessity of this particularly so soon after—all—trying ordeal. But routine must be followed.

"Now I'd like you to tell me," he urged, "everything that happened. Right at the beginning and take your time and think carefully, Miss."

It was visiting Margy. I came out from Cleveland, where we all used to live, about two weeks ago. Margy was going to get me a screen test at Zenith studio, I thought that would be fun.

"I guess it was right the first day after I got here that I met Mr. Brenneman. He came to lunch and Margy told me they were engaged, but it was supposed to be a secret.

"He was there two or three hours every day after that, and when he and Margy went out dancing and places in the evening, he'd suggest taking me along. I didn't know right away what it was all about, but four or five days I began to realize that he'd fallen for me. He was paying me attention and following me around. At first I thought sure Margy would notice; but she didn't seem to.

"I felt terrible, but I hated to speak to Margy because I could see how crazy about him she was and how she kept thinking of their marriage. So, instead of telling anything I just tried to make Mr. Brenneman understand. I didn't want him.

"Yesterday he stayed away until about six, and when he came Margy was with him. She said there'd been no luncheon and afternoon—taking a ride in an airplane. I think I was awful glad, even though I was still sure he'd never keep his promise to marry her."

"Well, after dinner Margy said they were going up to Mike-Bill lodge at Stag Cliff for over the week-end, and she asked me to come along. I thought it was just to have a chaperone, so I said all right. I'd get ready now and be back. I can see Mr. Brenneman must have suggested it.

"It was late when we got to the lake and we all decided to go right to bed. Margy and I were on the end of the hall on the second floor, and there were rooms on both sides down it, and mine near the other end.

"After I undressed I remembered my slippers were in Margy's bag, so I put on a robe and started down the hall to get them. Just as I passed Mr. Brenneman's door he opened it and called me, and when I turned he grabbed my arm and pulled me inside and shut the door.

"It was all dark in there except for the light that came through the transom, and I was terribly frightened. When I cried out for him to let me go, he put his hand over my mouth and kept saying, 'You can't go—you can't go!' And when I tried to fight loose he said, 'Oh, this is all the devil of a mess!'

"Then he picked him up and carried me and he fell down beside a chair that had its window open on it. The light from outside alone right there and I saw a gun lying on top of his shirts. Suddenly Mr. Brenneman jumped up again saying [illegible] you don't belong to me—! and then he—he—oh, I just can't go on!"

She slumped down, face in hands. The district attorney sat forward.

"Now, now—that's all right. There's just one more thing I want to know; did he say anything else before he—shot himself?"

Her bobbed head shook from side to side. She was crying softly, without restraint.

"I see." Into the rectangular black box at his elbow he said: "Will you kindly step in now, Miss Gray?"

Margaret Gray entered through the door on the right. Her face was drawn with suffering, but entirely dry.

"You heard everything?" the district attorney asked smoothly. Margaret nodded. "Have you anything to add?"

"Yes, I can verify all that she said, I was in his bedroom and had just gone in through the other hall door."

The district attorney looked hastily away from her steadfast grieving eyes and cleared his throat. Then Leona Gray cried out sharply and surged over in her chair.

She regained consciousness seven minutes later, lying on a leathery couch in the adjoining room. Only Margaret was there, sitting by the couch and staring down at her intensely.

"Why—why didn't you tell?"

Margaret Gray's smile did not more one side of her mouth at all.

"That you shot him? What good would that do? Telling about my sister's affair with that made her imagine intrigue from a little kindness won't bring back the man I tired—my husband. You—of course, you poor little fool; we knew how Yuma were married yesterday, and because we wanted to keep it from everyone for a while, Jock—" her voice broke hoarsely—"Jock just tried to stop you from going to my room and finding it empty!"

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food does not digest. It just decays in the bowels. Then gases bloat your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons get into the blood. Your whole system is upset and the world looks punk.

You need those two pounds of bile to digest and move the food you eat. Laxatives only move the bowels. To get the bile flowing freely and make you feel like a new person, you need Carter's Little Liver Pills. They do the work quickly and gently. Be sure to get Carter's Little Liver Pills at any drug store. Insist on the genuine! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Kali Bwana was placed in charge of a vicious little pygmy woman called Wiala, who hated the white girl's tall beauty. Within the small ill-smelling hut, the exhausted prisoner lay down to seek the peace of oblivion in sleep. Wiala beat her awake with a stick.

In a fury born of desperation, Kali Bwana seized the stick from the tiny hand and turned it against her tormentor. Wiala screamed. Immediately, pygmy warriors appeared at the doorway with bows drawn taut and deadly poisoned arrows fixed on the white girl.

Old Tinker was no worker of miracles. He was not even a good woodsman. He had started out unintentionally on the trail from which he had seen Nobodies warriors embark, but after a while he became hopelessly lost in the dark tangle of unfamiliar jungle.

SIR A. DOUGHTY ARCHIVIST, DIES

Retired From Dominion Post More Than Year Ago

Ottawa, Dec. 2 (CP)—Statesman, historian and literarian throughout Canada and abroad today mourned the death of Sir Arthur Doughty, Dominion Archivist Emeritus.

He died at his home here yesterday at the age of 76 after a career remarkable alike for its romance and its solid achievement in public service. Known as the father of the Canadian archives Sir Arthur was the first archivist and was appointed in 1904. Although he retired from active work a year ago he remained nominal head of the institution he created with the title of Archivist Emeritus.

Ben Sir Arthur came to Ottawa there was no systematic arrangement for caring for the valuable records and historical papers in the custody of the government.

He began his work here by rounding up a mass of ill-sorted, rotting papers scattered in the basements of government buildings. He leased as a permanent monument the beautiful archives building filled with a priceless collection of papers, pictures, books and documents relating to every phase of Canadian history arranged in a fashion which has attracted world-wide attention.

Twice Married.

Sir Arthur was twice married, first to Bertha vonKleinsmidler in 1886. She died in 1910 and he later married Miss Kathleen Rathbun Browne, daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. George Browne of Montreal. She and a daughter, Sybil, are the only close relatives surviving.

Born at Maidenhead, England and educated at Oxford, Sir Arthur came to Montreal as a young man and entered the service of a commercial firm. He added the duties of musical and dramatic critic for the Montreal Gazette to his business activities and busied himself with literary pursuits.

Later he went to Quebec to a government post and became secretary to the minister of public works and first joint librarian of the legislature. That started him in his researches in Canadian history and when the federal government created an archivist in 1904 he was regarded as the logical man.

Recommended by Tweedsmuir.

John Buchan, now Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada, had something to do with creation of the archives as he mentioned the bad condition of Canadian public records to the then governor-general, Lord Minto.

Lord Minto wrote to the prime minister, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and said "it appears to me that the appointment of a deputy keeper of the records would be of great value to the history of the Dominion and would effect a substantial saving on the present extravagant plan. For this appointment, both on account of his ability and literary taste, I should like to mention Mr. Doughty, the parliamentary librarian, with whom I have been in close touch in connection with the old plans for the defence of Quebec."

Honored By King.

Dr. Doughty retired in March, 1935 and in the same year was honored with his knighthood. Since Sir Arthur's retirement Dr. James F. Kenney has been acting archivist but the Archivist Emeritus continued to occupy an office in the archives building where his experience and advice was at the disposal of Dr. Kenney and the staff.

Sir Arthur was a writer of note on literary as well as historical subjects. He published many books, one of the most recent being "Under the Lily and the Rose", a children's history of Canada which Sir Robert Borden, former Prime Minister, has described as "a work of national importance". He was also an artist and devoted much of his time to illuminating works on vellum.

Women Should Participate In Municipal Politics

'Bride Broder' Says Town's Efficiently Run With Women in Public Office

MORE HUMANITARISM

As woman's viewpoint is sadly needed in the administration of municipalities, it would be an excellent thing if women would endeavor to think of parliamentary honors and concentrate on entering municipal affairs, with such was the expressed by Miss Mary White, better known to hundreds of readers in this district as "Bride Broder" of the Bride Broder Parish House last evening. Miss White who has endeared herself by her sincerity and interest of her daily column made firmer friends by her charm of manner, clear insight into present day problems and her practical attitude towards their solution.

"After all, managing municipal affairs is simply larger scale housekeeping, there is just a certain amount of money to spend and certain definite things on which it must be spent. And women are well experienced in budgeting their resources to the best advantage," the speaker remarked.

Women of England take a practical part in municipal affairs and a well known English journalist visiting in Toronto expressed the opinion that the towns and villages which have women in public office are more efficiently managed, are run better and more economically than those boroughs which are looked after entirely by men.

There are all sorts of problems which can be solved better by women. Take as the housing question, the great problem of eliminating slum conditions, and replacing the unsightly structures, with real homes.

The men will try to tell you that model homes cannot be built for less than four thousand dollars, and require thirty-five dollars rent. An experiment has been carried out by Dr. Correll of the Ontario Museum who has built three five-roomed houses at Chanton near Port Hope houses equipped with all kinds of labour saving devices, with half acre of garden at the cost of two thousand dollars each. These he is going to rent for only twelve dollars. So when you are told that the housing problem cannot be solved without a large expenditure remind the men of Dr. Correll's experiment."

Better at Welfare Work

Health services, the questions of milk supply, better bread, pure water these are all of vital importance to women. Then there is the tremendous work all women can do in supplying comfort to the needy, conditions which should be investigated more fully.

In the administration of relief, in the time of out of work, women have nothing whatever to do. The result is that millions have been spent without one constructive thing having been accomplished, another evidence of poor housekeeping.

Women have a tremendous power, a power that they perhaps do not realize. Miss White told of the remarkable accomplishment of Conservative ladies in Toronto who had studied the problem of the deaths by hundreds through typhoid fever..all because of poor water supply. They agitated for a filtration plant and met the solid opposition of the mental health officers, the Mayor, Board of Control and Aldermen. In spite of this, and without the vote, these women of Toronto by their ardent work in every part of the city succeeded in having passed the bylaw authorizing the construction of the plant.

"If that is what women can do, without the vote," commented Miss White, "What can they do today!"

Women's organizations which refuse to attack vital problems for fear of overstepping the "non political" idea are failing in their duty. Women's societies have not done in recent years what they could and should have done. They should be alive to the tremendous movement underway, trend toward dictatorship from which only solid Anglo Saxon sense can save us.

Young people are discouraged, they feel that life has been unjust to them; that they haven't had a square deal. If things were in better shape in the municipalities conditions would not be so discouraging.

Miss White urged her hearers to enter municipal affairs, not this year, but next year, to work diligently to clear things up in their own community. The movement will branch out and woman's great power can be used to bring about the great changes that are needed.

Mrs. Williams, president of the Club, graciously thanked Miss White for her splendid words of inspiration. Following the address the members were entertained to refreshments and had the pleasure of meeting and chatting with Miss White.

CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION RAISED

Relation of Crown And Ministers Referred to by Newspapers

London, Dec. 2 (CP)—The Manchester Guardian today advised King Edward to "listen to whatever advice the prime minister has to offer in all matters affecting the welfare of Great Britain."

Editorially, the paper said: "One cannot think that our present king, mindful as he is of the nationally beloved example set by his father, would seek in any way to disturb the relations between the monarch and his ministers as they existed during 25 years of the last reign."

The Guardian continued: "There is reason to think the hastily-summoned cabinet meeting Friday was concerned with a domestic problem that involves an important constitutional issue, since it bears on the relation of the king to his ministers and his readiness to be guided."

Provincial papers continued to comment on the remarks of Dr. A. W. Hunt, Bishop of Bradford, who told a diocesan conference yesterday the king "needs God's grace".

The Northern Echo of Darlington said: "The Bishop of Bradford's reference to the king himself raises directly the personal aspects of the responsibility of the occupant of the throne, to give a lead according to the standards which can generally be observed and publicly accepted."

This followed appearance of an editorial in the Yorkshire Post, which included what was believed to be a reference to the friendship between the king and Mrs. Wallis Simpson, divorced American-born society woman. The Post said it was "proper to treat with contempt mere gossip such as frequently is associated with the names of European royal persons," and added: "But certain statements which have appeared in reputable United States journals, even, we believe, in some London newspapers, cannot be treated with quite so much indifference."

KING EDWARD AND CABINET IN THROES OF CRISIS

Premier Baldwin Tells Commons It is Inexpedient to Make Statement

Party Leaders Face Stormy Scenes; Rowe Heckled, Premier Prevented From Making Speech of Rebuttal

CHARGES ARE LEVELLED

Hot Debate Stirs up Stormy Element in Audience

In apparent verbal rebuttal against the "rough ride" given the Hon. Earl Rowe during his sixty minute speech, allotted time, at the official nominations of the East Hastings by-election held in Madoc Armouries yesterday afternoon, a howling high-lestered crowd of 3,000 which jammed the inside and milled around the outside of the building refused to listen to the Hon. Mitchell Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, when he attempted to deliver his fifteen minute rebuttal following the joint debate between the Premier and the leader of the Conservative party at the official nomination held in the local Armouries.

As the Premier stepped to the front of the platform to offer his final answer to the challenge thrown out by Mr. Rowe during his hour's speech, and to take up the gauntlet of political battle, which had been thrown down to him by members of the organized and welcoming roar arose which prevented the speaker from utilizing the length of time, which had been accorded him in rebuttal, after speaking for forty five minutes, which had been allotted him as the opening speaker.

"I can take it!" retorted the Premier.

Says Two Dominions Hasten Showdown

London, Dec. 3 (CP)—The Evening Star said yesterday that international crisis tonight that Canada and South Africa had helped to hasten a show-down.

"Representations made in London by two Dominion Governments are responsible for bringing matters to a head," the newspaper said.

"Canadian and South African representations, more particularly the former, have been singularly vigorous both in form and substance, going as far as to intimate on one occasion that unless a satisfactory solution was reached the views of our dominions might have to review its present relationship to the crown."

Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, could not immediately be reached for comment on this report.

The Star said that some foreign embassies and legations had shown the keenest interest in gathering details for timely transmission to their governments, while others had shown marked reluctance to raise the topic, regarding it a too delicate and domestic for foreigners to deal with.

Story Is Denied.

South Africa House headquarters of that dominion's high commissioner in London, stigmatized the Evening Star's report it had made representations concerning the situation as "an infernal lie".

In the Star and other evening newspapers Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada was quoted from Ottawa as saying: "I have nothing to say whatever. I heard many rumors when I was in England and many since I came home. I have nothing to say about them."

Union of Protestant Churches Forecast by Dr. Peter Bryce

Moderator of United Church Speaks To Essex County Presbytery

TRAIN THE YOUNG

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP) — Union of all Protestant churches in Canada was forecast by Most Rev. Dr. Peter Bryce, Moderator of the United Church in Canada addressing a conference in connection with the Essex County Presbytery meeting last night.

"I may not live to see it," he said, "but very wonderful things have happened in the last 25 years and I look for the coming into being of a great Protestant church and the passing away of the divisions that separate us. Very often when you examine these divisions you find they are concerned with non-essentials".

Dr. Bryce urged churches to look boldly into the future.

"The church must advance or retreat," he contended. "It cannot stand still. The time is past to say that the church is held back by the depression. The stress and variance of the church was made in the days not of prosperity, but of adversity.

"The day is past," he said, "when long-faced people were naturally christian people. John Wesley said holiness means happiness and I do, he's right."

Exalt Jesus Christ Alone

As an example of Wesley's kind nature, Dr. Bryce recalled that his padbearers he ate unemployed meat pie and a pound each for their services.

Dr. Bryce urged greater stress be placed on the religious education of children.

"The great Catholic church knows the value of the training of the young. We haven't learned it yet to the same extent," he said. The Modernist described the small rural Sunday school where the superintendents were often

Napanee Poultry Fair Not Success This Year

Napanee, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP) — With only a small number of buyers on hand for the second day, the Napanee Poultry Fair closed today, Mayor W. G. Paul expressed personal regret at conditions which had been in connection with the event. He said neither he nor any member of the town council had been approached to aid in arrangements this year.

Hundreds of producers were unable to dispose of fowl yesterday and today turkeys were being sold at 15 cents a pound, chickens at 13 cents, in infrequent sales. The armory has been turned into a receiving station and it is estimated that 35 tons of poultry were held over from last night.

"not very eloquent."

"From the little country schools throughout this province we have had some of the most outstanding ministers of the church and some of the most outstanding leaders in the life of the nation," he added.

Dr. Bryce reaffirmed the stand of the United Church against liquor.

"The church stands in the life the community opposed to crime and selfishness and whatever destroys human happiness. That's why the church's voice has been raised against the liquor traffic. Temperance is the church is bigoted and narrow," he said.

EXPORT CHRISTMAS TREES

For Eric, Dec. 3.—(CP)— First important run of Christmas trees from Northern Ontario and Quebec started to cross the International Bridge here today on flat cars. With danger of liquor smuggling now practically nil only perfunctory inspection is being made this December by U. S. customs.

PRIME MINISTER KING DECLINES MAKE COMMENT

Absence of Official Pronouncement at London

INTEREST IS KEEN

Controversy Left Untouched By Canadian Ministers

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—(CP)—In the absence of any official pronouncement by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin involving Canada in the controversy arising from relations between King Edward and Mrs. Wallis Simpson, Prime Minister Mackenzie King has declined so far to comment.

Questioned on reports the Dominion Government had protested against the marriage between His Majesty and the Baltimore twice divorcee, Mr. Mackenzie King asked if there had been any official statement to that effect from Prime Minister Baldwin. When told that there had been no such statement yet the Prime Minister said he would not discuss the matter.

In a question that had been subject of so many rumors and conflicting reports, Mr. Mackenzie King said, it would hardly be expected he would, without any comment. The Prime Minister and members of his government have evinced a keen interest in reports from London for so far it has been declined to indicate even that the controversy has been discussed in Cabinet Council.

London View

London, Dec. 3.—Continuing, The Evening Star said: "Even if by honoring Mrs. Simpson with his hand, the King also made her his consort, the country and the empire would still stand in health and in strength. The wave of discussion which swept around the world might create some temporary embarrassment but there is not matter here which need involve the fate of the country. . . .

"People do not think of him (The King) with the mystic reverence due to some shadowy ruler.

"His place in the hearts of his people can be made more secure than ever. It is for statesmen to help him find the solution which will promote his effectiveness as King and Emperor and his personal happiness and well-being as a man."

KING'S MOTHER GOES SHOPPING

Queen Mary Prefers Small Shops Displaying Objets d'Art

London, Dec. 3 (C.P. Cable) — Queen Mary, towards whom the British nation and empire have a special sympathy at this time, is busy with her Christmas shopping.

Her Majesty is almost daily making Christmas shopping visits to stores both great and small, buying presents for her family and friends. Although the Queen frequents the large stores frequently, where she receives the usual courtesy and deference accorded to all customers, her Majesty's favorite journeys are to smaller places where rare and delicate objets d'art are displayed. The Princess Royal often accompanies her.

The queen, according to present arrangements, leaves Marlborough House for Sandringham on Dec. 21. The Duke and Duchess of York with their children, will join the party there the Christmas Day and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, The Duchess of Kent and others in the party. The Duke of Kent will remain with her at their residence in Belgrave Square.

Queen Maud of Norway has been staying for several days at Appleton House in Norfolk, near Sandringham. She returns before Christmas to Norway. The Norfolk house was given to her by her brother, King Edward VII. Queen Maud during her 40 years of married life has rarely missed a yearly stay there.

MONARCH'S WISH TO MARRY SAID TO CAUSE CRISIS

Name of Mrs. Simpson is Freely Mentioned in British Press

SOLUTIONS OFFERED

Possible Resignation of Baldwin May Follow Certain Events

London, Dec. 3 (CP)—The king and the cabinet are in the throes of a grave constitutional crisis. And so far no solution has been found.

It arises from the king's desire to marry Mrs. Ernest Simpson. Prime Minister Baldwin, backed by the entire cabinet, has taken a strong stand against the marriage. He is prepared to resign if the king refuses to accept his advice. Clement R. Attlee, Labor leader, also has intimated that if Mr. Baldwin resigns he will not be prepared under the circumstances to attempt to form a government.

It was expected that the crisis would be ended with an official statement that the king does not intend to marry. No statement, however, is in sight.

Baldwin In Conference.

Mr. Baldwin was in early consultation this morning with Viscount Halifax, Lord Privy Seal, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal opposition in the House of Commons.

The Prime Minister announced shortly after noon he planned to make a statement in the House of Commons later on the constitutional issues involved.

Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and his wife, went into No. 11 Downing street with Douglas Hacking, chairman of the Conservative party. Lord Halifax, Lord Privy Seal, arrived at No. 10.

Knots of people gathered in Downing street this morning to watch the coming and going at number 10. Press photographers were there to snap the unusual scene. While no formal cabinet meeting called, it looked like hurried animation. And it was apparent that behind those closed doors grave moves were in progress. For here is a crisis which affects not merely Great Britain but the whole British Commonwealth of Nations.

Cabinet Interprets King's Duties.

The cabinet, it is understood, draws a sharp line between the king as its constitutional head, and as a constitutional monarch. They hold that matters affecting primarily his private individual genuine in a constitutional monarch a public importance that therefore on such matters the king should be prepared to accept the advice of his ministers.

One suggested solution of the difficulty—although not from any official source—is that if the king wants to marry Mrs. Simpson, his wife partner, but that she become not his queen. Queen Consort. She would then be not queen but the king's consort, just as the husband of Queen Victoria was the prince-consort.

MOLLISON FOUND NEAR HIS GOAL

No Report as to Damage of Plane But Fliers Not Hurt

Cape Town, Dec. 3.—(CP-Havas) Jim Mollison, A. Mollison and Richard, Cornigion-Mollier, his French co-pilot, landed here today at 3.00 p.m. local time (8.00 a.m. EST.)

They flew here from Wiendrift, about 20 miles away, over which they landed last night after lasting over extra difficult flying weather on the last lap of their speed flight from London.

The two abandoned their efforts to reach Cape Town last night because they knew the chance to beat the record, held by Mollison's estranged wife, Amy Johnson, already was lost, and they were unwilling to attempt to fly over Sir Lowry's Pass, at an elevation of 1,500 feet in darkness. They landed at a farm near Wiendrift and spent the night there.

People of Empire Await Eagerly Solution of Constitutional Crisis; Baldwin Enters House Pale, Drawn

Speculation is Full Cry as Result of Conference Between His Majesty And Baldwin Over Issue Which Has Developed

His Majesty Summons Three Members of His Personal Staff to His Country Residence This Morning

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 3.—(CP Cable)—Prime Minister Baldwin declined to lift the veil over the issue between the King and the Cabinet when he was questioned in the House of Commons this afternoon. He said he considered it "inexpedient" that he should be questioned at the present time.

Throughout the country and the whole empire people waited eagerly for the latest development in the situation arising out of the King's friendship for Mrs. Ernest Simpson.

Every seat in Commons was jammed in the hope of some definite government pronouncement. Cheers greeted Mr. Baldwin when he entered the House, looking pale and drawn.

"Why this cheering?" inquired Will Thorne, Labor, in a naive tone.

The Prime Minister said he had no idea of the reason for it.

Immediately the set question hour was over, Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor Opposition, asked Mr. Baldwin whether any constitutional difficulty had arisen and whether the Prime Minister had any statement to make.

Inexpedient to Make Statement

"I have no statement to make today," Mr. Baldwin replied. "While there does not at present exist any constitutional difficulty, the situation is of such a nature as to make it inexpedient that I should be questioned about it at the present time."

Attlee pursued the question with a supplementary interrogation.

"In view of the anxiety existing in the minds of many people," Attlee asked, "will the Prime Minister assure the House that he will make a statement at the earliest possible time?"

Mr. Baldwin replied: "I have all that the Honorable gentleman says very much in mind."

Winston Churchill put a further question.

"Can the Prime Minister give an assurance," he asked, "that no irrevocable step will be taken before a statement has been made in the House?"

"I have nothing to add to the statement I have made at the present moment," said Mr. Baldwin. "I will consider and examine the question the honorable gentleman has asked."

The House then turned to regular business.

London, Dec. 3 (AP)—King Edward has made up his mind to keep both his throne and his friendship for Mrs. Wallis Simpson, one of the highest sources in the kingdom told the Associated Press today.

At Fort Belvedere with Mrs. Simpson and his brother, the Duke of York, the holy communion, King Edward let it be known he will not surrender to Prime Minister Baldwin, the Associated Press reporter said.

He will fight to the finish on the constitutional issue which has been raised by the ministers' insistence that he renounce his twice-divorced American friend.

Persons who know the king expressed the opinion this afternoon that, rather than the possibility of abdication would not break up his friendship for Mrs. Simpson.

At 2:30 p.m. Mr. Baldwin arrived at the House of Commons after a long conference in Downing street with Sir John Simon, Home Secretary.

Mrs. Simpson Advised To Leave.

Whatever the outcome, it was learned on excellent authority Mrs. Simpson probably will leave England soon and seek seclusion either on the continent or on an ocean voyage.

She will remain away for several months, but does not intend to go to America.

SEE ROYAL OBLIGATION

Widely commented upon in the British press was the statement uttered before a diocesan conference by the Rev. A. W. Blunt, Bishop of Bradford, reviewing the obligations entailed in kingship and the necessity in the eyes of the church for the British monarch to enjoy the grace of God. "We hope he is aware of his need," the bishop was quoted. "Some of us gave more positive signs of such awareness," the Bishop of Bradford is shown above.

WAVE OF GOSSIP STIRS NEWSPAPERS

Times Calls on His Majesty to Refer to Rumors by Act or Statement

London, Dec. 3 (CP)—The Times today called upon the king for "some authoritative act or statement to end once and for all the wave of gossip and rumor," which other newspapers openly discussed His Majesty's friendship with Mrs. Ernest Simpson.

"The high office which His Majesty holds," declared The Times, "is no man's personal possession. It is a sacred trust handed down from generation to generation and maintained for the last century with growing strength by the willing allegiance of the whole people to the sovereign who were secure because they were respected."

No British newspaper went so far as the New York Times whose London correspondent last night cabled a dispatch asserting that conflict between King Edward and his ministers had resulted in a crisis involving the possible abdication of the king.

WEDGWOOD PLANS CONFIDENCE VOTE

Says Nation Respects Man Who Stands Up For Rights

London, Dec. 3—(CP Cable)—It was understood today that Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor opposition, and Sir Archibald Sinclair has informed Prime Minister Baldwin that he favors the action and the cabinet in the King, opposing the idea of a marriage between the King and Mrs. Ernest Simpson.

It follows that should Mr. Baldwin's cabinet resign, Attlee would not be prepared to form a government.

Col. Wedgwood, commenting on his statement that a general election would result "in the ruin of the King, said:

"The vast bulk of the people hate seeing a man bullied when he thinks he is right and they respect a man that will stand up for right.

"Obviously the question is not one for the cabinet to decide but for parliament as a whole as in the case of Richard II."

Col. Wedgwood's statement arose from the motion he formally entered for debate as soon as possible.

"That in the opinion of this house, the oath of allegiance which they have taken to the late King Edward VIII is unaffected by any form of consent expressed or by the presence thereat or absence therefrom of any dignitary or persons whatsoever, and this house substitute any other for the King Emperor."

The invited parliamentary language means that if the House passed the motion it would in effect extend the King a vote of confidence.

CHEESE INDUSTRY IS IMPROVING SAYS DR. BARTON

Deputy Minister of Agriculture Addresses Belleville Rotary Club

Farmers' day at Belleville Rotary Club was held Wednesday at Hotel Quinte and was a decided success in every particular marking this annual event, when the Rotarians invite their farmer friends to meet with them and listen to some outstanding speaker on agricultural topics. This year a number of men identified with the cheese industry, including officials of the Provincial and Dominion Department of Agriculture were present as guests.

The guest speaker was Dr. George H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for the Dominion, who took the place of Hon. Dr. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture who was unable to be present on account of press of cognate business. Dr. Barton is a very pleasing speaker and very familiar with his subject which was cheese. He gave a very interesting account of the state of the cheese industry today, compared it with past years and stated the certain a bit on what might be expected in the cheese business in the future. He conveyed the regrets of Hon. Dr. Gardiner that he was also not being able to be present, and drew attention to the fact that Mr. Gardiner had recently visited the Old Country where he was able to study at first hand the export market and arranging for a wider distribution of Canadian products generally and for a larger volume of cheese and other Canadian exports.

The speaker visited the Old Country after Hon. Dr. Gardiner and spent a month in the distributing market conditions.

The cheese situation was in a better condition today than it has been for several years, as for the first time in a number of years it had evidences overseas of greater competition than ever in the world's markets. A visit to New Zealand man speaking in Scotland said that New Zealand wanted the Scotch market even if prices had to be cut.

Bill's Views Heard

Canadian cheese enjoys a reputation for quality, Dr. Barton said, and it was imperative that this be maintained, said Dr. Barton. He analyzed some of the ills cheese business from the grass roots up and urged the producer to insist upon cleanliness and care of cows, and the maintaining of good conditions even when they be dirty, produced milk which gave cheese a bitty-gaat flavor and dirty cans produced tainted cheese.

The cheese business has emerged from its despondency of two or three years ago and is in a happier position today, the speaker said, showing an increase of more than eighteen per cent in the exports, representing an increase of eighteen million pounds of cheese exported over the five million pounds to England and a new export of ten million pounds to the United States.

Where Do We Go?

Replying to the query, question, "Where do we go from here?" Dr. Barton gave a picture of conditions overseas in the world's market with suggestions as how best to meet changing conditions. The first necessity was keeping quality up with a constant supply, the bulk of Canadian cheese shipped abroad was first grade but June and September cheese is also always kept to high standard and if cheese is not first quality the penalty is a discount running into many thousand dollars. Better care for fall cheese was urged by the speaker who also took up at some length the question of the domestic market, the "fat more wheel of better conditions and prices cheese" idea in bringing before the people of Canada, the advantages of cheese as a food. The economic side of the cheese business was also discussed in connection with small factories and large ones.

Smaller Elements

If the people eat more cheese they will naturally eat less of something else supplying the same amount of the proteins, and as scientists aver that the human stomach is growing smaller constantly it is an interesting problem to work out.

Grading of commercial cheese was mentioned by the speaker as receiving the attention of graders and commended in others. Ninety-six per cent. of the cheese is graded now.

Cleanliness in factories and conditioned cheese close study of marketing conditions and a continuation of high quality and steady supply. Nothing less than the economic-social of scientific methods should satisfy the Canadian cheese producer and exporter.

Marketing services necessary, continued his hearers, and the government section was mentioned by the speaker as a very important cog in the wheel of better conditions and prices for cheese producers, and the speaker promised the active co-operation of the Department of Agriculture in the effort to improve conditions and achieve the best results possible.

Chairman Miller

Miriam million dollars represented the Canadian cheese output this year, and the whole dairy business in Canada touches the welfare of more Canadians than any other industry. The cheese industry is in a fair condition now, but it calls for the best efforts of all concerned, skill, courage, intelligence, energy and good will.

Dr. Barton was introduced by Historian E. V. Illey and the appreciation of the audience was expressed by Mackenzie Robertson.

President Joe Shoob presided and the musical part of the program was in the able care of Sandy Burrows and Leo Riggs. J. Alex Cameron contributed "The Pirate Song" to the program with great acceptance. Rev. Dr. Semple gave the invocation.

Guests at the head table included the following: Dr. Geo. H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa; Dr. A. L. Olson, Superintendent of The Dairy Industry Division, Ottawa; Dr. C. F. Bigelton, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa; Thos. J. Hicks, Senior Dairy Produce Grader, Department of Agriculture, Montreal, Quebec; C. W. Barr, Director of Dairying, Ontario Department of Agriculture; James Henderson, Dairy Produce Grader, Toronto; L. Burgess, Chief Division of Dairy Produce, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa; C. O. Fraser, Inspector, Montreal, National Dairy Council of Canada, Ottawa; H. H. Dean, Dairy Commissioner of The Eastern Dairy School, Kingston.

POLICE BLOTTER

Arthur Hagerman, Sliding youth, appeared before Police Magistrate and Justice of the Peace, this morning charged with forgery and uttering, and remanded in custody until tomorrow. The arrest was made by the Provincial Police following following complaints lodged against the accused charging him with alleged issuing of forged cheques.

Activities in and around local police circles proved quite slow last night during the past few days., The stay-at-home by pavements were the cause of many minor motor mishaps, but no major damage was reported locally to the authorities. A number of motor vehicles skidded into ditches, but there was no damage resulted. Yesterday wet snow falling in the city, covered streets and highways made traction difficult, and the road is in a slippery condition for motoring, however.

Production of Cheese Increases Says President

In his opening address to delegates, visitors, and members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at the convention held at the ninth annual convention of the Association at the city hall yesterday afternoon, president W. H. Dillenbeck, Napanee, in a brief review of the history of the organization during the past year called attention to the increased production of cheese general throughout this district during that period. The text of Mr. Dillenbeck's address follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

In opening the Ninth Annual Convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association I have a pleasant duty to perform and I feel it a very great honour indeed to be selected by my fellow makers as their choice for the past year.

I wish to first extend a welcome to all those in attendance at our convention and I also welcome the many very notable men in the Dairy World both upon our programme and in attendance to listen to and take part in our deliberations. I wish also to express my appreciation to the Mayor and Council and the fine, good citizens in the service clubs of the City of Belleville, who have so fully co-operated with us in the use of rooms and all choices exhibition a success.

Secondly, what a trend of the present season it is indeed pleasing to note the Dominion Dairy Branch Report, which shows an increase production of cheese of 15 per cent over 1935. Perhaps the most encouragement is to be found in the prices received on the various Cheese Boards which show an increase of approximately 27 per cent over 1935.

Renewed Confidence

Increased production and better prices would indicate a renewed confidence the season of 1937 with renewed confidence that we have a right but fair to assume that we can now make advances in the interests of Dairy Industry and be more interested in the production of cheese. May I express my thanks and those the gentlemen whereby Old Man Depression will be dumped into the vally of forgotten things, and I am confident my fellow called Prosperity be crowned King.

The quality of cheese is not reported to be quite equal to last season's standard, but it is expected that the decrease may amount to nearly one point for the whole of the current year. This is not so good and we must strive by this convention is over that this be given the facts that will explain to all why all in advance I wish a Merry Christmas and a Bright and Prosperous New Year.

Before I take my seat, I wish to announce that owing to an unfortunate mishap Three Special Prizes were inadvertently omitted from the Prize List. These prizes are as follows:

First—Five gallon drum of cheese color.

To the exhibitor securing the highest aggregate score in Sections 1 to 7 inclusive.

Second—Five gallon drum of Rennet.

Beverage Rooms Also Meet Assault by Toronto Minister

ORANGE HEAD SPEAKS

Deputy Speaker Clarke of Legislature Allowed to Address Meeting

Campbellford, December 3—"If this gang can, in self-defence Protestants will be driven at last to unite for their own preservation and absolutely and forever abolish separate schools," said Rev. Dr. T. T. Shields of Toronto at the Orange Hall here on Wednesday evening. He was speaking on a program which had been arranged for himself and Cecil W. Armstrong of Toronto, Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario West in defense of public schools in connection with the campaign which is being waged to an issue on Wednesday of next week as East Hastings riding goes to the polls to elect a successor to the late Senator F. Hill in the Legislature.

Into the small building were crowded hundreds, many sat on the edge of the platform, others sat on chairs and crowded into benches and scores stood throughout the three hour meeting. While there was a preponderance of sympathizers, there was evidence of a group of dissenters all the way.

Liberal Allowed to Speak

A feature of the evening was the courtesy bestowed by Dr. Shields and Mr. Armstrong in allowing Deputy Speaker of the Legislature J. H. Clarke, to speak. Dr. Shields saw him in the audience and a colloquy developed.

Dr. Shields referred to the invitations to the Premier and the Minister of Education to meet Dr. Shields on the issue here in Hastings. "I have received no reply" he said. "Mr. Clarke, they say, is Hepburn's authority and is the best to take his place? Dr. Shields referred to questions asked by Mr. Clarke at Deseronto the night before. "He could have spoken in the House on the school measure and did not. I was not a member of the House and could not. Here I am."

"Will you let me?" asked Mr. Clarke.

"Yes," answered the minister, "I think we are through."

At the close of the minister's address, Mr. Clarke was accorded the opportunity to speak for a time which lasted less than one extended to about half an hour in all. Mr. Clarke spoke with little interruption; the few that came extended by coming mainly from one woman elector, who at last remarked "and this in an Orange Hall."

"Shut up!" was heard from the audience, and the speaker and the chairman asked for a hearing for Mr. Clarke. Right make right proponents, Gods-nature marked this entire proceedings.

The Toronto Globe and Mail was assailed in no uncertain terms, the champion of independence he charged was journalistic hypocrisy. Dr. Shields compared the paper to the ant, and said it might be called the 'Morning Ant' so that it might be known as one of the smallest things on the earth. The Globe, he said, used to have a Globe robin. Who killed cock-robin, he asked.

"Ordinarily I take no part in politics as such," the minister said. "But I am a minister and when I became a minister, I did not cease to be a man. When I became a parson I did not cease to be a citizen," he remarked.

Duty of Government

"It is not the function of Governments at any time to teach religion. Government has not an element of compulsion. No law is effective without a penalty and behind the penalty there must be a sufficient executive to clothe the law with power. Compulsion has nothing to do with religion, which relates to a man's relationship to God.

"Sure, we shall all agree in the realm of conscience the state has no right to interfere. In Ontario we have many religions. Now all these religions should be equal before the law. Government has a right only to secure to man absolute freedom of conscience in matters of religion. I would fight for the freedom of my Roman Catholic friends as I would fight for my own church we thought we had done with this compulsion in religion.

"This is the first time the people of Ontario have had any opportunity to give an opinion on Mr. Hepburn's administration, especially the school question."

At this point Dr. Shields recited a parody on "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star," issued in the Toronto Star. His version was

"Twinkle, twinkle Little Star,
How I wonder what you are Like a glowworm in the ditch."

Gov't Injustice—Religious

Dr. Shields declared that he regretted that it was not possible to have discussed the election issue of this day without introduction of the religious issue. He stated that the amendment to the Assessment Act in regard to division of school taxes was a "religious measure" and "strangely it mentions only Roman Catholics and says nothing about Protestants. You cannot discuss this amendment without discussing religion."

"For a moment he digressed to say that though he was installed by Mr. Hepburn, spiritual adviser to both Mr. Howe and Mr. Drew, 'he did not know them personally.'

"If Mr. Howe and Col. Drew had not taken up this issue they would have shown themselves incompetent and unaware of the real issue. This matter of religion is mentioned in the Bible," he said.

Then he asked "Why did Hepburn introduce this bill? Mr. Hepburn told us he had no understanding with the Roman Catholic hierarchy with respect to separate schools, and that there was no promise that he should do so."

No Mandate Says Shields

"He had no mandate from the people. Why then did the chairman of the Separate School Rate-payers—Mr. Ross Kennedy—call voters to the effect that no Catholic could vote for a Conservative but must vote for Drew or the Independent. This was marshalling strength for Mr. Hepburn. What had Hepburn done to justify such confidence? Was he asked him to introduce this amendment? Did any public school board, any church outside the Roman Catholic Church, did any municipalities ask for a change in the assessment law? Did any corporation, did Orange lodge, ask for it?

"Did anyone outside of the Roman Catholic Church say Hepburn to do this?"

Voices—"No".

He said—"Such bitterness as engendered now will be spread all over this entire province and who is responsible? Then the onus solely and wholly on the shoulders of Mitchell F. Hepburn for distracting the peace of Ontario".

Dr. Shields declared that while Separate school claimed they must live, he could see no reason for it. He said "I am an Orange Hall."

"Shut up!" was heard from the audience, and the speaker and the chairman asked for a hearing for Mr. Clarke. Right make right proponents, Gods-nature marked this entire proceedings.

Separate Schools Exist for the Teaching of Religion, Dr. Shields Declares—Says Hepburn Has Given Control of Education to Roman Catholic Church

(Special to Intelligencer)

Campbellford, Dec. 3—At this point Dr. Shields made a statement that will be heard with interest by the Roman Catholic people of Ontario. He said that Separate schools exist for the teaching of religion, Dr. Shields declared. He stated that Hepburn had given control of education to the Roman Catholic Church. He said that Separate schools claimed they must live, he could see no reason for it.

"This is the first time the people of Ontario have had any opportunity to give an opinion on Mr. Hepburn's administration, especially the school question."

Politicians Criticized

He warned politicians that the trouble with them was that they thought only of elections and not of the harvest to come.

"Mr. Hepburn, blind as a bat, asks 'who asked for the British, wise-cracking of something. I do not know what you call it. And yet you talk of 'privilege' to stand for it.

"Manitoba has no Separate schools and New Brunswick has no Separate schools. Prince Edward Island has no Separate schools, Nova Scotia has no Separate schools.

"I have to say all over this province that I am for education continued in self-defence Protestants will be driven at last to unite for their own preservation and absolutely and forever abolish separate schools."

Minor Operation and Major

Speaking from the angle of a surgeon, Dr. Shields said the operation is to be performed in East Hastings. "I am not a surgeon, some pains about East Hastings. About a week from now there is going to be a minor operation." But he went on to say that he had no hope except in a major operation for "this question will never be settled until it is settled right. The major issue is the separate school question."

Dr. Shields was about to close when he said if he had more time he would like to go back the beer parlors of the Hepburn era.

"Beer" Question Heard

"Can you stand it for five minutes?"

Beer Parlors Assailed

On shouts of "yes" he said that the beer parlor was a moral question. He had received thousands of communications from all over Ontario in support of his efforts against the beer parlors operating.

"Thousands of persons, not total abstainers have written me thanking me for the stand I have taken lately.

"On Jarvis Street, Toronto, within two blocks of my church there are 11 beer parlors. In all my travels abroad I saw not as much drunkenness as I could see from the steps of our church. The minister said, claiming that everyone was made a party to the liquor traffic "whether we like it or not, we are partners through the act of the Hepburn Government."

Dr. Shields said that in our days 'many young girls have learned to drink."

He said that now the Premier proposed a violation of the law to get a test case over the Liquor act. "There you have lawlessness on a small scale, I should not like to link with Mussolini or Hitler.

Do you know what is in the Magna Carta, the right to trial? Hepburn passes legislation forbidding a case to come to court at all. Mussolini abolishes courts and Mr. Hepburn if he had the power might do the same thing."

Deputy Speaker Heard

It was at this point that Mr. Clarke, the Deputy Speaker of the House, was at the request of Dr. Shields allowed to speak. Mr. Clarke said he came not as representing Mr. Hepburn but because he was in the district. He spoke of his high respect for Mr. Hepburn and said that portions of the $500,000 gift of Senator O'Connor went to Sick Children's Hospital, to charities, and to other institutions, some of which were not Catholic. "Frank O'Connor by sheer brains and honesty and fairness made his way in the most difficult field, manufacturing," he stated.

He said that he did not believe he was giving away any secrets when he said that Senator O'Connor was planning a partnership in the profits of the company for the employees.

The Deputy Speaker then took up the question of Dr. Shields, "who asked for the British, wise-cracking of something. I do not know what you call it. And yet you talk of 'privilege' to stand for it.

"Manitoba has no Separate schools and New Brunswick has no Separate schools. Prince Edward Island has no Separate schools, Nova Scotia has no Separate schools.

individual Catholics, but his complaint, he repeated was against the Church of Rome as an institution interfering in the government of the country.

History is Cited

He went on to say that: "Anyone who knows anything of history, knows that up to the time of the Reformation, there was not a government that was not a vassal of the church." Whatever references he made were not to individual Catholics who have proved their loyalty to their native land, Canada, and who were, he claimed what they were not by reason of the church but in spite of the church.

In regard to division of the school taxes, he declared that the crisscrossing of corporation business makes it impossible to say how much interest in corporations is owned by Protestants and how by Catholics. The Hepburn measures mean that Protestants are being compelled against their will to pay separate school taxes, he said.

Cecil W. Armstrong of Toronto, chairman, spoke at some length as the hands pointed well off on time.

Says Public Schools Models

He took the large crowd as an expression of interest in the public school system and congratulated the Orange lodge on its healthy condition in this part of the country.

"The public schools of this province are a pattern to all the provinces to the west of us. Experts have come from all parts of the world seeking knowledge and information on our schools", he said. Mr. Armstrong continued that Liberal opposition was allowed.

"Did you ever hear of a Roman Catholic river or other child refused admittance to the public schools? That is the reason why Protestants have a right to defend this great public school system. To hear some people talk you would think you had no right to public schools. You Orangemen take an interest in this issue.

"Before long Mr. Hepburn and others will understand that there are Liberals who will regard this as a great principle. When you vote on December 8th, you are not voting on the popularity of any individual, but a great principle—the public school system. Never in the history of this country was it so necessary that we should be on guard. We offer no apology for our interest."

He claimed that "you have a said Mr. Armstrong.

Fighting in Spain's civil war, centred for weeks on Madrid, spread further afield once more as loyalists launched counter offensives, after halting the attacking Franco's armies. Extent of new fighting is shown on this map. Black arrows show drives of loyalists, from out-lined areas the rebel moves. In the north loyalists were said to have advanced to Santander, and were threatening rebel headquarters at Burgos. 'ENROLLED IN THE CRADLE'

"England's future fighters 'enrolled at the cradle,'" a newspaper heading reads. Whatever the motives of man may be it was assuredly not nature's intent that these babelings should be born to suffer and to cause to suffer wounds, sufferings, discomforts and death in a means of settling international disputes which are admittedly against the principles of life and civilization. As one thinks of these little fellows, in Italy, one must think of other little fellows in other lands who may face just the same situation if or when war does come. It should be the hope and prayer and effort of all that when the time comes these dwellers of the cradles have become youth, they will find that they are not needed to be fighters. Perhaps that hope is too utopian but it is not too high an ideal to aim at.

THE NEW LANGUAGE

How the great of the world are using a new language, so direct that it startles because people are not accustomed to it from leaders is told in an editorial in the New York Times which under the heading "Compliments of the Season" declares that "our brave new world reverberates with brave new words." The writer says that frontiers between nations remain as exclusive as spite fences, but one medium of exchange, the flow of loud language remains uncurbed. "Once" he comments, "such words would have sent diplomats packing and have mobilized armies, such words would make the "conventional declaration of war sound like anti-climax. Finally he says that these threats and challenges sound "like the boasts of small boys calling names across the back fence and during the other side to come out and fight."

Then follow samples of the new language which passes current coin in some official circles.

Here is a sample for instance, from a pamphlet issued by the Japanese War Ministry urging the necessity of expanding the "inadequate" military forces:

The Soviet has constructed impregnable forces on the border and is in a position to pounce on Manchukuo at a moment's notice, glaring across the frontier with the eyes of a tiger."

Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs, brushes aside official discretion with the dead language of diplomacy to tell the All-Union Congress:

We have exact information that Italy, wishing at any cost to follow in the footsteps of her new mentor, Germany, has asked Japan to conclude an agreement analogous to the published portion of the Japanese-German agreement.

"And while the head of the historic Soviet of Leningrad, which he describes as an open window looking abroad, specifically warns Finland:

We are not afraid of little countries, of course. But if they do not mind their own business we may be compelled to open our window a little wider, and it will be just too bad for them if we are forced to call the Red Army into defensive action.

Speaking on Sunday before a Peasant Congress which included delegates from twenty-one countries, General Goering, Germain Air Minister, declared that every one might as well understand that

We are today no longer as weak as when we went with our army into the World War in 1914, for we have brushed aside that institution called a parliament which once dared to lay hands on German honor. * * * It it becomes necessary * * * then I know that Germany's peasantry will seize the sword in its strong fists as has seized the plow.

Even Premier Blum, lifelong pacifist though he is obliged to boast that France "still possesses the most powerful military force in Continental Europe, except for Russia." Foreign Minister Edin emerges from a Cabinet meeting to declare categorically that Britain will fight if Belgium is attacked. If nations determine to return to the arbitrament of the sword, he said, it will be found that the terrible weapons science has forged can be wielded with no mean courage by the peoples who love their freedom * * * and intend to preserve it.

Mussolini's olive branch, "emerging from an immense forest * * * of 8,000,000 bayonets whetted to razorlike sharpness," following Hitler's famous Nuremberg speach, sets the tone for these compliments of the season. Open disagreements are openly arrived at by a competitive verbal parade of "the biggest air force," "the most powerful army," "the greatest navy," by such a parade of ill-will, in fact, that there is just a chance that the Governments-in-arms may be scared off by believing in one another's boasts of invincibility.

And the language of all seems so much alike!

I shall return again to my own Scotland,
For though the years have held us long apart
I still can hear the stormy wild seas breaking
Around a misted island in my heart.

Despite the years I know a Highland welcome
Will greet and draw me through an open door,
Where I may stand beside a smouldering peat fire
And feel that I am safe at home once more.

And I shall see gray mists that rise and vanish
Before the splendour of a setting sun,
And on the hills a hundred hues of heather
That glint and glow until the day is done.

When weary sails come homing to their harbour
I shall wait by as when I was a child
To hear a boatman singing in the gloaming
A Gaelic song in minor strange and wild.

I shall be proud again that I am Highland
When pipes come skirling down my own loved glen,
Bringing back dreams in which I loved to glory
Before I knew the tread of blood-stained men.

I must go home once more to this, my Scotland,
Since of my love it holds so great a part
That only seas around a misted island
Can still the restless longing in my heart.

WHEN AN INDUSTRY FINDS THAT IT HAS TO WORK TWENTY-FOUR HOURS A DAY to keep up with orders that's news in any language, good news to the firm and good news to those who secure employment thereby, besides being good news to the community in which such an event occurs. Deacon Shirt Company, a Belleville industry born over thirty years ago, has just gone on a twenty-four hour work schedule with a working staff increased accordingly, in order to keep up with an increasing flood of orders, including Christmas and spring orders, featuring the famous Grenfel cloth garments which have become so popular and the Deacon sport garments which were in such evidence at the recent Olympics in Germany. W. B. (Billy) Deacon began making Deacon shirts for men in a small room back of his retail store over thirty years ago. Since then the business has grown tremendously, absorbing his brother, Fred B. Deacon, who has been associated in the management for a number of years—then Fred H. Deacon, Jr., son of W. B., who has been the firm's contact man for some time and covers much ground each year visiting the trade. Recently John Deacon, son of W. B. Deacon, who has been in New York for several years, returned to Belleville and is now actively associated with the firm. This firm has always been an asset to Belleville and its increasing prosperity will contribute materially to the growing prosperity of Belleville, as a whole.

A BOY OF SEVENTEEN IS IN SING SING PRISON AWAITING EXECUTION FOR A BRUTAL MURDER. He went "up the river" last week. He killed a merchant whom he was attempting to rob. He makes the ninth occupant of a cell on Murderers Row under 21. There is another boy of 17, another of 18, and four of 19 years of age. All of these from one cesspool of crime, the East Side of New York City. Crime by juveniles seems to be on the increase and present a problem of far-reaching importance to all agencies which seek to build up Christian character in the hearts and lives of the young people of today. What a swift ride to destruction, seventeen years from the cradle to the electric chair.

It is said the rush of applications has swamped the staff.

LEADERS MEET

Premier "and if one of them is out, if you will give me a chance".

Cabinet Ousted

The rose multiplied a steely note. Pure fear for the future was tempted to capture the falsetto of the solid phalanx of humanity, which faced the Armouries. Some shouted, women shrieked as the Premier solemnly told them to hold attention. The Hon. Earl Rowe, the previous speaker, and who had been shielded in the rear, described as an "organization", attempted to stop this threat, when he had put up his hands and said, "I think it is only fair that you give the Premier a hearing."

Again came a prolonged roar. Men threw their hats in the air; women yelled and shrieked, hoots and catcalls emanated from the rear of the hall, as the Premier attempted to indulge in the fifteen minutes allotted him.

He held up his hand. "Give him a hearing" yelled a voice from the crowd. As if adding fuel to the flame, another sustained roar of voices broke out. The noise was deafening. Again the Premier attempted to speak and again the noise broke out. Feeling the physical effects of the brilliant address delivered an hour previous, and looking tired under the strain, the Premier with pale face, marked and caused by his efforts and the close humidity of the densely packed Armouries, turned away and took his seat. Chairman Ashley called for the rendition of the National Anthem, which was sung by all present as an accompaniment was hurriedly descended, and the meeting was over.

And as came to a conclusion one of the most wildly enthusiastic Liberal political demonstrations ever held in this part of the province, if not in the Dominion of Canada.

A densely packed mass of humanity, representative of all the nooks and corners of the Quinte district was jostling at East Hastings, filled every available corner of the Armouries as Madoc at an early hour yesterday morning, in spite of the fact, that proceedings did not start until one o'clock. It was estimated, that two hundred motor cars brought their way into the jostling, while the train service was forced to provide extra coaches to handle the various speeches over an installed loud-speaking system. And so throughout, when the Armouries was officially opened by the crowd, good-natured and jostling each other, and surged into the Armouries. In less than 15 minutes after the doors were declared open, every seat was filled and shoved their way in as though to get the best seats possible. And a highlight of the afternoon's proceedings was the presence of a large number of the fair sex, who demonstrated in no uncertain manner, that their particular candidate would be elected.

Large Crowd Outside

Outside the building a crowd estimated at over two thousand jammed the streets. Loud speaker systems carried to them the messages of the speakers. Inside, aisles were filled, even a standing room, of humanity. Provincial Police officers under the direction of Inspector Gardiner directed traffic, unloading the good-natured crowd to best places of vantage.

So intense was the crowd inside the building, that newspaper men of whom there were twenty or more, and a large staff of photographers, were forced to send their "copy" over an aerial route, which consisted of a telephone wire strung from the press desk to a spot high above the balcony where it was picked up by messengers and relayed to the wire.

As an early hour the political forces of the two party generalissimos commenced to muster. Down from every nook in the riding came, some alone riding in heavy wagons, antiquated automobiles and others in up-to-date cars filled every available parking space. Lumbermen from the north of the riding, miners from the east, and the farmers from the south and west came pouring up. An electoral army which included the peaceful village of Madoc to hear the various political chieftains engage in what was reported as the battle of the century.

A wildly enthusiastic crowd they filled the Armouries to overflowing at an early hour. Newspaper men had to fight their way through the dense throng. Good natured rivalry between various factions filled in the time of the long wait until the first of the principals of likely political drama appeared.

Enthusiastic Reception

At 1.50 p.m. a roar went through the building. Men stopped their immediate activities and craned their necks. The roar swelled as, escorted by Chairman Ashley, Hon. H. A. Boyce, the Liberal candidate, fought his way to the platform.

A few minutes later the roar increased to a full-throated cheer as the Hon. Earl Rowe in company with the Conservative candidate, Dr. R. H. Halbert, and Chairman Drew made their way to the platform. Photographers' bulbs flashed as the two country doctor candidates clasped hands. Mr. Rowe shook the hand of Dr. Boyce in a hearty clasp as more "shots" were taken. The platform party went into a friendly "huddle". From back of the density packed hall came a cry "We want Mitch". Another yelled "Le Dot".

Then came a louder roar. Hats flew in the air. Women uttered shrill cries. Men jumped on their seats and the cheering crescendoed into a high note as escorted by Provincial policemen, the Hon. Mitchell Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, gradually fought his way through an admiring throng to the platform. The Armouries became a babel of sound as the two political antagonists shook hands to the accompaniment of the flashing bulbs of a battery of newspaper cameras. Stalwarts of the two political opposing parties of Ontario, mingled temporarily in an interval of peace, while as the "shots" were taken.

The crowd surged toward the platform. Yells of "Hit down cane" rose from the rear of the building. Amateurs shook hands to the accompaniment of the flashing bulbs of a battery of newspaper cameras. Stalwarts of the two political opposing parties of Ontario, mingled temporarily in an interval of peace, while as the "shots" were taken.

Premier Hepburn

Premier Hepburn after a most hearty welcome, stated he was "glad" the opportunity to meet on a public platform the two contenders of the resurrected menace of the Tory party, Hon. Earl Rowe and Col. George Drew, but that he was not political editor. Rev. Merritt Price and Rev. Dr. T. Phillips Sills are on hand. I am not going to reply to the personal attacks that had been heaped on me because I would not dignify the intelligence of the electors of this riding by such procedure."

Hon. Mr. Hepburn took issue with Hon. Earl Rowe and Drew over the attack on his private secretary, Bruce Woolliver. This boy comes from an old Conservative family and was a fine athlete in St. Michael's College. "Political activity every respect," said the Premier. "My friend Earl Rowe knows he is an outstanding Canadian citizen who opened a chain of stores in this Province and has given employment to big his dues to the treasury. Why, I am informed, during the last two courts restored two million dollars to the treasury." Mr. Hepburn referred to the head of an industry who had made, he claimed, a dividend of 1,000 per cent. for many years, and said that the head of Mr. Woolliver's family was employed of whom so much has been heard.

Million Surplus In Lands Dept.

Charging maladministration of the Lands and Forest Department he quoted figures, he said, to show that the deficit in the administration in 1932 was $262,000, in 1933 $290,000 and in 1934 the surplus was $692,000, and $870,000 and "we predicted the surplus this year would be over a million dollars. He said that $1,000,000 had been given away to exploiters and at present the government had recovered over 10,000 square miles and the end was not in sight. The Premier claimed by the action of the present government 12,000 men had been gainfully employed and the Provincial Police was rapidly repairing the lost manhoks for pulpwood.

Succession Duties

"I can say," remarked the Premier, "that the Succession Duty branch has investigated an estate and that more than one million and a half dollars has been recovered for the Province, an estate that was declared cleared by the late Henry regime." Mr. Hepburn told the audience that more than 31 millions had been collected by this department since he assumed office and he charged that between 30 and 40 millions of dollars had been lost to the Treasury through alleged maladministration by the former Government. The Premier praised the administration of J. M. Godfrey as Securities Commissioner, stating that Mr. Godfrey decided on a surety ship for a firm, the bonds were handed over his keys and then went home and ended his life. The firm had misled customers out of $1,000,000, Mr. Hepburn asserted.

Premier Hepburn also stated that there was a deficit in the department in the Province of $14,000 or $14,000 but that Mr. Godfrey only had a surplus of $60,000 and that more than 31 high treasure salaries men had been cleaned out or one held in Toronto. He explained to the audience that he had asked Hon. Charles McCrea, former Minister of Mines, and Col. Drew and Mr. Godfrey but said that Mr. McCrea had declined to do so.

Highway No. 7 Costs

Dealing with Provincial Highway No. 7, Mr. Hepburn told the audience that the cost of the road was $900,000 or $1,000,000 but the 50 per cent clause Hastings County's share was $196,000, "it has been stated by the Opposition," said the Premier, "that the Province was to bear the entire cost of the highway, that is an informed by Mr. Smith, deputy minister of highways, who was the officer in the same position under the Henry Government that there was no such arrangement with the County but the Department did spend the money and they built the three years. One of my first acts when I assumed office was to take off the 20 per cent maintenance clause from the municipality, and since that time not one cent has been assessed against any municipality.

Turning to the financial statement produced by the Premier at other meetings from the Provincial Auditor showing the financial condition of the Province at the present time, the Premier stated that Hon. Mr. Rowe had stated, that "I misrepresented Mr. Rowe's words in that statement. Again I state that I never spoke to Mr. Brown about the net debt and I say again that that is the reply, that I am handing to Hon. Mr. Rowe and he can judge for himself whether or not there is not a surplus of three millions since the end of the last fiscal year till the present time."

Says Assessment Act Antiquated

The Premier took up the School question and said that he proposed the change made in the Assessment Act, that it was old and antiquated and the changes made only dealt with municipalities where there is a separate School and "I say again that in the municipalities where new corporations in the municipality people in that community will benefit by the legislation." He stated how the grants to public schools had increased by $744,000 and grants to separate schools had increased $221,000 in the past five years and in Hastings County the decrease had been from $8,000 in 1929 to $3,000 in 1936.

"The load has been placed on the cities," said the Premier, "but the country are out of the picture. You are condemning this Act without trial."

Just then a voice from the hall cried out, "Did you come glad?" and the Premier quickly replied, "Yes, and I paid my own way."

Power Contracts Repudiated

The power question came into the limelight at the meeting when the former commission had contracted for $400,000,000 of power, which was unsaleable and in fact in some cases there was not even transmission lines to carry it, and with an interest charge of 3½ millions. "These are the contracts that I repudiated," said the Premier, "and if necessary I will call a special session of the legislature to protect my action for never again while I am Premier will any power contracts be signed that will be a burden to the Provincial Treasury.

Replying to the address of, Hon. Earl Rowe, the Premier came forward to make a plea for fair play, the audience would not allow him to speak. Above the din, he stated that he had been told followers intended to give to Mr. Rowe a fair hearing and as the Conservative leader was greeted by a chorus of boos and catcalls. The Premier stood his ground while a voice bellowed "You can't take it," and the Premier hotly retorted, "I can take it if you give me a chance and I can dish it out too." The fifteen minutes allotted for his address slipped by and Premier Floyd Ashley declared the meeting closed and asked the audience to sing the National Anthem before dispersing.

Dr. Welsh Heard

Amid the cheers and boos of the huge gathering Dr. R. Welsh attacked the Hepburn Administration, speaking on the lack of confidence in it during the past 2 years.

"I would like to ask the Premier three questions," he said, "first, regarding northern development. Why has Peter Heenan been cut off from his spending campaign? Why was his private secretary dismissed? Is it the amount of money being spent in East Hastings being spent in Midland Hastings, and is it material to gain votes on Dec 9th. 3rd. Why was Highway No. 7 turned back on the county at a cost of $178,000? Cries of "Henry did it").

Dr. Welsh declared that in all Liberals dissenting on the Separate School Question. What was done to bring them into lead? Why didn't Hepburn have the courage to send the issue to the country?

Attacking the Hepburn Administration Dr. Welsh said that failed to fulfil their election promises and condemned them for flagrant dismissals of officials and returned soldiers, increased taxation, decreased service, and the Separate School issue.

"I am in favor of giving employment to every man in Canada, who needs it," said the speaker, We wish to give our children the chance so that in years to come they will have a broader outlook on life and equal in social balance."

Charging that the Hepburn administration had bribed the people with their own money and "voted had the gall to advertise it", the Conservative leader weathered a storm of cheers and boos during which he was forced on several occasions to answer the gibes of interjectors from the crowd.

He denounced in no uncertain terms the policies of the Hepburn Administration, stating his attacks mainly on the Separate School issue and the Hydro contracts.

Repudiate Repudiators

"I said I would repudiate the repudiators, the biggest of whom is Mr. Hepburn here," he said, "and I will do that as soon as I get the chance! I will never spoil the Province's integrity just to obtain Hydro rate reduction."

"I have always found my good friend Mitchell Hepburn a gentleman," Mr. Hepburn declared, "but I never indulged in personalities in the campaign. I stand on my record and will give none. We have always fought a good fight."

Rose and laughter greeted the speaker's denial of knowing a certain public scandal.

"How could I know him as well as Messrs. Mosher and King when every party took $780,000 from a plant that Mr. Hepburn claims I got big sums of that money went to finance the last election campaign. That is the evidence."

"It's a darned good one", yelled a voice.

It contains his picture and a statement that the debt was $90 millions two years ago. His following "others" and stated that the debt was $98 millions. Figure it out for yourself was what he left them with, a saying of three millions or not."

Claim Promises Broken

Amid a loud storm of jeers and boos the Conservative leader said Hepburn record was a "long boulevard of broken promises", which was climaxed by the enactment of unrevealed and unpronicled legislation for which he had no mandate. "I refer" he said "to the Assessment Act Amendments."

He stated that the Hepburn Government used "rebind robin" tactics to whip dissenting members into line, and that the Assessment Act was "the most dangerous, dummy piece of legislation ever drafted," because Hepburn, himself admitted it had been confused about it.

"It is dangerous because it is the first instance of seizure of private rights of the province", he said. "The last quarter century saw the slimming down of rights through strife. The bill never had a mandate from the people and it must date from the people and it must be removed from his face.

"As surely as December 9th will come Liberal Doctor Welsh will be returned by one of the biggest majorities ever registered in this province," he said as he sat down.

Mr. M. Armstrong of Ottawa, formerly of this city, was a visitor in Belleville yesterday.

A very pleasant event took place yesterday afternoon when about a score of life-long friends of Mrs. George Stewart, North Front Street, surprised her with a party and comforts shower at the home of Mrs. Clarence Milligan, next door neighbor of Mrs. Stewart. Indicative of the love and esteem held for Mrs. Stewart, who for the past two or three years has been totally blind, an additional token in the form of a small purse of money was presented to her, and an afternoon tea served in her honor by Mrs. Milligan and Mrs. Fred Orser. The afternoon's pleasantry was brought to a happy close with a brief prayer led by Mrs. Brownson of North Front Street, and a few heartfelt words of thanks by Mrs. Stewart.

Newest Cookery Demonstrated By Mrs. McLean

Cooking School Held at Christ Church Parish Hall

Two delicious dinners, demonstrating oven and steamer cooking, were prepared before the eyes of an interested audience in Christ Church Parish Hall as Mrs. E. McLean, Home Service Director of Moffat's conducted the second day's cookery classes. The school is under the auspices of the Belleville Hydro and is held through the co-operation of Christ Church Parish Guild.

Mr. Everett Smith, representing the Belleville Hydro, opened the school and Mrs. McLean was soon busily at work. Fragrant cookery odours were wafted from the steam kitchen and the various dishes, even in the process of preparation, looked most inviting.

A savoury roast, baked potatoes, carrot casserole, rice pudding were included in the oven dinner, while sausage rolls, hamburg steak roast and candied sweet potatoes were also demonstrated.

The steamer-cooked dinner began with veal birds (chops stuffed with prune-filled dressing) and included vegetables and steamed apples dish with syrup.

As Mrs. McLean prepared the various dishes she chatted in a friendly fashion with her audience, pointing out ways in which to simplify cooking and also to save electric bills.

Mr. Smith gave an interesting talk on the advantages of showing that it was the cool, safe, clean fast, economical, healthful and modern manner of cooking.

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 3 (CP) — Martin White of Parliament is going back to the sea, the chilling that nearly claimed his life about two months ago.

White was one of seven survivors of the Sand Merchant which foundered in Lake Erie, Oct. 31, with the loss of 17 lives. The aged, blinded White's 19-year-old son, Ha...

"Yes," said White today as he moved his right arm, battered by the buffeting of 11 hours he spent in the stormy lake waters before being rescued. "It's my expectation, sea-faring, as I'm going right back at it. Anyway, it's the only trade I've got and I'm too old to start learning another one.

Woodward, Okla., Dec. 3 (CP) — J. E. McCoy, oil company employee, was driving his heavily loaded truck along a muddy road, suddenly the truck skidded, overturned.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Dec. 3 (CP)—Thirty-five years ago Louis Belanger planted a spruce tree on his property. Today, grown to a height of 25 feet, it represented a memorial—final Yuletide gift—standing in the city park as the community's Christmas tree. It was cut down after his death so there would be room to bury his body.

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Education of Toronto's junior car drivers in the city's secondary schools may result from a resolution which was debated at last night's session of the Board of Education. Proposed by Trustee S. Tupper Bigsby, the motion asks the Board to adopt such a course, it further recommends that the superintendent of schools prepare a draft scheme for such instruction and that the business administrator estimate the cost of the plan, including insurance.

Lindsay, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP) — Because of injuries received in a hunting accident, James Mackey, member of the Lindsay Board of Water Commissioners, was unable to leave his home to attend a regular meeting of the Board. Accordingly, the other members assembled at the Mackey home and business was transacted in routine manner.

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)— A battered hulk of wood, canvas and metal took its place today in the Smithsonian Institution here with the honored relics of aviation pioneering.

Once it was an airplane—the first to cross the continent.

W. M. S. AUXILIARY OF ST. ANDREW'S, BELLEVILLE

On the afternoon of Wednesday, the 2nd of December, a large number of ladies braved the storm to attend what is considered perhaps one of the most important meetings of the year, as upon it depends very largely the success of the meetings of the next year. This meeting, the last one of the present year, is climaxed a very prosperous one of endeavor by the W. M. S. Auxiliary of St. Andrew's, and to equal it much will be required of those who have charge of the work during 1937.

Mrs. Fargey, the president, was in the chair, and in the unavoidable absence of Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. D. L. Fleming acted as recording secretary. After the opening of the meeting by Mrs. Fargey, the president, Psalm selection 100 was read.

The president read the Scripture lesson from the 15th chapter of the Gospel by St. Luke, and followed the reading by prayer. Then the two first verses of Hymn 399 were sung.

The various officers gave a resume of the past year's work under their charge, which showed the Auxiliary to be in a very prosperous condition as it is handed over to the 1937 officers.

Verses 3 and 4 of Hymn 399 were sung after which the officers of the new year were elected. The meeting was then closed with prayer.

PROBLEMS DISCUSSED

Speakers Advise Makers to Keep Factories Always Clean

Marked by instructive addresses from those who are most closely connected with the industry, the opening session of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association at the city hall on Wednesday afternoon was recorded as one of the most successful on record.

The meeting, opened by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. J. Nicholson, V.G., who delivered the invocation, was later addressed by Mayor Harry Hill, who extended the welcome of the city to the visitors.

"When I know that the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association intended holding their ninth annual convention in the district I took no time in having Belleville chosen as the location of the convention," said Mayor Hill.

"For Barton has told you that Belleville is one of the best, and perhaps the best location in Ontario for such a convention, and I believe he is right. We can only hope, that Belleville will be the same site for the tenth convention, which is to be held next year, and hope also that this ninth convention will be just the start of a bigger and better convention and getting in the years to come.

"All this time," as chief magistrate, I wish to convey a hearty welcome to all members and visitors to Belleville and extend the hope that your stay will be an enjoyable and instructive one," added Mayor Hill.

Ideal Spot For Convention

W. H. Newman, Belleville, responded to the address of Mayor Hill and the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, pointed to the fact that while "Communistic forces" were today sweeping through the country at the present time, cheesemakers had set the example by meeting together upon the convention as its context.

Belleville as the location of the convention was an ideal one, was the opinion of the speaker. "Belleville has learned the name to year after meeting and has been more than impressed by its hospitality. It is a pleasure all honor for Belleville to be associated with such a worthy fraternity, and the name Belleville has become more than a mere name of a city, it represents one of the richest districts in Ontario. This is a reputation, that must be upheld at all costs," added the speaker.

Mr. W. I. Hicks, instructor, Picton, in an address on dealing with the with mechanical defects in the making of cheese, pointed out that more acidy cheese had been made in Prince Edward County this year than for some time past. "Tracing this trouble to its source "ripe milk" was held as the greatest contribution to this difficulty.

One other fault now being experienced at the present time was too high cooking of the cheese, it was stated. To remedy this fault, later knifing of the curds was advocated. Rancid cheese was also being observed in some factories and to this matter, which became more serious because whole shipments were liable to be affected, throughout cleaning of milk cans was held out as the only solution of a vending evil. "But they must be steamed right, that a while two of steam is not enough to clean them right," impressed Mr. Hicks.

A demonstration of part of a milk can was undertaken by the Prince Edward County cheesemaker, who showed the delegates the difference between milk containing rancid ferment day and those made years ago, when, it was claimed, pure tin coating had been used in preference to the galvanized coating of the present make.

The year 1937 will be a better year for farmers and cheese makers alike, it was expressed by Mr. Hicks, who added that during the past several years not enough money had been received for the hard work, that was involved in making cheese.

Respect For Makers

Dr. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, introduced by Superintendent Publicover, declared his respect for cheese makers had daily grown as the time when he, as a boy, had delivered milk to them. "Then they were looked upon as solid, substantial citizens of the community. The same holds true even today," he added. "But the responsibility of the cheese maker has increased as the years went along. The cheese maker now has to be described as the master key of the whole industry."

Referring to his recent trip through the British Isles during which time he had the opportunity of studying at first hand marketing methods now in force overseas, the Deputy Minister stressed keener competition facing Canadian salesmen in the future.

"The whole world of recent years has become more highly individualized as regards selling. In these days the product must be good. Our position in the future will be harder to hold than it has ever been before. Every country in the world, with more highly developed production year by year is fighting for its own markets. Canada must not fall behind in the struggle", he reminded.

The cheese maker, as an employee, considering facts and circumstances notorious handicaps in his business, factors which range all the way from peculiar condition of the district he is in to the marketing of his product, declared Deputy Minister Barton.

Commending the Central Ontario Cheese Makers for the interest they have shown year after year in the arrangement of their annual convention, Dr. Barton pointed out that only through interest and organized effort was the betterment of the industry possible.

Great Task to Be Done

"Cheese and the industry as a whole has been given a new lease on life this year, but we can't stand still here. There is still a great deal to be done, for example, in the way of markets, or exploring new channels of trade. If the cheese makers have one weakness it is that they cover too much territory and do not focus their attention upon particular aims or objects", declared the Deputy Minister.

Mr. L. A. Zufelt, former superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School in answer to statements made by previous instructors, referred rancidity and "highest flavors in cheese. No one knew particularly, where this rancidity was developed, he pointed out. "And until they do find out no one will know exactly how to overcome it," it was added.

Bacteria responsible for the improved qualities in cheese were declared to be handling every effort in overcoming this great fault, according to Mr. Zufelt. But the matter must be tackled in a thorough scientific manner, it was added. "We must keep some scientist with years of experience in milk and the products made by milk to do this job right. He must be given a free hand and allowed to say on the same job," he declared. Rancid flavors are the cause of the most serious defects in cheese today. Ottawa should devote its whole time to the matter.

"At one time it was believed that this rancidity came from the milk of certain cows, but there has been no sustained effort to solve this. It will take time, but it will be further than we are today."

Mr. Zufelt of the cheese industry with particular reference to "make" as carried on at the present time by the majority of factories, high temperatures for cooking was declared entirely unnecessary by the speaker. "The whole process of cheesemaking depends upon moisture control in the curd", it was stated.

Cut Curds Finer

"Cut your curds finer instead of increasing temperatures. By keeping your particles of curd small you are able to get rid of this excess moisture. If you had a knife or to hold than it has ever been before. Every country in the world, with more highly developed production year by year is fighting for its own markets. Canada must not fall behind in the struggle", he reminded.

"Fat this time," as chief magistrate, I wish to convey a hearty welcome to all members and visitors to Belleville and extend the hope that your stay will be an enjoyable and instructive one," added Mayor Hill.

No More Coughing or Sleepless Nights

Mr. A. A. Gilson, of Aberdeen, Ontario, writes: "For years I suffered from Coughs, Colds, Winter 'flu' and Bronchitis. I tried many cheap-skate tablets and coughed and coughed and coughed, and my wife and children caught it from me and could scarcely sleep at night. Then I got a free sample of MINARD'S LINIMENT and a bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT. Results were magical—sensational—no more sleepless nights—no more coughing—no more colds. I have taken no other medicine since. That is today a year from that time. I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT for all other cough and cold troubles in the family."

Stockdale Group of W. A. Banquet

On Monday evening, November 30th, the Merrymakers' Group of the Stockdale W. A. held a Mother and Daughter Banquet in the basement of the United Church. Invitations were sent to the mothers and daughters in the community and only a few were absent.

The basement of the church was prettily decorated in yellow, pink and green. The tables were arranged in a U formation with Mrs. J. A. Loft sitting at the head.

At 7.30 p.m. supper was served and a novel feature in the menu was that several Stockdale young men acted as waiters. The following toasts were given: "The King," proposed by Miss Mary Simmons; "The Church, proposed by Miss Helen Way and responded to by Mrs. F. Lenoir; "The Mothers, proposed by Miss Edna Clemens and responded to by Mrs. F. Elliott. The toast to the Daughters was proposed by Miss Thelma Way and responded to by Mrs. P. Way.

Mrs. J. F. Lane, chairman, led in community singing. Mrs. S. Oxley then introduced Mrs. J. A. Loft, who gave a helpful and interesting talk to the mothers and daughters. The singing of the Doxology brought the pleasant evening to a close.

must be used more freely in the future because the calcium phosphate content in the milk was declared as important as the rennet is used. "Phosphates stimulate the root growth and if you have this you have more feeding power and better pasturage. That is one thing that must be taught at Campbellville to the dairy patrons," declared Dr. Gibson.

MRS. FARRINGTON ON TRIAL FOR LEAD POISONING DEATH

Admission Read That She Mixed Sugar of Lead With Flour

USED IN SOUP

Kitchener, Ont., Dec. 3—(CP)—Charged with the murder of Walter Ritter, Wellesley Township farmer, by whom she was employed as housekeeper, Mrs Beatrice Farrington, 40, was committed for trial by Magistrate John R. Blake in police court at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing.

A voluntary statement given by the accused after statutory warning by provincial constable Albert Whiteside, high constable for Waterloo County, was read in part to the court by Crown Attorney Harry C. Clement and contained the admission that the accused mixed sugar of lead she found in a bag in the house, with flour which she used in making soup. Her statement read that she first drank some of the sugar of lead in a glass of water, Ritter the statement, invited her to drink some of the soup which contained the lead poisoning.

Parts of statements put in at the inquest by Charles W. Forsyth, consulting chemists, and Dr. Frankenstein, medical officer to the Attorney General's Department were read by Mr. Clement in the absence of evidence in the hearing. The Ewing statement outlined that he examined the contents of the canned Ritter, and found sufficient lead in the liver to cause death.

There was also the presence of lead found in the bone marrow but no actual quantities.

Dr. Frankish's statement indicated he concurred in the findings of the examining chemists. He had no hesitation in stating that Ritter came to his death by lead poisoning.

J. H. Roebuck, Toronto Counsel, acting for Mrs. Farrington asked the privilege of cross examining the constable Whiteside before admission as evidence of Mrs. Farrington's statement.

He examined officials and court stenographer Charles Phelps to bring out the circumstances under which the statements were taken from the woman.

Constable John R. Blake ruled that the statement was admissable and committed the woman for trial at the next Assizes before Mr. Justice Middleton.

Crown Attorney Clement stated he would not proceed now with an attempted suicide charge against Mrs. Farrington. He would found guilty of the murder charge it will likely not be necessary to proceed with the suicide count," the court said.

HOOPSTERS OPEN CAGE SEASON AT ARMOURIES

Playing on their new basket ball court in the Armouries the local Y. M. C. A. annual house basket ball league swung into action last evening with a dual bill. Art Cole's "Gold-diggers" boogeyed forward at Wickerson's whither by the score of 27 to 26 in a thrilling finished contest since while in the nightcap fixture, Captain Owen Atkins' "blacks" proved too sturdy for the White's "purples" and won in a decisive manner 39 to 7. Taking into consideration the games were the initial fixtures of the season, some fast and hard-checking basket ball was seen throughout.

Cecil Edwards' last second basket gave the "golds" two points and brought them from behind as they downed the "whites" 27 to 26 in the opening tussle. At the half way mark Art Cole's charges were leading 12 to 13, but a determined and centred offensive attack on the part of Al Wickerson's gave the aforesaid gang the lead. The "whites" were leading at the greater part of the second stanza, but a last minute rally on the part of the "golds" gave them the first taste of victory in this fast-travelling city league.

Dickens Star For Losers

Jack Dickens, of the losing "whites" was the scoring ace of the game with 13 points to his credit. Dickens played a fine game, his dribbling on basket being worthy of note. Cole with ten, Edwards eight and Wickerson and Miller six each, were the best of the marksmen. There was little to choose between the two teams, so closely matched were they throughout the entire game.

The second fixture saw Owen Atkins' "Blacks" lay down a stiff defence, led by Gordon, and thus proved too formidable [illegible] White's "Purples" and saw the latter lose 39 to 7. At the [illegible] mark the score stood 11 to 3 for the black-sweatered outfit. Led by Herb Hurley and Gordon, the "blacks" showed too much experience and speed for the slow-moving "purple" shower. Muir scored the only two baskets counted by the losers. Burgess Gordon and McCabe were the marksmen for the winners. A double header of Y.M.C.A.-sponsored city league basketball will be played at the armouries every Wednesday night for the remainder of the year. The games are fast and thrilling and with basketball progressing in favor, larger crowds are attending the pastimes each succeeding year.

What O.H.A. groupings are in store for local hockey fans will not be made public until after Friday night's O.H.A. executive meeting. Numerous rumors are floating around regarding a possible grouping, that would include all three, mediate clubs from Whitby to Kingston. How any sane person can expect a town the size of Whitby (merely used as an example) to finance an intermediate O.H.A. team and travel to Belleville and Kingston is rather hard to understand. "Sandy" Burrows, local member on the O.H.A. executive, today refused to comment on the possible groupings. "This matter will be left entirely in the hands of the executive, who meet Friday", stated Mr. Burrows.

One of the paramount questions confronting the hockey moguls along the Lake Ontario district is whether or not Oshawa will sponsor an intermediate team, as well as another team in the Senior City hockey moguls decided to enter an intermediate team in the Oshawa, Peterboro and the O.C.A.F. "Fliers" could be included in an "A" set-up. Manager Eddie Thomas feels the Redmen should not be grouped with clubs that are known to have a roster of star players. If a three team "A" group can be formed in this district, however, Manager Thomas is willing to step in and present his Redmen to round out a four teamed loop, that is if the other associations are granted like as was the case last year when the Redmen were given a bye into the "B" finals after finishing a schedule with "A" class teams.

"There is little possibility of Kingston being represented in the O.H.A. this winter, although no details or confirmations have been given out from that city. Trenton has entered a "B" team, also Cobourg, Port Hope and Bowmanville. Peterborough and the O.C.A.F. "Fliers" are of "A" group quality while Belleville, a "B" team last year, is not as strong this season and will expect to remain in that category. All-in-all it looks as though the O.H.A. has quite a mixture on their hands to untangle on Friday night. In the meantime only two juniors clubs in this district have intimated their intentions of operating, Bellevue and Napanee. Incidentally all O.H.A. groupings will be announced on Saturday, it is expected.

The annual pre-season Y.M.C.A. house basket ball league has been moved to the Armouries, where the loop opened with a doubleheader last night. Art Cole's Gold-clad lads eked out a last-second 27 to 26 win over Al Wickerson's Whites in the opener while Owen Atkins' "Blacks" trimmed Vic White's "purples" 28 to 7 in the nightcap affair. The new court at the Armouries gives the players plenty of room in which to display their wares and the sport fans of the Belleville get basket ball conscious we feel assured the game will make rapid progress in this city. Basket ball is perhaps the fastest team game played. Nights of fast eight's games were thrillers although "blanks" set-up too strong a defence for the "purples" in the second game. The opening game, however, was a good, snappy game and one could wish to see the Whites' squad had a distinctive edge over their opponents at any stage of the game and a battle royal was the result. The house or city league will present two games of modern basket ball at the Armouries each Wednesday night and local fans are advised to keep this mid-week date open in the future. The local boosters are being augmented with a number of outstanding players from the R.C.A.F. base.

One week ago today a rather unique sporting event occurred in Madison Square Garden, when two former Belleville boys, Harry and Jack Doran, play hockey on the same day, but at different hours in the afternoon Harry Doran, who is with the Pittsburg Yellow Jackets Club, in the United States Eastern Amateur League, battled against the New York Rangers, while at night, in the International N.H.L. game, Jack "Red" Doran performed for the Americans as they battled a tie with the Rangers. Incidentally Jack watched brother Harry perform in the afternoon while in the evening Harry was the guest of "Red" for the big league game. It was a rather unique occurrence to have two former Belleville boys appear on different teams on the same date in the great Madison Square Garden.

Just when things were beginning to break in his favour, Squadron Leader Lawrence, manager of the R.C.A.F. "Fliers" received his discharge from the service and will return to Toronto for good. Of course the move is only temporary, but it will keep him away from his team during the greater part of the hockey season. His successor will be named before the team goes to Kingston tomorrow night.

Toronto Argos and the Montreal Red Indians were voted three positions each on the Intercollegiate-Senior All-eastern Canada football team today. Hamilton Tigers and the Ottawa Rough Riders were voted two places each while Sarnia and Balmy Beach got one player each on the mythical all-star squad. Absence of outstanding collegiate players from the first team was very marked this year, there not being a single senior college player named on the "first team". The "first team" was composed, for the greater part, largely of players from the "Big Four" International, while the "second team" saw Balmy Beach, Sarnia and senior O.R.F.U. players chosen, however....Doubtless Ab Bar, Balmy Beach kicking star, would be named as the punter for the "big team". The best Abe Elowitz could make this year was to be named as flying wing on the second team, however.

The National Hockey Guide Co. of 1 East 33rd St., New York City, has sent us a copy of the official 1937 National Hockey Guide as compiled by James C. Hendy and its 110 pages are chuck-full of interesting dope on the pro puck game. Final standings in a flock of U.S. and Canadian leagues, individual and team scoring weights and birth places of all the players, hockey rules, etc. and, it also has a summary on the amateur game. A mine of information and a valuable addition to our sports library.

The Lindsay Kolarians go to Toronto facing a seven point deficit in the second game of the intermediate O.H.A. play-downs versus Toronto Westsides. The Lindsay squad lost 9 to 2 at home. The Peterborough Collegiate C. O. S. S. A. senior football titleholders meet St. Michael's College in a sudden death game in the Little Lock City on Saturday. This game is the mid-section of Montreal city's scholastic section of the junior O.R.F.U. play-downs, the winner advancing into the finals with Windsor.

'Big Four' Places All but Two On All-Eastern Football Team No College Players are Chosen

Intercollegiate Fails to Place Single Player on Mythical First Team

VOTING DIVIDED

Argos and Montreal Place 3 Each on First Team, Tigers And Ottawa Get Two

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—Almost half of them blinking under such bright lights for the first time, 24 players came out of the all-star selection shuffle today as members of the fifth annual Canadian Press all eastern Touch-D-I teams. The first team was made up largely of Big Four International pro league lineup of Ontario Union and Intercollegiate players.

Massive Ormond Beach of Sarnia Imperials, behemoth of Canadian ballbacks and slender Ab Box of Toronto Balmy Beach, perhaps the best punter in the land, were the only non-Big Four players to break into the first team. For the first time in four seasons, Abe Elowitz of Montreal Indians was dropped to the second team.

Coaches and sports writers whose votes decided the league saw eye-to-eye pretty well down the line but in scrutiny of the choices on the best flying wing in the east they were sharply divided between Beach, Elowitz and Harry Sonshine of Queen's.

Final Ballots Decide

They were so sharply divided, in fact, that only the final ballots determined the placings. Sonshine, one of the great secondary defence figures in the sport, was left out. Two or three more votes would have put him in the squad, at least.

But Sonshine, unlike Beach and Elowitz, is strictly a defensive ace. His plunging success has been spasmodic in the Intercollegiate Union. Beach, playing for the mighty Balmy Beach line in Sarnia's crucial tests this season, was a consistent ground-gainer. He threw forward passes for gains.

Elowitz, regarded as the greatest all-around halfback in the country, starred for the Montreal Rough Riders, went to Montreal and put in another season of heroic work. But Coach Johnston couldn't find room. Otherwise the selectors were generally satisfied with the final lineup. Hamilton's steady Hank Hucul, who was the mighty Balmy Beach line in Sarnia's crucial tests this season, was a consistent ground-gainer. He threw forward passes for gains.

Elowitz, regarded as the greatest all-around halfback in the country, starred for the Montreal Rough Riders, went to Montreal and put in another season of heroic work. But Coach Johnston couldn't find room. Otherwise the selectors were generally satisfied with the final lineup. Hamilton's steady Hank Hucul, who was the mighty Balmy Beach line in Sarnia's Dunmer Stirling.

It was easy sailing Bobby Coulter of Argos for quarter and Fred Wigle of Montreal for end. Coulter was possibly the outstanding football player of the outstanding Big Four this year and in every university of Toronto, Bobby handled his team with skill. Wigle, mentally paused well, ran back kicks more effectively than any other safety man in the Big Four.

Not a great player at McGill, Wigle established himself there without an equal when he stood behind the mid-section of Montreal wing line and turned back the attacks. That Toronto line looked apart to permit Tommy Burns and Pete Jotkins to play back, needed all the backing Wigle could give it.

Pat Butler of Sarnia made a strong bid for inside, but the narrow margin to veteran George Wilson of Hamilton Tigers and heavyweights in this division, 250-pound Tiny Herman of Ottawa Rough Riders, cut short first-choice ballots. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police football expert had never achieved all stardom before.

Herman Beats Way In

Recognition came to the big fellow when he started to kick field goals. His place-kicking pulled Roughriders through some tough spots and, when the experts looked to see what Herman was doing in the line, they found him to be an exceptionally capable defender. There have been few better inside wings in recent years.

Montreal's Hank Jotkus went on the first team at middle on his record of previous years.

MY BIG HOCKEY THRILL

By WILF CUDE

As I look back over the long, hard grind which every hockey player experiences from the time he graduates from the small outdoor corner rinks until he reaches the National Hockey League, bitter disappointments and thrills intermingle in my mind.

One of the greatest thrills of my career occurred while I was a member of the Detroit Red Wings, playing the finals for the Stanley Cup against the Chicago Black Hawks during the 1933-34 season. Detroit were favorites to clinch the cup, due to their fine showing in winning the N.H.L. championship and eliminating the high-powered Toronto Maple Leafs. However, Chicago won the Stanley Cup in four games, but in defeat I realized a tremendous thrill—that of competing against the likes Charlie "Chuck" Gardiner, the finest and most efficient goal-tender that hockey has ever seen.

He turned in a superhuman performance to bring Chicago the first Stanley Cup. The Black Hawks were leading the series by two games to one and required but one win to clinch the cup. Prospects did not look so rosy for them as the Red Wings had trimmed the Hawks 5-2 on their own ice in the third game, and we all felt that the great work of Gardiner would finally crack in the next game. Chuck unveil, and with scars still unhealed as a result of injuries received earlier in the series, retired to Milwaukee to rest in between games, returning to Chicago to take his place in the nets for the fourth game of the series, which was played on March 19 with a crowd of 17,700 frantic fans. He shut out the Red Wings 1-0, after over twenty minutes of overtime.

Why "Chuck's" final game—one of the most spectacular performances ever given by a single player, and one of the greatest exciting incidents experienced by myself and shared by every fan of that capacity crowd.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 3.—(AP)—When Auburn gridders return to campus from their holiday junket to the Havana festival, they will have covered 11,000 miles and played three countries during the season. . . . They went to Canada on the trip to Detroit, stopped off in Mexico on the way home from the Santa Clara game, and now are packing up to go to Cuba, for a New Year's Day game there. . . . As said Giant Prexy Horace Stoneham before taking off for Montreal yesterday: "I'll bet right now Dizzy Dean has already been in Cuba. . . . He didn't mean to the Giants either.

Mickey Cochrane says he's serious about playing Hank Greenberg in the Tiger outfield and using Rudy York at first base. . . . A traffic judge here soaked old Jack Johnson 25 bucks for speeding. . . . Brooklyn fans are hoping because Prexy Ford Frick says he can't attend a dinner for Casey Stengel Friday night. . . . The blonde Norwegian lad from Frisco has replaced Reggie McNamara as the Iron Man of the six-day bike business.

There was a tackle on the Marquette team who stuffed his stockings before every game so his brilliant goalie wouldn't be hurt by enemy blockers. . . . Granville, on the shelf with a "tired" ankle, will return to racing next season. . . . Dr. Danno O'Mahoney, who once was a big shot in wrestling and wrestling clubs around town. . . . Detroit is willing to listen to offers for Gerald Simmons and Goose Goslin. . . . Cincinnati Reds are covered by seven Bill Myers, flashy shortstop, injured by injuries most of last season, is okey doke again.

Franco Georgetti, once a prime favorite, getting the Bronx cheer at the six-day bike races, right here. It hurt Franco so much he quit the race. . . . Of course, the fact that Franco was 19 laps behind ay the time had nothing to do with it.

AT THE BELLE

"Anthony Adverse" is the last word in magnificent entertainment.

This truly anxiously awaited Warner Bros. production, which had its Belleville premiere at the Belle yesterday, held audiences in a spell of breathless interest as reel after reel unfolded the vivid story of Harvey Allen's monumental literary classic.

The picture follows the romantic adventures of Anthony Adverse through five countries, across the seas and over three continents. For mammoth sets, for colorful and picturesque backgrounds, for dramatic action, for the unusual characterizations of its tremendous cast from Frederic March, the star down to the smallest bit player, for the glamor of its romance, its human interest and sheer, unadulterated entertainment, this picture is unsurpassed.

Warner Bros. have again accomplished the apparently impossible. It has a tremendous cast, with 2,000 bit players and extras, and 2,500 bit players and extras.

But all this, while full of color, is but the background for a drama of human life, its loves and hates, its hopes and its disappointments; its desires and passions; its vain and futile strivings and its real achievements.

Fredric March has given the screen some wonderful portrayals in the past but never has he risen to the heights of dramatic fire as in the title role of this picture. His Anthony is a living, breathing person, stepping out of a book into real life on the screen.

He is ably supported by Olivia di Havilland, who came to screen prominence with her work in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Captain Blood." This is Miss de Havilland's first great emotional role and she rises to it with true artistry.

Other loves of Anthony are found in the characterizations portrayed by Steffi Duna a fiery half caste with whom he lives in his African slave mart and Gale Sondergaard, the cruel and passionate housekeeper. Both give unusually fine interpretations.

Edmund Gwenn, the famous English actor, gives a wonderful portrayal of Mr. Bonnyfeather, the grandfather of Anthony, who sets his fortune into a loveless match for the price of a title. Anita Louise has never appeared more lovely, for she has at ever gives a finer performance than as the daughter, who, married to a Spanish grandee, refuses to give up her handsome Irish army officer. Claude Rains gives an excellent portrayal of the grandee of Spain as does Louis Hayward as the young Irish lover. Two operatic sequences, staged by Natalie Kalmus, add to the beauty and magnificence of the picture.

Original music that fits not only the scenes, but the moods of the scenes, was written for the production by Erich Wolfgang Korngold.

"Anthony Adverse" will be repeated again tonight, and Friday matinee and evening, along with a smart Vitaphone Revue, it is worth seeing.

The management request that you please come early performances start daily at 2.30, 6.30 and 9.10. "Anthony Adverse" begins at 6.45, and 9.20 each evening, and it is suggested for your full enjoyment of "Anthony Adverse" that you are in from the beginning.

Good Way to Treat Piles

Most pile sufferers seem to think that their trouble is just a local condition. This is only partly true. Dr. Leonhardt, after years of study, learned one great aggravating cause of piles was an internal congestion holding back return blood flow from the lower bowels, with lowering pain and misery.

Dr. Leonhardt also learned the proper way to treat such piles was with an internal treatment which would attack this cause; then the way would be open for satisfying relief. He worked out, his prescription, called Hem-Roid, with the result that by reaching the cause, more lasting benefit than ever before from piles would be had.

Hem-Roid is an internal treatment. Its medication is directed to correcting congestion which causes aggravates piles in the majority of cases. Once this is done, relief quickly follows.

Hem-Roid is a very effective, easy and pleasant way to treat piles. Usually definite results will be noted the first day. J. S. McKeown, or any druggist can supply you and if you are not pleased with the first bottle, you may have your money back. Try it and prepare yourself for a pleasant surprise.

Not in addition Edward VIII would be requested to assent to an act of abdication, which would rule out from succession to the throne any issue of his marriage. It is also believed he will support this suggestion in that, while in line with the king to choose his own life partner, he will consult with parliament, to determine who shall be queen.

If no solution is found and the two parties in his retinue to accept the advice of his cabinet. Mr. Baldwin will have no alternative to resignation. Any new government would need to command a majority in the House of Commons or else would be defeated on the first supply vote. Either a general election would follow or the king would have to invite Mr. Baldwin to resume his office, which obviously Mr. Baldwin would be prepared to do only if the king was ready to accept the advice of his ministers.

From Two Courses.

If the king does not insist on his course, he would be faced either with abdication or an attempt to rule without parliament.

It was the attempt of Charles I to rule without parliament which precipitated civil war in England 300 years ago.

The London Stock Exchange was distorted in early dealings. Government stocks were quoted at considerably reduced prices. This depression spread to Dominion and other British dollar securities said they were likely to remain severely affected until constitutional anxieties were cleared.

In later trading, stock exchange dealings showed signs of recovery from early declines with industrials steady but hold shares lower.

London Times Editorial.

The Times in its editorial comment titled "The King and the Monarchy" said:

"The remarkable address by the Bishop of Bradford let loose a flood of comment published in the press and newspapers of northern England.

"Privy comments of the London and provincial newspapers were not in the least concerned in the controversy between the bishop and the critics on ethical or dogmatic.

Constitutional Issue Raised.

"One or two of them hinted—it may be hoped without full knowledge—that the bishop's address was not to be raised by a conflict between the king's personal wishes and the advice of his ministers.

"But nearly all of them saw that the real question of Dr. Blunt's remarks lay (in the words of the Yorkshire Post) in the constitutional limits which appeared in reputable United Kingdom newspapers and in some Dominion newspapers and which cannot be treated with impunity.

"It is a simple fact that the Australian constitution, for example, is long and so wisely ignored in this country, has now reached the point at which the king would find that side of his majesty's life which may justly be called private.

"Translatable journalism as every one knows whose business it is to follow it is subject to periodical waves of excitement about some particular thing, and it is natural that all such a topic as the personality of the king should be.

"And here, at least, it is fair to say that the public has been kept in the interest of the great mass of its readers, for Americans are essentially personal people, in the best sense of assessing other countries by the characters of their leaders in the crises — Mussolini, Stalin, Hitler, or whoever it may be.

Stalin Not With Late King.

"King George V as many of them have written with a touch of awe, is a real figure in their eyes. He stood to them for the ideal of kingship, and his present majesty who is known as first hand to far more of them than any of his predecessors came to the throne for this reason with all the more responsibility for perpetuating and strengthening tradition—to the immense advantage of relations between the United Kingdom speaking democracies.

"That tradition has seemed lately to be fast disappearing in the picture which has been painted drawn in some of these newspapers, and much of it exaggerated, some of it sheer innocent misunderstanding and sickest basis of fact to make it possible.

"It has even gone to the length in the last fortnight of predicting a marriage between the king and the throne and encouraging Queen Mary's approval of it with a warning that may well seem startling to most of the king's subjects in England, but which are doing infinite harm in the United States and the British Dominions.

"There is clearly a most profound and widespread misunderstanding of the king's character and of his wishes. Nothing could have been further from the truth. Such an idea would be fatal to the individual monarch to the advised and invited British monarchy of British monarchy itself.

"The position of a king does not need to be at any one—least of all a King who has proved his middle age without the blessing of a happy marriage.

Curious Paradox.

"Princes (wrote that sagacious commentator, Walter Bagehot, of Halifax) might rather expect to be lamented than to be envied as princes in a station that exposes them if they do not do more to answer men's expectations than any human figure will allow.

"If this is true in the 19th Century it is doubly true in the 20th; for it is a curious paradox, that in an age which often is supposed to be lazier and more tolerant than its predecessors, it is more exacting which pride themselves in the obliteration of social distinction there survives, more universally than before, the sense that high birthright must be kept above public criticism.

"No reasonable person 'expects more (in Halifax's words) than human nature will allow.' Even a King is entitled to his relaxation and the companionship of his chosen friends.

"What he cannot and will not afford—and what the nation would emphatically cannot afford—is that the influence of the great office he holds should be weakened if ever private institutions were to come into open contact with public duty and be allowed to prevail.

"He is (to cite a leading article in The Times 40 years ago) the most visible embodiment of the monarchical principle which is indispensable, and even dangerous.

"To the people of this land there is no question at all of the mischief and danger which are about. The cult of gossip and cheap scandal across the Atlantic is spread to every widening circle throughout this country."

Justice Rose Holds Hydro Court Suit' "Failed Miserably"

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—Court suit of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission against two former commissioners and two former contractors "failed miserably" on its factual grounds, but "failed miserably" on its legal grounds, Mr. Justice Wm. R. Rose, who yesterday dismissed the action with costs.

The Commission sought to recover $4,553 paid by the former Commissioners to Frederick Sharpe Contractors and a Chicago firm to investigate attacks on Hydro before the present commissioners took office early in 1934. Defendants were Senator Arthur Meighen, former Hydro chairman; former commissioners, and F. A. Gaby and C. H. Cahan, Toronto chief counsel and commission solicitor respectively.

Allegations Unfounded

The Chief Justice described allegations by the Commission as "unfounded and very cruel." Handing down his decision in the supreme court Chief Justice Rose remarked that suggestions, allegations and other improper conduct were made freely and frequently in the statement of claim.

It was charged the firm of Shaw, Shrander and Berry, Chicago, and Montreal Research Bureau were used ostensibly to investigate Hydro, but in force, hostile to Hydro but actually for the improper purpose of damaging a provincial political party.

"As regards Senator Arthur Meighen" commended His Lordship, "it turns out, and no doubt the fact was known long ago, that he was not present at any meeting which authorized either of the payments complained of, and it is indeed probable that he was not even a Hydro Commissioner at the time of these payments. It is perfectly clear from the evidence, that he had nothing to do with the Chicago firm, either of the firms of Shaw, Shrander and Brewer or the Commonwealth Research Bureau. The case against him therefore fails hopelessly and entirely."

It was inconceivable, the Chief Justice said, that the former commissioners, who without power, loaned money in that way should they have found it necessary for the protection of Hydro.

CITY MARKET

Staple fruits and vegetables with a sprinkling of eggs and dairy products featured a slow market here today. Potatoes remained steady at the all week price of 75 cents per bushel with one dollar being asked for seventy-five pound bag lots and $1.25 for the ninety pound containers.

Turnips, parsnips and carrots were offered in basket lots remaining firm at fifty, forty and forty-five cents respectively. Cabbages were scarce and were quoted at twenty-five to ten cents each while dozen lots being offered at prices ranging from forty-five to seventy-five cents according to size.

A few eggs were offered at from 43 to 45 cents per dozen and 40 to 40 cents for the pullet variety.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Confidence in the gold industry's future was the motto Stock Exchange in the mining section and buying was fair to brisk golds, base metals and silvers while the oils were steady to strong in a generally narrower market. Golds advanced to $2.46, up 10 cents, changing hands frequently.

A gain of a full point was boarded by Preston and smaller gains were posted for Gladen, Moneta, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Pickle Crow, Howards and Sladen.

Novanda, Hudson Bay and Falconbridge displayed strength and in the oils Dalhousie, Calgary-Edmonton and Texas-Canadian were higher.

WALL STREET

(By Victor Rabain, Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Stock Market climbed over numerous question marks today to close a few fractions to a point or more of its recent losses.

There were a few backward issues near the fourth hour, although aircrafts, steels and many other stocks were well out in front. The activity was comparatively broad.

International Nickel regained more than a point of its previous losses while other Dominion stocks, including McIntyre and Hollinger, Pacific gained considerably higher. On the curb, Lake Shore yielded slightly, Aluminum Government 4s were off a shade, Canadian funds ruled 1-16 of a point to 1-32 at 101 23-32 to 101 25-32.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—Quality recovery was achieved by the industrial section of the Toronto Stock Exchange in quiet trading. International Nickel and Smelters rallied sharply early in the session and at early afternoon gains were recorded for the oils, Ford A and a majority of the steels. The firming tendency was in evidence with a fair movement to ease on the New York board.

Abitibi Common was active in the day's advance, gaining about two of a point from the last close while Fanny Farmer featured the general list by rising over 3 points, at 34 3-4, up 1 5-8 for the day. Walkers common was stronger and Industrial Alcohol at a little higher.

Indeed probable, that he was not even a Hydro Commissioner at the time of these payments. It is perfectly clear from the evidence, that he had nothing to do with the Chicago firm, either of the firms of Shaw, Shrander and Brewer or the Commonwealth Research Bureau. The case against him therefore fails hopelessly and entirely."

It was inconceivable, the Chief Justice said, that the former commissioners, who without power, loaned money in that way should they have found it necessary for the protection of Hydro.

WAVE OF GOSSIP

It also reports rumors that Mrs. Ernest Simpson would leave the country tomorrow and that the king might go with her.

"Upon the utterly astounded country has burst a new constitutional crisis," the Times said, "involving the life or collapse, for the time, of the common self-restraint inspired by the hope that some authoritative voice or statement would enable them to put an end to them once and for all.

"Such an act, or such a statement is logically impossible for otherwise the cumulative effect of the publication of gossip will be a serious damage to the monarch.

"That is what matters to the nation. The king has no power like his lately holds is no man's personal possession. It is a sacred trust handed down from generation to generation, and every subject of the realm with growing strength by the willing allegiance of the people who know that their rights were secure because they were respected.

"One reason why it counts for more today than at any period in history is that the constitutional growth of the British Empire lately has given it a far heavier burden of responsibility and that public opinion in the Dominions turns increasingly nowadays to the crown as the symbol of their link with the United Kingdom.

Protest is Growing

"Let me mention, for example, that stories in the American newspapers are not protested in Canada by the people against them; are growing in volume or that they are being published with even greater force in other Dominions of the Empire.

"And the only alarm is that events in the world outside have imposed, as never before, upon the British people the duty to stand as a rock to the world outside amid the perplexities of Communism and dictatorship.

"So it stood a year ago. So let us hope it will stand a year hence whereas a new reign will have been ballowed in the hearts of the public needs some definite reassurance if the rock is to remain unshaken.

The Sheffield Telegraph said: "Never before his accession has had win the admiration and affection of the people as has the present king.

"Under his sovereignty, as under that of his late father, the crown had been the one bond which tied the scattered nations of the Empire together in steadfast unity. For this reason the king's personality and the world's gaze, let us pray that this cloud of anxiety may soon be lifted and the people set free for all."

Sympathizes with the King

The London Afternoon Star said: editorially: "The people of the British Empire to-day be denied the common happiness of marriage? We see no insuperable difficulty. The monarch may tender him advice in one direction, but there is more than one way in which the interests of the state and the King may be reconciled. That a solution can be done not alarm us, but it is folly, a form of disloyalty to the King and his people.

Madrid, D'Negado, Copyright 1936, by The Havas News Agency)

Talavera, De La Reina, Spain, Dec. 3 (CP)—Insurgents closed in on two socialist "lost battalions" west of Madrid today as Fascist warplanes unloaded more than 10,000 pounds of bombs on the Capital. Fascist claimed defensive gains in fighting near the Capital and in the north.

George Barr Gives Hints On Making Better Cheese

Finer Cutting of Curds Produces Cheese With Smoother Texture

PROPER TEMPERATURE

Optimism in a measure greater than that reflected for several years past is the keynote of the present ninth annual convention of the Canadian Cheese Makers' Association expected to be one of the most successful yet held since the inception of the annual event.

Delegates from all over Eastern Ontario and many points in the Dominion in the city for the past two days to attend what is a record attendance, and perhaps the largest yet entertained by the Association.

In conjunction with the convention is being held the dairy demonstrations conducted by three most prominently connected with the dairy industry in Canada's largest and finest cheese exhibit, the product of factories within the eastern Ontario counties of Ontario.

At this morning's session addressed by Geo. H. Barr, Director of Dairying for the Province; Mr. Jos. Burgess, Chief of the Division of Dairy Produce, Ottawa, H. C. Walker, of the Canadian Fair Company of Montreal, and others featured the afternoon session.

In his address to the assembled delegates, Mr. Barr paid tribute to the work of the Canadian Cheese Makers' Association for the splendid exhibit that had been arranged. "I've seen a good many such exhibits during the past forty years, but this is undoubtedly one of the best that has ever been gotten together," he declared.

In a summary of a questionnaire that had been sent out to the 1,200 cheese factories in the province, Mr. Barr pointed to many defects that were noted in factories during the past year. Point by point these were noted and dealt in order of importance.

"I asked for the makers' observations were in regard to cutting curds finer. All the groups I heard from stated that the curds should be finer cut curds required less work, gave a finer body to cheese, a smoother texture and brighter color. Furthermore it does not indicate that more whey would be made in milk if this fine cutting was under-taken at the proper time. Makers with the fine knives had better body and texture, less trouble and were able to score higher.

"The best cooking temperatures were studied. The answer to this question no instructor reported success with temperatures below 100 degrees. Two of them reported 102 to 104, and the majority 104 degrees. Those with the 100 degrees was maintained.

Fifty per cent. of the trouble experienced by factories this year were due to poorly boiled cheese, declared Mr. Barr.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Noranda

Noranda this year showed earn about $4.00 a share. The exact price for copper obtained by Noranda over a given period is difficult to determine; but the range suggests the broad spread. The year in 1935 started with copper averaging 9.87 cents a pound for the first five months; then it dropped to 9.4 cents and worked back to 9.63 cents for the period. Output and consumption is that Noranda probably averaged about 8.8 cents for the year. Output for the first nine months of last year. Copper started 1936 at 9.13 cents a pound and is now fluctuating just over 10.75 cents. From the looks of things, 8.8 cents would be a fair average.

"Fogue" Carburetor

The impression is gaining in investment circles that too much emphasis has been placed on the new "Fogue" carburetor that will give 200 miles to a gallon of gasoline. Engineers of repute have made the statement that it is impossible to get more than 46 miles to a gallon of gasoline, but some nervous sailing of the oil stocks has nevertheless taken place, and buying, however, in this issues has been noted.

"Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

The motor drowned whatever else she said. Sally stood there a moment and then turned to light her way back to the house. She thought, I could telephone... But to whom... The campers further up river might be in their camps but none had telephones.

"Good girl!" shouted Jonathan. His hair was plastered flat, his face was streaming, "sit tight and we'll get them."

Larry and Millie were in pulling distance. Their boat was visible to a watcher still at intervals. Millie, frightened deadly sick, clung to the side of the boat with her little hands. Larry, sweet and calm now, rising from him, struggled with the oars. He was a very strong person, Sister physically. And he was terrified. She hated the life who sat so pitifully crouched before him, whose lips were washed free of paint, whose lips were white and formed a prayer, whose lips kept screaming at him, "Get her! I'll do something, do something else..."

Oh, God, said little Millie, "please forgive me, please get me home safe, I won't see him ever again, I won't ever disobey. Oh, God, please, please..."

"Get still!" shouted Larry, "sit still."

He was not making for home but for Jonathan and Sally, a small group of Canadian islands. If he could make that, if he could land on...

But he couldn't.

The boat wasn't moving, nothing moved except, grey-green engulfing waves. The wind battered him. Oars were useless in his blistered hands.

He measured the distance from island to boat He couldn't row any more, he could not swim. He thought distractedly, he could swim. He was very strong indeed. He had swum over to the Canadian shore more than once. He might have to—unless...

Millie saw the other boat first. It came about, rocking, like a valiant little craft. She screamed, incoherently, and then Larry, who saw us, Larry, they've seen us!"

Her piercing voice drowned the slow progress of the motor boat. It was often out of sight both in the trough and into sight amid. There were two people in it. She didn't know who they were, didn't care. They meant hope, they meant safety, they meant her and mother, they meant the paths of righteousness by which she would walk all her life long.

Larry didn't hear her. Perhaps the noise of wind and the beat of rain and the waves drowned him. Perhaps he couldn't hear anything but his own heart pounding. He lifted himself, pumped. You must escape, never mind her, let her sink! Let him. Why should you? you can't save her and yourself.

"Mother they see us," he said and Jonathan nodded. He was sweating despite the cold breath of rain and wind. He had had trouble with the engine but for the moment it ran perfectly.

Suddenly Rose screamed. She said, thrusting her hand out to him ... "He jumped...Larry...he lost an oar and jumped...Mary's captained."

Jonathan looked, afraid of what he might see, but it was only Millie. Numbed, Millie clung to it, Larry rowing in it. They were being terrifically battered. Rose exclaimed again, "He's right."

Jonathan said nothing. He knew as well as Rose did why Larry Dexter had left it. He knew the family clear to him even before Rose said, thrusting stiff lips, "He has a swimming record..."

Now they were almost alongside. Larry let go the boat and swam toward them and Jonathan shouted at him. "Keep clear; you'll capsize us—too."

He turned over the engine and steering to Rose. Millie by little they edged closer. Jonathan reached over and caught hold of Millie. Her hands fell away slackly. She was very nearly unconscious. It was a dead weight which he finally dragged over the side.

Larry clung to their boat, gabbling at them. His face was not pleasant. Jonathan leaned to help him in. He thought, I'd like to leave him where he is...

The empty punt swirled in the current, drifted away, beaten and buffeted by waves and wind. Rose sat on the floor of the boat, both with Millie's head in her lap. Millie's face was bruised, her hands were bruised. Jonathan spoke to Larry. Can you run this thing?

He nodded.

Larry's teeth chattered. He said it, too—God! ... I'll get it ... I'll get us to shore...

Jonathan slapped his face. He said, "You'll run it. Get over there and run it, you snivelling little coward!"

Somehow he got Larry at the engine. Something in Jonathan's action he lowered himself, steadying the boat as best he could with crouch beside Millie, to put his fingers on her pulse.

Shaking and sick Larry sat at the engine. Both by inch they crept toward the Sable Island shore. Slowly. He had never in his life hated a man as much as he hated Jonathan Kimber, who knew him for a craven. He had Rose, too, who also knew. He felt no gratitude, nothing but smouldering hatred. He was afraid. He was afraid of Millie, very ill from shock and in a hospital, cared for by the best kind of sensational reporting and Jonathan and Rose's part in the story. He was afraid of Miss Sally Sutton on the famous Sutton Island, Sally's mother, Jonathan.

Rose and Jonathan too, would have long gossiping before them to forget the whole business. It occurred to Rose that that trip would be remembered, perhaps she had ever undertaken. When they reached Sable Island there Sally was at the dock with the house servants and the island physician appeared. He orally wringing her hands and, for once, jarred out of her lethargy.

Sally was not ill. She had been in a canoe when Jonathan worked over her and the boat was overturned by the mainland with the bigger boat. He flowed steadily toward the Gulf and Sally, paddling, was carried unwillingly plaidly. Only the broken paddle was found on the beach. Rose and Millie, crying ceaselessly in the bedroom of the Sutton cottage, refused to remind them that there had been a storm.

"It was right," Jonathan told Rose, coming out of the room and closing the door softly, "it was just as efficient maid," just shock, and of course, bruises. She'll be quiet and quite quiet - the hospital would be better than her home at present. Rose, I'm sorry."

"Her parents must be told at once."

"They're a 'phone, haven't they? I'll call them. Sally's mother is better drive up and see them," said Jonathan, "and try to explain and I'm afraid I can't be added frowning.

"No. You'll have to go to the hospital at once," advised Rose, "and you'll bring Millie ... I'll go along with you."

"O.K." Good girl," he said briefly, and then to his sister, "Larry, in a second they remained quite still in the wake of the storm. Then they came down where they could hear Sally talking to her mother again; her voice upraised and querulous. He was dressed in pajamas and a dressing gown and dry clothing, and was downstairs with Sally and her mother.

"You must change your clothes, Jon," said Rose absently. "Sally put out something of her father's for you ... You're soaked to the skin."

Jonathan thought ruefully of his flannel shirt and flannel coat. He was once white trousers, and grinned. Rose said, "Oh, Jon," and began to shrank. I'll look swell in the Senator's clothes."

Larry ran send across to his house and get some of Phil's clothes. Rose said, "Jonathan, you've never brought some back for him," she said, "I'll tell him."

"Wait a minute ..." He laid his hand on her arm. "I'll tell him. I haven't any words to tell you what I think of you."

She did not answer but looking at him she found her regard so deeply dumped in his own that it seemed as if she could never look away. But she did, and then from him, down the corridor, down the stairs, her heart singing. It had been a horrible experience, and she realized dimly that they had been very near to it by a good deal. She was sensitive to impressions and she knew without any need of analyzing it that Jonathan had made an enemy in Larry Dexter. Then there was Millie in bed, and her family. But Rose was happy ... happier than she had ever been in all the life before. It was as if, worldlessly, she and Jonathan had reached full understanding. They had been through a rather experience together, one which might have ended in catastrophe for them all. And she had realized as the little boat skittered and drove through the sickening welter of water, that if disaster came to them together, it was something to be desired.

Her arrangements were made. Larry, sullen and silent, went over himself to the Sutton cottage and Phil's things for his rescue, the Dowlings were reached by telephone and after their first horrified reaction proved sensible enough, promising to meet Jonathan at the hospital and agreeing that trained care and quiet were indicated for their daughter; the train returned from the mainland and Millie, dry, drowsy, lay under a mountain of warm robes and blankets, was carried to the boat and thence to the mainland and the car.

They took one of the Sutton cars, the chauffeur driving. Jonathan and Rose supporting Millie in the back seat. Rose gratefully subsided to hysteria, but controlling themselves well enough. Nurses waited. Millie was put to bed, her mother sat there in the room beside her, with Rose and Jonathan in the waiting room downstairs in the waiting room Jonathan and Rose dozed, relieved by enough in her mind and heart. Downstairs in the waiting room Jonathan and Rose dozed, relieved by girl's father.

"I'll wire you," advised Jonathan, a little awkwardly, "I would not be hard on her—when she's well, I mean. Better wipe the slate clean. She's had her lesson, a pretty severe one ... I don't fancy Rose, young Dexter again, except in the ordinary way of business ... I can guarantee you that."

"Anything you say, Jon. Doctor," agreed the older man sighing. "I can't believe it yet. We—we've been very lucky here ... I think it will be a horror that will stay with me always."

He was silent a moment and then said hesitantly, "I don't know how to thank you—both."

They assured him that they had done nothing and apparently the local paper agreed with them because by night Larry had reconstructed sufficiently to see reporters. The next day, alone in his office, read-

Housewives find Old Dutch goes very much further than ordinary cleansers because it's made with Selmotrate (Reg'd. in Canada). The flat-shaped particles cover more surface and do more cleaning than the chunky grit found in most cleansers. It pays to use safe and saving Old Dutch.

CONSTIPATION* MAY CUT DOWN YOUR ENJOYMENT OF LIFE

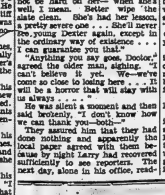
Long Neglected, It May Even Develop Serious Consequences

Common constipation* keeps you from being at your best. It causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches, loss of appetite, loss of interest in work or play, your usual vigor.

So many people treat this condition as a slight matter. But it can be the starting point of serious trouble. It contributes to a general run-down condition. With many bodily resignace, you are more likely to "catch cold" or other infection you meet in your everyday routine.

Common constipation is due usually to insufficient "bulk" in meals. Fortunately, a delicious cereal supplies gentle "bulk." Within the body, All-Bran absorbs moisture. Bran absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and cleanses the system.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook into muffins, breads, etc. Delicious! Especially as daily use usually satisfies. Stubborn cases may require All-Bran leftover. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.



ALL-BRAN is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company as an effective laxative food for constipation.* Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk."

COMBAT RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is often caused by uric acid in the blood. This blood impurity should be extracted by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it irritates the muscles and joints causing excruciating pain. Plan to help prevent rheumatism by keeping the kidneys in good condition. Take regularly Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite kidney remedy.

"Sally," said Rose unexpectedly, "is all right. She was scared and said so. She made no bones about it. She wouldn't have been any help anyway, merely a hindrance. She sensed that and kept out of danger. And once we got back to shore again, I was impressed by her efficiency."

They looked at her in amazement, and Jonathan smiled at her. Seeing that smile and the instant response it elicited, Bill Lynch's heart sank. His might well still be a good man, he reflected gloomily, and clear out-

Reduces Varicose or Swollen Veins

Simple Home Treatment Proves it At Small Cost

The world progresses. Today many mineral ailments that long seeks to persecute can now be helped much more quickly. If you have varicose veins or swollen veins today to bring them back to normal size and you are wise you will go on.

Just get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil at Doyle's Drug Store or any reliable druggist and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. In a short time the veins should begin to grow smaller and by regular use soon approach normal.

People who want to reduce varicose veins or simple swellings before resorting to operations or injections should not hesitate to try a bottle at once. It is so inexpensive and powerful that a small bottle lasts a long time.

outlined all his plans for the future, but it was obvious that Larry's fond family as well as the public considered him the hero of the day.

Sam Patten did not. Sam Patten was a friend of Jonathan and Rose a story somewhat approximating the truth, and he sat in the corner, pipe ashes furiously on Rose's lingerie, and glared. Sam, at one time someone showed that young scoundrel up for what he is ...

"Don't," advised Rose quickly. "Don't say or make enemies. Besides, no one will believe you; they never have even when you've told the truth."

"Maybe not, but it makes me mightily sick."

"I know," said Rose soothingly, "but you'll only defeat your own ends. Sam, you're a dear. Just as though they regard you tolerantly as a sort of family retainer who is entitled to the left, a parlor pink, in fact, as they don't play about with the established rule. But once you show your hand too clearly, before the public, you only play into their hands to trouble."

"She's right," declared Jonathan, after a moment.

He and Sam, Bill Lynd and the young Dexters were at Rose. Mrs. Bates was out in the kitchen with Mrs. Ward, talking recipes, and befitted a bride anxious to do her best by her husband's friends. There was a little silence and then Bill asked, laughing a saturnine laugh, "Don't tell me you've come over to our way of thinking, Kim—why, I'll make you a convert."

Jonathan flushed. He said steadily, "Staggering blow. I've come to the conclusion that whatever Rose — I mean whatever you guys think must be right. I'm just beginning to find my eyes opening a little ... I'm—I'm—I'm sorry, Rose, I—I'm terribly sorry!"

"No," said Jonathan, "that's not it. I never had any use for him anyway, as Rose will bear witness. But there's something about the way the whole business has been played up, exhausting the extraordinary glory that makes me see red. Gilding the lily, I suppose," he added grimly.

"It's funny to me that they didn't say that Sally was towing along behind on the end of a rope with a life belt in her teeth and a flask of brandy," asserted Bill admiringly, "the spunkie St. Bernard beautiful and blonde!"

"Sally," said Rose unexpectedly, "is all right. She was scared and said so. She made no bones about it. She wouldn't have been any help anyway, merely a hindrance. She sensed that and kept out of danger. And once we got back to shore again, I was impressed by her efficiency."

They looked at her in amazement, and Jonathan smiled at her. Seeing that smile and the instant response it elicited, Bill Lynch's heart sank. His might well still be a good man, he reflected gloomily, and clear out-

CHAPTER XXVII

Graduation exercises took place at the dusty close of the spring following the accident. Neither Millie nor Larry was present to represent the Junior Class. Millie was still in the hospital and after she returned home her parents were considering her downstate to visit relatives for the rest of the summer. Larry's mother was taking him abroad as soon as the tutoring ceased and Rose received the check for the final lessons and a pleasant word or two from Mrs. Dexter. Mrs. Dexter hoped very much that when Larry, Jr., returned to Yale he had rowing experience ("poor, brave boy, he refuses to talk about it") returned to Princeton. It was a tradition to enter the Senior Class, there would be no further need of the tutoring.

Rose showed the letter to Jonathan. She said, "That's that. And I'm glad. I—I couldn't have taken a table from him again and look at him. I'm glad, Jon, that you didn't when I've disliked anyone quite as much! And I'm glad you're here now," she added thoughtfully. "He's avoided me ever since we set foot on shore but I'm sure he'll come to beg—" she shrugged and smiled. "Tell me, Jon, what's in your mind? I've decided to stay here the rest of the summer. I intend to withdraw from the lists and marry myself just because I've discovered that you're only a regular person. Only I like you well enough to warn you that I'm a pretty fussy guy, you know," she reminded her.

"Sally," said Rose severely, "you're talking like a bad play or novel or something."

"Taks it or leave it," said Sally, carelessly. "I just wanted you to know that if it wouldn't demoralize your entire household I'm interested in Jonathan. That the attractions of deeper pools than she had believed and that she was, in short, falling in love for the first time..."

"Sally," said Rose, "you're a simple girl. She could fathom, easily enough, the mind Rose would attribute to Jonathan's choice of wife. Jonathan would not be on her guard.

CHAPTER XXIX

All's fair, Sally had said—in love and war. Well, this would be war, then, all through the bright and lazy summer and in battle strategy stuck is better than defense, and Sally was as much stuck as anyone within sight. She could expect to see a lot of Rose Ward during the next few months. Thoughtfully driving up the hill to her big house, and after all, she decided, leaving the car in front of the door and going in, she performed that feat, couldn't she do much more for Jonathan than Rose could possibly do? Influence him toward further him as Rose could not. The idle thought she had had some time ago of being the perfect wife for a rising young surgeon in some city of good size had important uses that she could came back, and to stay.

Jonathan, Sally felt, He was not dismantled to Rose. Very well, Rose should have him. Jonathan, she, Sally would have here. If she had an ally in Rose Ward's camp stacked against the other girl, was that her fault?

That summer was one of the years Rose Ward had ever known. School was out, not only for pupils but for teachers as well. She had completed her third year of teaching and dared to breathe a sigh of relief. Now, unless something serious occurred, her job was secure. She wrote her uncle to that effect and Doctor Ballard, reading the letter in Chillicothe, wrote her some time later grinned to himself.

The summer came in time, so it speak, and unless I slap Mr. Martin's face or run amok in a crowded room I suppose I'm safe. It's been a rather curious year and I'm glad it's behind me. The appearance of Larry Dexter in the Junior Class had not been wildest in major and minor resplendent. I'm sorry you were upset over the river business and hope you've forgotten your vows. The enclosed clippings tell one person of the story. Jonathan was marvellous, handled the boat like a veteran and kept his head. By the way, I'm seeing a good deal of Sally Sutton. She's nice really, under the veneer. Jonathan and I were her guests at a country club dinner dance. It was fun. Only if I am to keep up with the Four Hundred I shall have to take time off and do a bit of sewing on my wardrobe."

DAILY SHORT STORY

THIRTY YEARS

By Jewel H. Mogford

Placing his watch on his desk in front of him, Kenneth Howell picked up the gun. With his free hand he pulled his evening coat back and with a calm, unfailing movement, placed the muzzle over his heart.

His handsome young face was set and colorless, like his body tense. He looked at the watch. In the soft light of the shaded gas fire the minute hand marked five minutes to eleven.

Five minutes to wait. He relaxed slightly. He must put the trigger at exactly eleven. That had been Kathleen's last caution an hour ago as they stood on the little balcony of the country club.

"We must go together, darling—at the same instant." He could hear again the half-sob with which he pored words in her small head nestled against his shoulder.

He rested the hand with the gun on the table. Four minutes yet.

He had held her close—the first time he had ever taken her in his arms, for young as she was, she was another man's wife.

"I shall not see him again," Kathleen had said, after a moment. "I'll leave a note on his desk." He did not like to think of Tony inhaling a long draft, she said languidly—

Three minutes now.

"We must both be sure of the time," she had cautioned him, "and very careful." He had known in the stillness that she was thinking of what she was trying to banish the fear of a possible slip in their plans. They could never hear Tony without you, darling, no matter where.

He forced his mind to register the time. One more minute. Involuntarily he turned the gun and looked into the muzzle. The cold ugliness of it startled him. Kathleen, at this moment, too, must be frightened. But in a few seconds now a bullet—instantly he tried to force back this thought—a bullet would go tearing through her body, flesh—and his own. His hand, his whole body shook. went prickly with a damp fever, then with a deadly fear of all.

The minute hand again. It plashed by marked eleven.

Deathly he reached the wall telephone and turned the crank. Then, at last, the Orkney butler, solemnly—

"Mrs. Orkney? She's gone! Came back from the club some hours ago and again by the side door . . . husband crankie, and—mind a note on the desk . . . suicide, yes, at exactly eleven, the note said, but didn't say where . . . gun gone, too . . . The sentiment words, such a definite flame, burnt into his brain.

Too late! She had gone alone!

On the boat bound for the Orient Kenneth Howell knew little peace. The wave swishing against the sides of the vessel seemed to whisper to him, "I couldn't bear being without you, darling, no matter where." The throb of the engine groaned them, the wind hissed them. He had failed her, had let her go alone into that vast unknown.

It was the same everywhere he went. Running from his conscience he travelled for the mining company, his money gone, he worked on a coffee plantation, a common laborer. Always that insistent voice never away from it.

Then—he ... a stowaway to America, ... a ragged man, old before his years, he moved like a forlorn wraith across the soft crowd in front of the casino-club—the old building enlarged. He stood beside a table on the same little balcony, the same room, the same soft breeze. The orchestra was playing a sweet, gliding waltz. They had danced to that same tune thirty years ago, he and Kathleen.

He took a step into deeper shadow as a woman, followed by a boy, came out. He saw her distinctly as she stepped through the lighted French doors, the large plate of her silken dress, her blond curls. Holding tight to his sense, he told himself that this was no ghostly apparition. He reminded himself that Aberlorn papers had said only a few days ago that woman's return to the fashions of the 90's.

She was heavier, with curves more ample, older of course. Then he saw that she was smoking a cigarette.

"But Kay," the boy was saying, "I'll die if you don't leave old Orimsey and marry me! I'll—I'll kill myself!"

"Don't try it, sweetums," she answered in a heavy, contralto voice, but with something of the old sweetness. "I tried it once. Thought I couldn't live without a certain man. Left the usual note on Orimsey's desk, had the gun ready and everything. But, well—I caught a fast mining boat to Calais instead."

"Gee Crimcey, how did he know?" the boy asked breathlessly.

"Oh, I sent a messenger with another note from the boat." She lighted one cigarette with the stub of another. "Then, inhaling a long draft, she said languidly—

"No, I love you too much. I really couldn't bear being without you, darling!"

Famous Rat-Catcher Mothers Young Rat

Frampton Lakes, N.J., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Pickles, a 15-year-old alley cat famous as a rat catcher, has turned sissy.

For Monday night Pickles, a grizzled female, rescued a four-inch baby rat from a blazing icehouse and added it to her brace of kittens. John Kiraldi, 40, owner of the Lakeside Hotel here, said Pickles now nurses the rat with her own brood.

After dinner, he explained, "the dazed thing just crawls in the box and snuggles between the kittens. When the kittens play, it just sits by kinda sleepy-eyed and watches."

The problem, Kiraldi explained, will come when the rat and kittens come of the milk diet. Then the staple food of Pickles and her families has been rats!

Brought From France to Arkansas For Stricken Pianist

Little Rock, Ark., Dec. 2.—(AP)—A new supply of special type French serum arrived today to aid Miss Jaypee Easley, a victim of the rare blood infection, streptococcus viridans.

The Queen Mary transported the 600 cubic centimetre shipment to New York. It was moved to Little Rock by plane and train.

Physicians reported Miss Easley, 26, in a critical condition.

Injection treatment was started several days ago by a depletion of a supply of the serum flown here by plane from Montreal for use in the United States for the first time.

"We know definitely that it benefited her," said physicians.

The pretty young, talented pianist, was stricken seven months ago.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pp wa staking a walk before supper and all of a sudden something banged with a smash rite in front of us, being a grober boy's bycical being its balance against the cement curb, and on the payment, and there was a small full of peaches and stuff tied to the handlebars, and the things went rolling all over the payment, me saying, G, will ill be comed back and sees that.

Which just then somebody said, For shame, to knock a poor boy's bycikel over, and not even pick it up again.

Being a lady with a pointy nose and a little mouth, and pop said, You dont need to glare at me in, that tone of voice, madam, I didn't knock it over.

Well you were the nearest one to it and certainly seemed to lean against it, of course I may be boy's bycikel

BY JAMES MONTAGNES

Port Hope, Ont.—Next year the radium refinery at Port Hope, Ontario, will produce about $1,500,000 in radium from ore mined nearly 2,000 miles distant on the shores of Great Bear Lake, just below the Arctic Circle. Radium production is to be speeded up from its present rate of two grams per month at $30,000 a gram, according to Charles LaBine, brother of Gilbert LaBine, who discovered Canada's radium-bearing ore on Great Bear Lake in 1930.

The first ounce of Canadian produced radium was recently completed at the Port Hope refinery, in the presence of outstanding Canadian scientists and physicians, including Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, lieutenant-governor of Ontario; Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario minister of health; Sir Frederick Banting; Maj.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, director of the national research council; Brig.-Gen. C. H. Mitchell, dean of the faculty of applied and engineering at Toronto University.

Price Lowered.

Prior to the entry of Canadian radium into world markets, and Charles LaBine states that Canadian science and engineering at Toronto radium is now going to 20 countries, Belgian Congo, and sold in Belgium at $70,000 a gram. Canadian production methods and the use of a special radium express plane to ship ore from Great Bear Lake to the Waterways, Alberta, end of steel, have been responsible in bringing the price down.

Despite the extreme cold temperatures at the Arctic Circle mine, 120 men will be working all winter taking pitchblende, the radium bearing ore, out of tunnels which have already been sunk to 600-foot levels. A mill is delivering 75 tons of crushed ore a day, and building is going on at various levels, while the mine property buildings are being supplied with fuel oil from wells at Fort Norman on the Mackenzie River, the most northern oil wells in the British Empire, are now functioning. For heating the cabins and bunk houses, vast supplies of wood are used, cut in the mine's vicinity.

Have Unlimited Supply.

While it took three years to produce the first ounce of radium, now that the method has been systematized, greater production is possible. Hundreds of tons of pitchblende in bags are stored at rail head at Waterways for shipment to Port Hope, until the supply assured for the better part of a year, production on a big scale is now possible with some 50 grams making an ounce of this most valuable of metals.

Cancer patients have now an unlimited source of supply of radium. The British Empire and the United States can be both supplied with it in the Port Hope plant—sealing refined radium in platinum needles for shipment in heavy lead tubes. Note the heavy rubber gloves protecting the hands of the worker. One of the aeroplanes used in shipping of supplies to and from the Great Bear Lake mines, source of pitchblende ore, along with an exterior view of the Port Hope refining plant, is seen at LEFT.

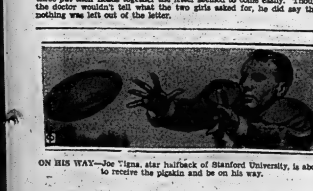
Canadian Radium for All Purposes and scientists are now at work to find new uses for radium, since only very little is known about its uses.



Secure Other Minerals.

At the Port Hope refinery, other minerals than radium are being procured from the ore. In the process of getting radium, large amounts of silver, uranium and associated minerals are obtained, all having a commercial value. As science finds new uses for these various minerals they will become more valuable. Already, the by-products are going to chemical firms, pottery manufacturers, the British navy, and other users of radio-active minerals. Incidentally the recovery of radium and its by-products is big business for the chemical manufacturers, for it takes three tons of chemicals to obtain the radium contained in a ton of ore, and in Great Bear Lake pitchblende there is one gram of radium to every ton mined.

SANTA WILL HEAR FROM THE QUINTS

Marie and Cecile Dionne were having difficulty in writing their first letter to Santa Claus until they called in Kindly Dr. Dafoe. After the three put their heads together the letter seemed to come easily. Though the doctor wouldn't tell what the two girls asked for, he did say that nothing was left out of the letter.

REBEL COMMANDER PLANNING NEW ATTACK

His Moors and Foreign Legionaires, picked troops that rarely know defeat, hurled back by the northern defence put up by Madrid's loyalist army, Gen. Varela (LEFT), insurgent commander, who leads the attack on Madrid, takes time out to plan new methods of assault on the beleaguered capital. Madrid reports indicate that the rebels will leave University City, which they have failed to fully penetrate after terrific assaults, and will strive to break down the defences in a more vulnerable sector. Government speakers declare that the attacking rebel armies are threatened with isolation by new loyalist counter-attacks and that Madrid is definitely saved. —Central Press Canadian Photo

COLLAGUTT BUS GOES IN DITCH NEAR TRENTON

Slippery Condition of Highway Causes The Mishap

HIGHWAY BLOCKED

Trenton, Dec. 3 (Special)—After allegedly hitting a westbound car, a Collagutt bus travelling east and carrying a number of passengers entered the ditch east of here early last night. The bus lodged at right angles and a large portion of it stretched across the highway and as it was impossible for workmen to remove it, highway traffic was detoured until morning. The car, driven by Mr. Clayton Rooke of Toronto, and carrying Mrs. A. McCauley and Mr. and Mrs. Pfeifer, all of Trenton, turned sideways on the road, when the driver applied the brakes and the oncoming bus crashed into it. Mrs. Pfeifer was cut over the left eye and two stitches were required to close the wound. Other occupants of the car escaped injury. None of the bus passengers were injured and a special picked them up after a two hour wait. Police said the driver of the bus, Alfred Pitzjoff, of Oshawa, did an expert piece of driving and avoided a more serious accident by steering his vehicle into the ditch in the manner he did. Constable F. J. Taylor investigated.

Afternoon Tea

At Canterbury Hall on King Street, Group C. of St. George's Anglican church held a delightful and successful afternoon tea. During the afternoon bridge was enjoyed by all and Mrs. R. Acer was awarded first prize, Lunch was served and Mrs. J. Bowman acted as convenor and was assisted by Mrs. W. Hewlett and Mrs. O. Flynn.

Rotary Speaker Talks on Type

"Fashions in Type" was the interesting address that J. B. Cowan, editor of the Quinte Sun delivered at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club on Monday night. The speaker was introduced by R. P. McInes and R. Joyce extended a hearty vote of appreciation. He was guest at a dinner at the Peterborough club on Monday night. Singing of the service song concluded the evening and Leslie Hearts was at the piano.

Town Council Meets

Trenton Town Council met in the municipal rooms on Monday night and several interesting items were discussed. Mrs. R. A. Cory and Mrs. Wilson, representatives of the Willing Workers asked the Council for a $150 to help clothing for the unemployed women, and pointed out one case in which a family of six all night while the family slept with overcoats over them and told how the girl's husband had died from lack of food. The council endorsed the request and sent it to the department at Toronto for approval. A bylaw was passed setting aside certain lands on the waterfront for a public park. The park lands lie between the Cold Springs and Frankford's cooperage mill. Town Clerk W. J. Potts read the minutes of the last meeting and Mayor H. R. Cory approved them. Councillor H. O'Hearle, chairman of finance, read the monthly expenditures as follows: finance, $5,250; trench relief, $9,063.09; salaries, $679.21; fire, market and police, $1809.83; streets and sidewalks, $63.27; harbor and public works $39.56; charity, $652.18; printing and stationery, $297.81. A Montreal firm offered the town a sum of money for vacant lands on the waterfront on the east side of the river. The council disagreed on accepting their terms and a letter asking for a larger price was sent to the firm in Montreal.

Knapton—Tanner

At St. George's Anglican Chapel on King Street, Helen Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bonter, Lorne Avenue, was quietly married to John Knapton, son of Mrs. Katherine and the late John Knapton of England. The Rev. F. A. Smith, rector of St. George's Church officiated. The bride looked lovely in a gown of fuchsia velvet with black and white accessories and carried a bouquet of white baby mums. The bride's sister, Miss Inez Bonter, acted as bridesmaid and carried a bouquet of bronze baby mums. John Austin was best man. A dinner was held at the bride's home on Lorne Avenue following the ceremony and close friends and relatives attended. The happy couple left for Rochester and points west on their honeymoon. They will reside on King Street.

Successful Euchre

The women of St. Peter's Catholic Church held a successful euchre and dance in the auditorium of the Separate School on Monday night. Forty-one tables were in play and the high lucky winners of the evening were: Ladies' first, Mrs. L. LaMorre; second, Mrs. Crowley; men's first, Mr. E. LaMorre; second, Mr. Harold Smith. HINTS HOGARTH FINANCES PARTY; HOGARTH DENIES

Scenes, Incidents And Comments at Madoc Nomination

Madoc, Ont., Dec. 2 (CP)—Political capital of Ontario for a day, this Hastings County village sought a return to normalcy today after providing the setting for a boisterous debate between Premier Hepburn and Conservative Leader Rowe.

Meanwhile Hastings East electors will vote next Wednesday when a bitter Ontario by-election ends.

Rugged merits of the debate yesterday which dazed to an uproarious, incomplete ending when the Premier, after launching the debate was drowned out by noise as he attempted rebuttal.

Opening the verbal combat after listening Officer Floyd Ashley announced the nominated candidates were Dr. Harold M. Welch, Conservative, and Dr. H. A. Boyce, Liberal, the Premier made a general defence of his administration and levelled charges against Brig.-Gen. D. M. Hogarth and Col. George Drew, Conservative organizer and former securities commissioner.

Mr. Hepburn charged Gen. Hogarth with financing the Conservatives and being the "behind-the-scenes" director. He charged Col. Drew with failing to investigate companies with which Senator Arthur Meighen allegedly was connected.

After Mr. Rowe fired the counter-attack with criticism of the government's Hydro Contract Cancellation and Separate School Tax Legislation the Premier tried to reply. Cheers and jeers drowned his efforts. For perhaps ten minutes he tried to make himself heard and then sat down. It was the first time in his career Mr. Hepburn had been prevented from addressing an audience.

Hepburn's Third Joint Debate

For the Premier it was his third joint debate since 1930. For the Province it was the fourth such event in thirteen years. Previously Mr. Hepburn, when member of Parliament for Elgin West, debated with Rodolphe J. Gold, member for Prince Edward at St. Thomas in 1930. He had an unarranged debate at a nomination meeting prior to the Ontario general election of 1934 with Dr. E. J. Davis of Aylmer, his Conservative opponent.

Recording these in widespread interest was the meeting of Howard Ferguson, then Conservative leader, and Attorney-General Price in the 1923 Provincial election campaign. That was one time Kane night in the old skating rink at Fenelon Falls, heavy downpour of rain and a general uproar gave the speakers a tough time. Crowds who came to hear about the "last awful mess the party" which brought much publicity for the province's first Farmer Government were disappointed.

The Conservative party was backed by financiers "who exploited you more than anyone else," Mr. Hepburn said in his 45-minute speech. He added he would not condone tax evasion by wealthy persons.

Mr. Hepburn named Gen. Hogarth and Sir Herbert Holt as two who had incorporated in the West Indies to escape taxation in Canada.

"Is (General Hogarth) hied off to the West Indies after exploiting your, the Province's credit, to have a letter from Nassau showing Hogarth Incorporated there to escape our misery in taxation forever, and Earl Rowe should be proud of it?"

Hogarth Denies Evasion

Gen. Hogarth said in Toronto last night there was not the "slightest attempt" on his part to evade "one five-cent piece of taxes." Earmarking him as master mind of the Conservative party, he added, was "altogether an ill-deserved compliment."

Interrupted by a section of the crowd after his reference to Gen. Hogarth, the Premier said: "Oh, you people who have come to scorn, wait a minute and you'll see what smokers these men have made of you."

Turning to Senator Meighen and Col. Drew, the Premier said Senator Meighen had $300,000 worth of Ontario Power Service Corporation bonds. Mr. Hepburn was referring to Liberal charges made in the 1934 Ontario general election about Senator Meighen dealing in the bonds while a member of the Hydro Commission. He charged Mr. Meighen "violated his oath of office."

(Senator Meighen said at Toronto last night the Premier had been making those charges for years but a Royal Commission appointed by Mr. Hepburn failed to find them true.

Drew's Denial

(Of the charge he failed to investigate companies with which Senator Meighen was allegedly associated, Col. Drew said here last night "There is not a shadow of foundation to his suggestion that I ever gave special consideration while Commissioner of Securities.")

Mr. Rowe had hardly a quiet moment during his one-hour speech. He began with a declaration Liberal Independent Liberal paper said:

"If the King, who is of age and knows his own mind, is sufficiently in love to permit in his intention, the public would, we think, wish that he marry the woman of his choice, but do so in his capacity as the Duke of Cornwall. His wife's position then would be the King's consort, not Queen of England."

The Associated Press also "highly informed sources" represented the King and Mrs. Simpson as "victims of loyalty of the great masses and that in any problem affecting either his public or private life will not continue to have their sympathy and support.

King Is Aware of Duties

These sources further were quoted as asserting "King Edward is fully aware of the duties and obligations involved and will take no step likely to discredit either the heritage of loyalty thereto he holds or to violate the trust and loyalty of the British peoples throughout the world."

The Bishop of Bradford, whose speech at a Primrose gathering on Monday brought the issue into the open, said his words were not intended as a rebuke to His Majesty and had no connection with Mrs. Simpson.

In his speech the Bishop said some of us wish he (the King) gave more positive signs of his awareness of his need of God's grace."

Bishop Blunt Explains Statement

In his explanatory statement the Bishop, Rt. Rev. W. F. Blunt, said he was referring "to the fact that to all outward appearance the King seems to live entirely indifferently to the public practice of religion. He may have a private religion of his own. That I never imagined for a moment, but he doesn't show the world he has one and I think that is a pity."

GOVERNOR UNDER ARREST

Charged with concealing an employee's alleged thefts from the bank he headed at Rutland, Vt., Governor Charles M. Smith of Vermont was arrested and later freed when $6,000 bail was furnished. Governor Smith, 68, was specifically charged with misprision of felony, a charge brought under an old statute in Vermont. According to State's Attorney Jas. S. Bloomer, the governor's arrest grew out of a bookkeeper's alleged thefts amounting to more than a quarter-million dollars.

Legislature members were "whipped into line" to support the Separate School Tax Legislation. He said the act was unfair because it encroached on public rights.

Following on Premier's Hepburn's reference to his announced campaign to "clean up" succession duties owing the province from large estates, Mr. Rowe said a former Conservative administration had collected from an estate closed by the Drury government twice the amount obtained from any one estate by the Hepburn government.

"Name the estate," someone shouted.

"The John Eaton estate," Mr. Rowe said.

The Conservative leader waved a newspaper advertisement headed "New Brigs a Reality." This, he said, was an example of the Hepburn new deal and one of the deals promised at the Liberal convention.

"You'll be billed for this when it is finished, if it ever is. Just like the highway and the airport sidewalk," he said.

PEOPLE OF EMPIRE

Her friends said she remained deeply concerned last her friendship with the king affect adversely either his personal interests or the welfare of the British Empire.

She will stay by his side until the king formally sanctions her departure, moreover.

While speculation was in full cry as to the purpose of yesterday's conference between the king and prime minister the Daily Mirror carried a headline which read: "The king wants to marry Mrs. Simpson; cabinet advises 'no'."

Summons Members of Staff.

The Associated Press reported His Majesty summoned three members of his personal staff to his country residence this morning and later a motorcycle messenger with secret dispatches left Buckingham Palace to Fort Belvedere.

While the cabinet was said to be holding itself in readiness to convene for further discussion of the situation, The Associated Press said "highly reliable sources" asserted the "king intends to stick to his guns, dealing with each critical situation as it arises."

An early statement by Prime Minister Baldwin was predicted in the Evening News.

The London Rothermere paper gave over the entire front page of its early editions to discussing the situation and carried photographs of the King and Mrs. Simpson.

The journalistic press entered the picture with the Cape Times of Cape Town, South Africa, suggesting editorially that the whole "constitutional issue" be laid before the public for discussion. It even recommended the "whole truth" as the "healthiest corrective" to vague rumors sweeping British territory.

Baldwin Confers With Simon.

Following his audience of the king last night Mr. Baldwin conferred at length with Sir John Simon, Home Secretary whose office brings him into close relation with the Royal Family.

In the wave of gossip sweeping the country the premier was regarded as striving to persuade His Majesty to terminate his friendship with Mrs. Simpson.

Rumor also had it that Mr. Baldwin wished to bring the matter to a head and that parliamentary support was on his side.

Under constitutional procedure, if the ministers disagree with any of the King's actions in which they deem themselves responsible to parliament, they have the privilege of resigning. Then the King faces the problem of forming a new government.

If he is not able to do this, then he must recall the resigned Prime Ministers—but only on the terms of the latter.

Without making known any reason for his action, Sir Ralph Maxwood, financial secretary to the King, announced his retirement.

In the wave of press comment, the News-Chronicle discussed a possible morganatic marriage. This Marriages between the King and Mrs. Simpson would be unacceptable. It said because of the fundamental effect it would have on the relations between church and state.

The article referred to rumors the King might solve the problem of his private life by marrying Mrs. Simpson, making her Duchess of Cornwall and asking parliament to pass an act of exclusion barring the issue of any such marriage from the throne.

Mrs. Simpson and her two previous husbands have been divorced and upon that the church takes its stand, was the Church Times' position.

Britain has learned "with profound sorrow and dismay" the Church Times said, that King Edward intends to marry "an American lady who has divorced two husbands."

The Duke of York was officially announced to have cancelled a scheduled visit to the Wandsworth Technical Institute after he was recalled to Fort Belevedere for the conference with his brother, the King.

Large Crowds Gather

Shortly after noon the crowd surging through Downing Street became so unwieldy a cordon of police from Scotland Yard hurriedly organized the little East End street cleared.

The crowd around No. 10 Downing Street and Buckingham Palace swelled with the noon hour.

The guard of mounted police was posted around the palace to keep the populace moving.

Fitful editions of the noon papers were snapped up by the crowds as soon as they appeared on the street.

During the morning several visitors passed through the crowd into Buckingham Palace. One of the visitors was Sir Eric Mieville, private secretary to the Duke of York, next in line of succession to the throne.

One news service hurriedly sent a 32-page biography of King Edward to all its member papers.

Its heading placed emphasis on the King's accession promise last January that he was "determined to follow in my father's footsteps." The article also recalled that at the King's request parliament granted him an extra purse of £40,000 ($200,000) a year in the event of his marriage.

Lloyds underwriters, besieged by anxious merchants put by less money in the event of postponement of Good May's coronation, almost quoting rates against a possible decision.

Most of the underwriters said they had their books full, that they did not like to take more of such business, or "yesterday's rate of 25 guineas per 100 is now out of the question."

Danger of Change

Col. Josiah Wedgewood, Independent M.P., told the British Press Association:

"The King is beloved. 'Tis exiting we have got to avoid more than anything else is abdication. Any change will tear this country in twain. If a general election comes the outcome will be on the side of the King."

The Associated Press said speculation turned to whether the King, for the time being, had met the opposition of Mr. Baldwin by advising him that he had made no arrangements to marry Mrs. Simpson and had no intention of doing so unless he had the support of his ministers for an arrangement of his private life which would be satisfactory to himself, to the established church and to his government.

THE DOUBLE-BARRED CROSS

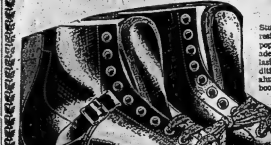
International Symbol of the Crusade against Tuberculosis

As armies march across the pages of history, fighting for their rights or their crowns or for the case may be, con custom has given to each army its own emblem all: each carried flags and standards to lead it into battle.

Good or bad, the cause was always blazed forth in terms of the flag which gradually became a deified creature itself. After the Crusades, the double-barred cross became the emblem of the Knights and with this symbol upon their breasts many a doughty knight rode forth to do battle for the principles and to save the souls of the Holy Land from the Infidel.

Throughout the ages, flags and ornaments have been the symbols of nations, families, orders, guilds, causes. The Salvation Army found a religious symbol among the flames of hell—a fiery cross for the cause. The wraiths of Stygium is an ancient Greek symbol of mourning.

It was left for the Crusades to find a symbol that would have something like significance and universal acceptance of the Red (Greece), Cross, and the Red Crescent (Turkey). In the Crusades, had the army not only the Red Cross, but those of the various units. Those, however, were lost and so as they had also to avoid the Infidel, the Cross, the Pilgrims and the Turks, in the words of Dr. D. A. Stewart, the Holy Land "Health Officer" to the Crusaders, thought they might recruit their sick and look." And so we have the pantomical cross, the Lorraine Cross of the two crusades accomplished, now a symbol of the fight to free the world from the age-old scourge, tuberculosis, a new crusade to win back the Holy Land of Health, the world the Holy Land of Health."



This is the banner under which the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives have carried their many victories—the banner under which they and other sanatoriums and tuberculosis workers' organizations in the Province have won such marked victories.

This victory can only be won with the continued effort and the financial support of the people at large.

Your contribution to National Sanitarium Association, 372 Bay street, Toronto will be greatly appreciated.

Proof of the rebel halt is given here where Franco's men have dug trenches in the Madrid suburbs, indicating they expect a longer and less decisive struggle than had been expected.

CABINET DECLINES TO YIELD TO KING'S WISH TO WED MRS. SIMPSON AND KEEP HIS THRONE

Baldwin's Statement and Mrs. Simpson's Departure Developments

No Morganatic Marriage Known in British Law; Compromise Impossible Baldwin Defines Stand

Rumors Spread About London That Acceptable Way Out of Crisis Will Likely Be Found

CROWDED HOUSE HEARS BALDWIN

Marriage of Mrs. Simpson to King Edward Would Make Her Queen Automatically, Says Prime Minister Baldwin

Fort Belvedere, England, Dec. 4—(CP-Havas)—Prime Minister Baldwin arrived at Fort Belvedere, King Edward's country residence, at 6:05 p.m.

The Associated Press said Mr. Baldwin made a final appeal to the King to give up Mrs. Wallis Simpson. It also said the Prime Minister called a cabinet meeting for tomorrow.

It was the third time Mr. Baldwin had called upon the King in less than 48 hours.

He left Belvedere after a 55-minute interview and returned to London.

London, Dec. 4—(AP)—Prime Minister Baldwin gravely announced to the House of Commons today the government declined to yield to King Edward's suggested compromise to enable him to marry Wallis Warfield Simpson and keep the throne.

Mr. Baldwin said the King's marriage to Mrs. Simpson automatically would make her Queen unless there was special legislation, which the government refused to introduce, such as would allow the King to marry his American-born friend without altering the existing succession to the throne.

This constitutional change, he added, also would require the assent of all the Dominions and "I am satisfied from inquiries I have made that this assent would not be forthcoming."

Mr. Baldwin's statement, following conversations he has had with King Edward, was taken as meaning the monarch had expressed a wish for compromise legislation permitting him to marry Mrs. Simpson without interfering with the right of succession to the throne of the Duke of York and his children, Mr. Baldwin declared no such compromise was possible.

Compromise Unconstitutional, Says Baldwin

A compromise, by which Mrs. Simpson could marry King Edward VIII but not become Queen, would be unconstitutional, the Prime Minister told a tense, crowded parliament.

"There is no such a thing as what is called a Morganatic marriage known to our law," he asserted.

The only possible solution would be a special act by parliaments of the Dominions to consent to Edward's marriage and permit his wife to become his consort.

"His Majesty's government are not prepared to introduce such legislation," Baldwin said.

So in a hushed House the Prime Minister disposed of any idea of a morganatic marriage, which he said had no place in law in Great Britain.

Acceptable Way Out Hoped For

The cabinet thus stands by its guns. But rumors gathered force that an acceptable way out would be found.

INITIATIVE SAID BY PREMIER KING NOT DOMINION'S

Question of Collective Concerns Reats With Several Governments

DOMINIONS INTERESTED

Initiative in Crisis Naturally With The U. K. Government

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP)—The existing situation between King Edward and the British nobility or the King's possible marriage to Wallis Warfield Simpson, was not developed on the initiative of the Canadian government as distinguished from the British government, Premier Mackenzie King implied in a statement issued at noon today. The initiative lay necessarily been with the United Kingdom government.

The initiative was taken, however, the statement said, "with due regard to the public concern and responsibility of the several governments of the British commonwealth."

Premier King's Statement.

Mr. Mackenzie King issued his statement before he had an opportunity of reading the press reports of Premier Baldwin's statement in the British House of Commons but it is not known whether he had been previously advised of what Mr. Baldwin would say. The statement:

"There is one thing I should like to say about many of the cabled communications which have appeared in our press. It is quite wrong to allege that in the existing situation any proceeding or course of action in Great Britain has been at the instance of or upon the insistence of the Dominions and of Canada in particular, as distinguished from the United Kingdom. I can, of course, speak with knowledge and authority only in so far as Canada is concerned, but I believe what I am saying will be found to be equally true of all the self-governing dominions. What is and has been of concern on the part of the prime minister and government of the Dominion is full recognition of the fact that the several dominions are deeply interested in all that pertains to the crown. As a consequence, there is, and has been, consultation between the several governments. The initiative has necessarily been with the British government. It has been taken, however, with due regard to the collective responsibility of the several governments of the British commonwealth."

Party Leaders to Wind Up Campaign Tues. in Deseronto

Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, will both wind up the Hastings East by-election campaign in Deseronto Tuesday night. It will be the first time the leaders have held simultaneous meetings in one town.

The Liberals announced some days ago Mr. Hepburn and Hon. Duncan Marshall would speak in Deseronto Tuesday night. Today Conservative headquarters quickly hired another hall and Mr. Rowe and Col. George Drew would speak.

HIS MAJESTY KING EDWARD VIII

'About whom centres the greatest constitutional crisis in British History for many years. There is hope that solution will be found very shortly.

Mrs. Simpson Leaves England, Is On Way to French Riviera

London, Dec. 4—(CP)—Departure from England of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, central figure in the controversy between the King and the Cabinet, today provided a new development in the constitutional crisis.

During the night Mrs. Simpson went from Belvedere Castle to France, crossing the English channel by steamship. She motored from Dieppe to Rouen, spent the morning there, and left for Cannes by automobile shortly after noon.

Informed quarters said she herself had urged her removal from the scene. These sources declared it would ease the situation. It was expected Prime Minister Baldwin would make a statement to the House of Commons this afternoon.

Final Outcome Awaited

The separation of King Edward and Mrs. Simpson will be only temporary, authoritative sources said, depending upon the final outcome of the constitutional crisis. A possibility still was seen that the King might be forced to abdicate if he persisted in his friendship for the one-time Baltimore belle.

Mrs. D. Merryman, who came here to act as chaperone for her niece until her divorce decree from Ernest Simpson becomes final, remained in London. She was expected, however, to join Mrs. Simpson on the Continent shortly.

Four trunks and other Simpson luggage labelled "Miss Burke" were placed aboard a channel boat leaving Dover at 1 p.m. to be sent to Mrs. Simpson who departed secretly for the French riviera last night.

It was learned the King placed Mrs. Simpson in a big motor car for her journey from Belvedere last night. Accompanied by a bodyguard and one of the King's secretaries the car raced her through the darkness to the south coast of England where she caught a boat for France.

The King arranged for her to go to the Versailles Villa of Lady Mendl, wife of Sir Charles Mendl, who is attached to the British Embassy.

Sends Message to London

Evreux, France, Dec. 4—(AP)—Wallis Warfield Simpson, King Edward's American-born friend who left England last night in the midst of a serious constitutional crisis over their relationship, left Evreux today for, an unknown haven.

She immediately entered her car and started to re-trace her journey back to Rouen.

Any number of side roads, however, connecting the highways leading both to the Riviera and to Paris, join the Rouen high-road a short distance from the city.

Mrs. Simpson appeared to be in excellent health and showed no trace of the illness which various London reports have mentioned.

Mrs. Simpson was simply dressed in a rust-colored tailored travelling suit.

The party was encumbered with very little luggage. It was reported that Mrs. Simpson's chauffeur bought a large collection of road maps of the Riviera district and asked for others showing the auto route through Grenoble Gap.

SPREAD OF SOCIAL CREDIT IS REMOTE SAYS T. A. CRERAR

Expressed Opinion Alberta Would Soon Return to Former Gov't.

NOT SERIOUS FACTOR

Introduction in Alberta Has Spoiled Private Credit, Claim

New York, Dec. 4 (CP)—Spread of Social Credit theories of government to other provinces of Canada from the Province of Alberta is a very remote possibility, Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources for Canada, told the Association of Life Insurance Presidents at their 13th annual meeting here today.

He also ventured the personal opinion that within a few years Alberta would get back to "the methods which have been characteristic of the public concern and responsibility of the several governments of the British commonwealth."

Premier King's Statement.

Mr. Mackenzie King issued his statement before he had an opportunity of reading the press reports of Premier Baldwin's statement in the British House of Commons but it is not known whether he had been previously advised of what Mr. Baldwin would say. The statement:

"There is one thing I should like to say about many of the cabled communications which have appeared in our press. I can, of course, speak with knowledge and authority only in so far as Canada is concerned, but I believe what I am saying will be found to be equally true of all the self-governing dominions. What is and has been of concern on the part of the prime minister and government of the Dominion is full recognition of the fact that the several dominions are deeply interested in all that pertains to the crown. As a consequence, there is, and has been, consultation between the several governments. The initiative has necessarily been with the British government. It has been taken, however, with due regard to the collective responsibility of the several governments of the British commonwealth."

Maintain Steadiness

"It may be said," he stated, "that the Canadian people maintain in a high degree their traditional steadiness. It is true that new political thinking appeared on the horizon and climbed some little way into the political sky and, although their appeal to the people got some small measure of support, they were nevertheless not such as to undermine in our political situation, excepting in the Province of Alberta.

"There we had a political eruption based on what was called Social Credit, the main idea of which was that cultural heritage and, all the common resources of the people could be established and used as the basis for payment of Social Credit dividends. Its economic effects not dissimilar to the manner in which some commercial concerns before the war gave an appeal to a confiding public.

"During the night Mrs. Simpson went from Belvedere Castle to France, crossing the English channel by steamship. She motored from Dieppe to Rouen, spent the morning there, and left for Cannes by automobile shortly after noon.

Informed quarters said she herself had urged her removal from the scene. These sources declared it would ease the situation. It was expected Prime Minister Baldwin would make a statement to the House of Commons this afternoon.

Final Outcome Awaited

The separation of King Edward and Mrs. Simpson will be only temporary, authoritative sources said, depending upon the final outcome of the constitutional crisis. A possibility still was seen that the King might be forced to abdicate if he persisted in his friendship for the one-time Baltimore belle.

Mrs. D. Merryman, who came here to act as chaperone for her niece until her divorce decree from Ernest Simpson becomes final, remained in London. She was expected, however, to join Mrs. Simpson on the Continent shortly.

Four trunks and other Simpson luggage labelled "Miss Burke" were placed aboard a channel boat leaving Dover at 1 p.m. to be sent to Mrs. Simpson who departed secretly for the French riviera last night.

It was learned the King placed Mrs. Simpson in a big motor car for her journey from Belvedere last night. Accompanied by a bodyguard and one of the King's secretaries the car raced her through the darkness to the south coast of England where she caught a boat for France.

The King arranged for her to go to the Versailles Villa of Lady Mendl, wife of Sir Charles Mendl, who is attached to the British Embassy.

Sends Message to London

Evreux, France, Dec. 4—(AP)—Wallis Warfield Simpson, King Edward's American-born friend who left England last night in the midst of a serious constitutional crisis over their relationship, left Evreux today for, an unknown haven.

She immediately entered her car and started to re-trace her journey back to Rouen.

Any number of side roads, however, connecting the highways leading both to the Riviera and to Paris, join the Rouen high-road a short distance from the city.

Mrs. Simpson appeared to be in excellent health and showed no trace of the illness which various London reports have mentioned.

Mrs. Simpson was simply dressed in a rust-colored tailored travelling suit.

The party was encumbered with very little luggage. It was reported that Mrs. Simpson's chauffeur bought a large collection of road maps of the Riviera district and asked for others showing the auto route through Grenoble Gap.

Royal Family In Seclusion

LONDON, Dec. 4 (CP Cable)—All members of the Royal family have resolved for the time being to remain in strict seclusion.

This was emphasized today with the cancellation by the Princess Royal of an engagement to open a new boys' club at Doncaster. It was intimated that the Princess was "exceedingly perturbed" from being there.

It was presumed members of the Royal family would maintain this attitude until the current grave constitutional issue between the King and the cabinet is settled.

INQUEST PROVES AN INVESTIGATION

Motorship Mibou a Government Ship Before Purchased

Owen Sound, Ont. Dec. 4.—(CP)—Inquest into the death of James Edward, wood boy was this time to be recovered after the motorship Mibou sank off Squaw Point, November 21, opened in County Court House here today before Grey County's Chief Coroner, Dr. A. B. Sutherford. More than just an inquest, it was actually an investigation into the sinking of the motorship with loss of seven lives. Two bodies have been recovered.

Original owner of the 28-year-old Mibou when it was first converted into a passenger boat, John Tackaberry of Lion's Head, said she was a government boat when he purchased her.

Mr. Tackaberry said the boat had water ballast tanks, one forward, one amidships and one aft. These gave her about 75 or 80 tons of ballast.

She was classed A1 after inspection, but was never given a stability test when I had her," he said.

Questioned as to loading Mr. Tackberry said that during his ownership she was always loaded first in the hold and then on the deck.

'Remove Wedge of Separatism' Plea of Ex-Mayor Stewart

Conservative Rally on College Hill Told Public School Issue Splits Province

PUBLIC SCHOOL PLEA

Refuting the charge of the Premier of Ontario, that the Henry Government paid grants to Separate Schools in an unfair and unlawful method, Mr. William J. Stewart, K.B.E., ex-Mayor of Toronto, hurled a defi at Premier Hepburn and Dr. Simpson, Minister of Education, last night in the Collegiate when he declared the Separate School grant you are going to get for the Province of Ontario will be a crowded hall at College Hill, in support of the Conservative candidate in the forthcoming by-election.

Mr. Stewart drew the plaudits of the crowd on several occasions as he delivered a stinging attack on the amendment to the Assessment Act, "the wedge which is splitting the province of Ontario."

Seated on the platform with the speaker were, Mr. C. E. Knowles, Associate Editor of The Toronto Evening Telegram, the circulation manager of the same paper, Mr. H. B. Neely, Mr. Harry Hoskin and Mr. Fred Mitchell, President of the Young Canada Club of Thurlow, who acted as chairman for the evening, Bud Haines and his Commanders Orchestra supplied stirring rhythm during the course of the evening with the audience joining heartily in a community singsong.

Wedge of Separatism

The speaker scored the Amendment act as "the wedge of separatism which is being driven to split the people of Ontario. King John forced the people of England to pay taxes until they presented him with the Magna Charta. Premier Hepburn forcing us to pay taxes in support of the Separate Schools? With this wedge being driven in, are we going to enjoy civil rights and liberty in this country. To the people of every creed I cherish every feeling of good will, but I appeal to you to go out and vote for Dr. Welsh and remove this wedge.

W. T. Jackson, attorney general to the Duchy of Cornwall, spent the night at Windsor with the king's personal household.

"Do you desire the services of a lawyer?" asked Chief Kidd. "No sir," replied Simpson as he pleaded guilty to the charge.

In a statement given police today Simpson told of seeing Mr. Jones in a local beverage room and had watched him tender a five dollar bill in payment for a purchase. Simpson stated he followed Jones out of the hotel and along a darkened street in Foster Ward there attacking him from the rear. Simpson said Jones successfully removed four one dollar bills from his trous. er pocket, but he (Simpson) had taken the ninety cents in change then remained in the pocket.

When reporting the robbery to the police on Wednesday night, Jones pointed Simpson as his assailant, however, No arrest was made until P. C. Arnold saw the accused man proceeding homeward under the cover of darkness last night.

TWO REMANDED UNTIL MONDAY

Assault Charge Facing J. Chappelle and Theft Against G. Asseltine

James Chappelle, Hungerford Township, pleaded guilty to a charge of having possession of a still suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor when he appeared before Magistrate Lloyd in today's local police court. The conventional fine of $100.00 and costs was imposed, Chappelle being unable to raise the fine, however, was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail in default. The case was presented by the Ontario Provincial Police and was carried on for the accused, the illicit still being found on his property, police stated, in June of 1934.

A further charge of assaulting a police officer was read by Chief Ellis of Tweed, who asked for a remand in the case until Monday. Chappelle is alleged by police to have assaulted Chief Ellis during his arrest at his home some two weeks ago, when the home had been surrounded by police officers to effect his capture.

Owing to the absence of B. O. Donnan, K.C., County Crown Attorney, a number of cases were laid over for one week.

Gordon Asseltine of this city, pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the premises of the Routley Construction Company, Hawdon Township, on the night of July 17th last with intent to commit the indictable offence of theft. After the guilty plea was accepted, Provincial Constable Ellis asked for a week's postponement in sentence until Monday. The request was granted, Asseltine being remanded.

Arthur Hagerman, Stirling youth, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery. The case was remanded for one week to allow for the usual investigation. An inebriate fattened the coffers of the court to the extent of $10 dollars and costs after pleading guilty.

The pictures of veterans' graves and His Majesty King Edward VIII were also impressive. HEPBURN, ROWE DISCUSS ISSUES IN E. HASTINGS

Premier Speaks at Shannonville And Hon. E. Rowe at Marlbank

Perhaps a bit strenuous for them at the time, the historic joint bouts between Premier Hepburn and Conservative Leader Rowe at Madoc appeared today to have provided fresh ammunition for both in the battle to win the Ontario by-election next Wednesday in Hastings East.

Proceeding last night with their individual speaking efforts and long-range attacks after the debate at Wednesday's nomination meeting in nearby Madoc, the Premier and Opposition Leader found in the verbal clash material for their speeches.

Ontario's liquor law, designed for the promotion of temperance, has been translated into an instrument for increasing drinks sales in order "to raise revenue to balance a half-year's deficit for the Hastings by-election", charged Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, speaking in Marlbank last night, on behalf of Dr. Harold Welsh, candidate in the Hastings East provincial by-election.

"One thing that stood out most conspicuously in the nomination speech of Hepburn at Madoc was his sneering attempt to deride the real issue," said Mr. Rowe, "by a rubbing of sores of unemployed individuals, some even unknown to the riding, and by reckless distribution of the records of all governments. While he most appreciates the real issue, and the need for legislative record, it was the least discussed in his remarks. He made light ridicule of the rich and sob appeal to the poor characterized his campaign. He is not the first one becoming more apparent every day, a clever demagogue.

"Mr. Hepburn proceeds to secure the support of the well-to-do by promising that the Liberal party at their gold while he endeavours to get the unemployed vote and stolen jobs good only to Dec. 9", declared Hon. Rowe. "The surveys appointed to bridge the stolen jobs in the winter in lieu of employment promises, are a political farce.

"The Conservative leader again set forth the principles of his party and in the by-election is the Assessment Act amendment allocating certain taxes to Separate schools. This legislation, is unwarranted because the assessment for it was not given by the people, he said.

"The chief promoters of this legislation were more interested in political expediency of Hepburn and Nixon, than concern for the welfare and for the security of minority rights," he said. "This is a piece of legislation most unfair in practice and dangerous in principle. It is contrary to the policy which supports the great public school system and which I will not burden no matter of what faith. since, it is dangerous for the minority who have chosen a Separate school system as it changes the whole basis of taxation for educational rights."

"Now, to summarize, but rather to warn sympathetically the minority groups in this riding, most of whom I should be most concerned with the dangers to which I have referred more than they be assured, are not disturbed our progress in uniting this Province more and more, revived without a mandate, it threatens our harmony and progress of this country. The secretary of Hastings East is most important as it will be remembered by the suppression of liquor with reference to the maladministration we have received in this and other matters from the Hepburn Government".

"A vote for Dr. Welsh is an endorsation of our stand for the repeal of the amendments in the assessment act", he declared.

Mr. Hepburn's reckless mal. administration" of the beer and wine laws in Ontario.

"We stand that in Ontario not a liquor control policy but a liquor-out-of-control policy. No longer can our liquor laws be accepted as measures to encourage temperance but rather have they become sales plans to raise revenue to balance a half-year's budget for the Hastings by-election," he said.

Premier Hepburn Speaks

The premier went to Shannonville, referred to several charges in Mr. Rowe's speech and denounced the opposition clientele's assure the public that if elected in the next general election he would not repeal the act cancelling Quebec power contracts. Referring to the old country generally, Mr. Hepburn charged an effort in the east to stamp out the religious feeling.

Mr. Hepburn said participation of former Premier W. J. Stewart of Toronto; "that rabid abolition-of-separate schools advocate"; Rev. T. T. Shields of Toronto, and Cecil Armstrong, Toronto civic employee, was indication "every effort is to be made to inflame the Protestants against the Catholics for years have lived here as neighbors and friends."

After reiterating the separate school legislation, which gave a larger share of corporation taxes to separate schools, constituted an economic issue, the premier reviewed his stand on the question of conservative organizer and former Separate School Inspector Campbell's resignation to Mr. Rowe's charges in the Madoc debate.

Charging "lack of supervision on the part of Mr. Drew," the premier said a miner at Cobalt Lake had fallen into hands of promoters and development was stopped. The village had to go on relief.

The mine, he said, was recognized under the administration of J. M. Godfrey, successor to Col. Drew, and now not one person was on re-

To the Victor Go the Honors

Quite has descended on the village of Madoc. The milling, jostling crowds which had thronged its streets during the afternoon, of Nomination Day had departed for their homes. A wisp of a moon shone a ghostly light on the snow covered streets of the headquarters of one of the most bitterly contested political battles, that the village of East Hastings has ever known.

Three shadowy figures emerged from a building, cast furtive eyes in both directions, then began a systematic attack on posters of the opposing party, which adorned posts and buildings.

But they had reckoned without the opposition. Suddenly a flying tackle in the form of a single member of the opposite party, hurled itself in their midst with fists flying. Then ensued one of the finest battles of the campaign. Fists thudded on flesh. The participants whirled in a haze of flying snow. Then it ceased, "today the first political "black eye" is being proudly displayed by the lone adherent, who though outnumbered by a majority of three to one, claims he "split" the opposing vote in no uncertain manner.

Mrs. Simpson Reaches France

Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, shown here in a new and excellent picture, close friend of King Edward, was yesterday reported ill of worry and influenza at her London home, while His Majesty and the cabinet debated separately the difference of opinion involving a possible marriage between the American girl and the monarch. Today the cables carried news that Mrs. Simpson had arrived in France and passed through Rouen.

Empire Facing Constitutional Crisis With His Majesty's Abdication a Possibility

Great Britain and the Empire, shaken by the rift between King Edward and his Cabinet upon the reported injection of His Majesty to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson, former Baltimore society beauty, faced a major constitutional crisis as King and Cabinet stood unyielding in their decisions, with either the abdication of the King or resignation of the government distinct possibilities. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, supported by each member of his cabinet and by at least part of the Dominion government in his opposition to the marriage, summoned leader after leader in British public life into conference. His Majesty summoned close personal friends and advisers to his summer home at Fort Belvedere. Rt. Hon. Mr. Baldwin is reported to have informed His Majesty that if the government would be forced to resign, and that opposition parties would decline to form a new government should the King fail to bow to the wish of his advisers and sacrifice his personal feelings and those of Mrs. Simpson to the ideal of kingship. They are supported by the priests of the Church of England, the Archbishop of Canterbury, who has lent his support to opposers of the proposed marriage for many weeks. The great mass of the British public, kept in ignorance of the impending crisis by press censorship, stood aghast. London heard that the Duke would abdicate and go abroad at once, his brother, the Duke of York succeeding to the throne. All the Empire waited as the crisis approached its climax with the British press almost solidly behind the government, and editorially warning His Majesty to bow to the wish of his statesmen. Prime Minister Baldwin is seen (LEFT) at his desk. His Majesty the King, in the uniform of the Seaforth Highlanders, is at the RIGHT. Beneath the picture of the historic Parliament Buildings at Westminster are shown Archbishop of Canterbury, the Rt. Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang (LEFT), and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

ROYAL ROMANCE INTRIGUES PRESS

Manchester Guardian Sees Hope of Solution of Crisis

London, Dec. 4—(AP)—A marriage between the King and Mrs. Ernest Simpson "would scandalize a very large proportion of the nation and empire and therefore do infinite harm to the whole institution of British monarchy," declared the Times today.

The newspaper based its statement on the fact "the lady in question already has two former husbands living."

"The King is free to choose," said the Express, adding: "You must believe that he will choose wisely. The King through war and peace, strife and storm has borne his part in the eyes of all men as a son of Kings should do and since he took the cloak of Kingship he has deepened the channels of our emotions towards him."

"There is a way out," suggested the Liberal News Chronicle.

"King Edward should agree to marry Mrs. Simpson in his capacity as Duke of Cornwall or Lancaster, rather than make her Queen of England; at the same time he should acquiesce to an act of exclusion, passed by parliament, debarring from succession to the throne any heirs of her marriage."

Lessening of the crisis was indicated by the Manchester Guardian, often described as the most influential provincial newspaper. It said:

Hopeful For Solution

"Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's assurance in the House of Commons that there was no constitutional difficulty may legitimately be heard as the present confirmation of the hope all of us have been cherishing—that no direct conflict between the wishes of the King and the advice of his ministers would arise."

The Daily Mail asserted the country "resents the one-sided attacks which have been made by censorious critics who have shown an utter want of human understanding, respect and pity."

"Abdication is not of the question," the Mail stated.

The Telegram declared: "It matters in the highest degree that matters radically, matters constitutionally that the first lady in the land shall be untouched by such rumors and reports as of late have been in general circulation throughout the world."

The News Chronicle carried a stream of developing comment in its "letters to the editor" column. Many of the writers argued the King should marry the "woman of his choice."

Labor Press View

The Daily Herald, Labor, declared the sole dispute concerned constitutional questions and had nothing to do with the King's apparent wish to marry a commoner.

"In the Labor party, marriage with a commoner, if that were the issue, would give much democratic satisfaction," the Herald said.

"But that is not the issue, and of all parties, Labor must be the most sensitive to constitutional implications of the principle where the outcome has public consequences between the King and the government which the people have freely chosen to represent it."

Dominion Aspects

Capetown, Dec. 4—(CP Cable via Reuter)—The Dominion aspects of the constitutional crisis were emphasized in editorial comment by the Cape Times today.

The Times referred to the "constitutional aspects which are the deep concern of each of the Dominions as well as Great Britain" and said:

"In the terms of the statute of Westminster, the assent of all the Dominion parliaments as well as of the United Kingdom parliament would, in the unhappy event of abdication, be required, for any change in the law of succession."

The paper declared it was the right, if not the positive duty, of the Dominion governments to tender their advice to His Majesty and added that the advice of his ministers in each of his Dominions as well as those in the United Kingdom should be in all probability be unanimous.

Stressing this aspect of the matter the Times added:

"It might mean that the terribly serious constitutional crisis which would arise in the United Kingdom in Bloemfontein, Almost unbelievable event for His Majesty acting in conflict with the advice of his ministers would be repeated in each of the Dominions.

NO MORGANATIC MARRIAGE

Explain's Government's Stand.

London, Dec. 4 (AP)—Prime Minister Baldwin took the floor in parliament today to expound the government's stand on King Edward's possible marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

"In view of widely circulated suggestions as to certain possibilities in the event of the king's marriage, I think it would be advisable for me to make a statement," he said.

Mr. Baldwin was cheered loudly when he entered Commons.

He looked neither to the right nor the left a few feet from the mace which is the symbol of the power of the House of Commons.

"Suggestions have appeared in certain organs of the press yesterday and again today," he said rising to speak, "that if the king decided to marry, his wife need not become queen.

"Those ideas are without any constitutional foundation.

No Morganatic Marriage Law.

"There is no such thing as what is called a morganatic marriage known to our law. The Royal Marriage Act of 1772 has no application to the Sovereign himself.

"It only effect is that the marriage of any other member of the Royal Family is null and void unless the sovereign's consent, declared under the great seal, is first obtained.

"This act, therefore, has nothing to do with the present case. The king himself requires no consent from any other authority to make his marriage legal, but as I have said the lady whom he marries, by the fact of her marriage to the king, necessarily becomes queen.

"She herself, therefore enjoys all the status, rights and privileges which, both by positive law and customs, attach to that position and with which we are familiar in cases of her late majesty Queen Alexandra, and her majesty Queen Mary, and her children would be in the direct line of accession to the throne.

Legislation Not Likely.

"The only possible way in which this result could be avoided would be by legislation dealing with a particular case.

"His Majesty's government are not prepared to introduce such legislation."

"However the matters to be dealt with are of common concern to the commonwealth as a whole and such a change could not be effected without the assent of the dominions.

"I am satisfied from inquiries I have made that this assent would not be forthcoming.

"I have felt it right to make this statement before the house adjourns today in order to remove a wide misunderstanding."

Baldwin read slowly and deliberately from a typed document after Clement Atlee, Labor leader, had again asked if the prime minister had any statement to make.

House Rises Quietly.

"At this moment," Baldwin replied, "I have no other statement to make."

Atlee again rose from his seat and said "at this state of affairs I think it would, even if time allowed, be undesirable to make any comment or to discuss the prime minister's statement."

Cries of "hear, hear" resounded throughout the house.

"The statement is one to which we shall have to give our very grave est consideration," Atlee said.

The House Arose Immediately.

The thunderous applause after Baldwin said "His Majesty's government are not 'prepared to introduce such legislation" left slight doubt in the minds of his hearers that he has parliament with him.

The instant Attlee, who was obviously playing a prearranged part, said it would be undesirable to discuss the prime minister's statement the chief government whip rose and moved the hurried adjournment.

Congratulations For Wedgwood.

Colonel J. Wedgwood, Independent, who introduced a motion in the house yesterday suggesting that parliament repledge its allegiance to the king, said he had received more than fifty messages of congratulations for his action.

One Canadian message suggested that if there was a world-wide election "the king would win handsomely."

A message from Bromley in Kent said "congratulate you on your pluck in voicing the feelings of millions."

Other messages said "all ex-servicemen furious at what they consider Bishops' interference"; "everyone supports the king except the church, the smug and those politicians who are frightened of both."

Wants Open House Debate.

After reading the messages Wedgwood said, "I want an open debate in the House of Commons. I am perfectly certain the House of Commons is for the king."

Premier Baldwin made his historic statement to a hushed and awed house. The members sat motionless.

Baldwin leaned across the red dispatch case on the speaker's desk. His face, lined and drawn from the worry of the past few days, was gravely set.

Several cabinet ministers entered just as Baldwin began his statement but stopped and lined up behind the speaker's chair where he was standing instead of proceeding to their usual seats.

Baldwin's Words Outstanding.

The prime minister's statement was the outstanding development in the constitutional crisis arising out of the conflict between the king and the cabinet.

Atlee became known that Mrs. Simpson had left England last night and proceeded to France.

Yesterday rumors were current that the crisis might lead to the abdication of the king. Governing estates of authorities were said to be consulted in the event of such a step as well as the succession, which would be necessary now having the event of abdication.

Mr. Baldwin's statement to Parliament is said that the crux of the crisis today was legislation dealing only with the particular case of a king who desired to marry a divorcee.

The legislation would be d make it possible for Mrs. Ernest Simpson to be married without their marriage succeed not represent true

Dominions' Aspect

His majesty's gov prepared to intro tion," said the p cheers.

What the kin marry Mrs. Simpson being "queen. It would not affect the succession rights of the Duke of York and the Duke's children. He wished to marry Mrs. Simpson without upsetting the present succession.

Prime Minister Looks Worn.

The prime minister looked pale and worn as he rose in a tense, packed Commons to deliver his statement. Every member hung on the grave statement in the hushed touch of the British Statesmen Await King's Decision

Major Attlee

Col. Wedgwood

Lord Halifax

James Maxton

Sir John Simon

"Their deliberations brought into limelight by the constitutional issue between King and Parliament that was rumored as making possible the abdication of King Edward, these British statesmen played prominent roles in the strained London political atmosphere during the crisis. Lord Halifax, along with Sir John Simon and Premier Stanley Baldwin, has been the bitterest opponent of a proposed marriage between the King and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson. Major Clement Attlee, Labor leader, was supporting the government stand along with James Maxton, Jerry Laborite, who swung from his contention that the king had a right to do as he wished, when his plans conflicted with the advice of the cabinet. Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Labor M.P., made a move to line up parliament behind the monarch's stand by sponsoring a renewal loyalty pledge in a question for debate in the House.

Displaying a pamphlet entitled "Education" the speaker reviewed education since 1847. It contained he said, a history of the Separate Schools and a statement of the Quebec educational system. "Read it and see what will happen if Hepburn has his way," declared Mr Peterkin. "He will try and force his pet, the Quebec system, on us. "What does the Globe think of that," said a voice.

"I haven't heard," replied the speaker.

WAR DEBTS

The old question of war debts, which some years ago when the world was in the throes of the deepest depression, was one of the factors on which many figured the recovery would take place, and which then disappeared from view as the debt dates passed year after year without payment and then sank under a shadow as the rearmament race opened up, has again reared its head. For three years with the single exception of Finland, no nation honored the bills which the United States sent out. The attitude of the twelve nations in default is not that they have repudiated their obligations but that they cannot abide by the terms of the settlements, and that they are ready to discuss a revision of the contracts originally entered into. They are waiting for the United States to move and the United States is waiting for an offer from them.

If this question were opened up, a flip flop forward of the world with the extension of trade might result—surely a factor in bringing nations a little closer in a day when so many nations dread one another.

VOLUNTEERS

Those men who voluntarily go to Spain to take sides with one or other of the battling parties must be brave men. While there is a natural desire for thrill, the foreign legionnaire is not prompted as the native of the country who is at war. Yet in this war which is a fratricidal war of unprecedented violence and violation of so many of the traditions of warfare and humanity if even part of the stories which come out can be believed foreign volunteers are evidently playing no small part. The reason is, it is believed, they are actuated most of all by sympathy with the opinions of the group with which they ally themselves when they arrive in Spain. It is a case of political faith with them.

It is this factor which makes the situation one which causes concern to others. Nations generally do not gally go to war, and neither do individuals. But for a political principle nations will struggle as men. Therein lies the danger.

But there are hopes that the danger is magnified in the minds of most people and that there will come a relaxation of that intensity in international affairs which might strike a spark.

This is entirely in addition to the risk to the world of a great inrush of such volunteers for such might mean international repercussions within a very short time.

CHEESE MAKERS

Cheese makers, who have been holding their convention here, bringing the largest exhibition of cheese together ever seen in this dairy centre, have shown themselves as workers in no mean calling that of production of a large share of the food which is consumed at home or exported from this district. They are important as they are associated with the first industry of man, agriculture, for if all other industries passed, the production of food would remain as long as a man lived on this planet.

They are producers of one of the healthiest foods, cheese, a product of milk, one of the original foods of man.

It is no wonder that business emporiums stress the cheese industry, stress this exhilation and convention as of far-reaching importance when experts meet the producers. There is a practical science of the utmost importance.

A NEW BALKAN ACCORD PROPOSED

An interesting sidelight on the trend of affairs in the Balkans is provided by the new military agreement discussed at Bucharest by Roumania, Turkey and Greece. "You will [illegible] to give some power to [illegible] change or keep the plant [illegible] money," Al Ms. Walters asked that Mr. [illegible] could not be present at the meeting as he had to be in Washington on other business but it was the intention of the purchaser to enlarge the production by increasing the service, enlarging the mains and if the offer is accepted. Mr. Walters was ready with a certified cheque for $5,000 and the remainder immediately upon completion of the agreement.

YOUR OWN FAIR YOUTH

Your own fair youth, you care so little for it—
Smiling toward heaven, you would not stay the advances
Of time and change upon your happiest fancies,
I keep your golden hour, and will restore it.

If ever, in time to come, you would explore it—
Your old self, whose thoughts went like last year's pansies,
Look unto me; no mirror keeps its glances;
In my unfailing praises now I store it.

To guard all joys of yours from Time's estranging
I shall be then a treasury where your gay,
Happy and pensive past unaltered is.
I shall be then a garden charmed from changing
In which your June has never passed away,
Walk there awhile among my memories.

HOUSEWIVES MAY BAND THEMSELVES INTO AN ARMY TO DEMAND BIGGER AND BETTER KITCHENS, according to news which comes from Western Ontario where mass meetings of wives will be called to discuss the kitchen problem. The ladies are interested in the new government plan to provide money on easy terms for home improvement and the banks have promised to co-operate. Tiles for the walls of kitchens, beautiful and sanitary, sinks of the proper height with drainage attachments, cupboards with labor saving receptacles, working surfaces that cannot be dented and require little cleaning, etc.—all looking toward perfect modern kitchens, eliminating steps and making kitchen work a pleasure. Kitchens are frequently neglected because the guest rooms must be kept up to date, hence the kitchen is not an inviting place when it should be the most interesting room in the home. Modernizing kitchens will mean elimination of waste, better health and cheerier dispositions, all of which pay such large dividends that the small sum paid each month on capital account will be but a bagatelle.

WE SHOULD EAT MORE CHEESE FOR OUR HEALTH'S SAKE, for economy's sake, and for the sake of encouraging a Canadian industry which brings millions of dollars into Canada each year, shared by the cheese buyers, exporters, makers and farmers, beside the many branches of mercantile life which enjoy the trade of cheesemen. The convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association in Belleville this week has drawn attention as never before to the importance of this industry to the people of Belleville and district. Cheese produced in Ontario and Quebec alone this year amounted to over one hundred million pounds, valued at over twenty million dollars. That's prosperity in any language. An increase of five million pounds in the exports to the Old Country featured the current year's business together with an export of ten million pounds to an entirely new market, the United States, as the result of the lowering of tariff bars in consequence of the recent reciprocity agreement between the two nations. Cheese money benefits more people and covers more ground than any other industry. The cheese business begins at the grass roots and circles the globe in response to insistent demand, especially Belleville cheese which is world famed for quality. Hill in Discussion

There was only one slip in the discussion and that occurred between Alderman Lewis and Arnott, respecting a statement, that Lewis allegedly declined was made by Alderman Arnott, when the question was discussed before the plant was taken over from the Ontario Shore Gas Company. Alderman Lewis claimed, that Alderman Arnott had said "that the plant should be scrapped", but Alderman Arnott hotly denied the statement remarking that he said "that probably if an expert opinion had been given the council he may have recommended the scrapping of the gas plant." Alderman Arnott called upon Alderman Clift Bateman, chairman of the committee of the whole for a withdrawal of the statement from Alderman Lewis but the Alderman only went so far in his retraction "that he heard the words spoken".

Alderman Arnott, Wills, and Thompson carried the arguments against selling the plant for that sum, while members of the committee were for selling the plant for the $80,000. Alderman Clarke and Alderman Safe also spoke against the sale, Alderman Safe expressing the view that probably more money could be secured for the plant. Alderman Jennings, chairman of the Gas Committee introduced the question to the members of the Council by reading a letter from Mr. Walters respecting his offer and was as follows:

The Letter of Offer

"To Alderman Jennings,
Belleville, Ontario,
"Dear Sir—

"Hereby is tendered my bid for the purchase of the Gas Plant and distribution system, all its equipment and appurtenances and investories as is and as they are November 1st, 1939, for a consideration of $80,000 payable, when the sale has been properly authorized and become legal, in cash and a further consideration, of a reduction in the presently prevailing industrial rate of ten per cent. It is agreed upon that assessment valuation of the plant and distribution system shall not be increased in excess of $80,000 during the next ten years. It is also agreed that I shall at my expense pipe and make ready to service with gas the many business not now able to obtain that service within one year from this date.

(Signed)

Alden-Aurora Gas Company,
Buffalo, N.Y.,
Per A. K. Walters.

Negotiations Carried on

Alderman Jennings stated that the proposition to sell the plant to the city firm was based on the above offer and a constant communication had been kept up between Mr. Walters and the committee since that time. "After going into the matter fully" said the Alderman "the committee discussed the matter and agreed upon the said offer. We have also the question of fixed assessment would have to be voted on by the ratepayers but we are of the opinion, that this will be granted. I think the offer is fair and equitable and that we will probably relieve the city of a large expenditure if we put down the new first class condition, a condition it's not in at the present time. There is no doubt, that some repairs are immediately necessary at the plant and if the plant is retained the Gas Committee will have to come to the Council for money to carry out these repairs. "The gas plant has always been a headache" in the city for many years and it is of the opinion that unless a considerable sum is spent and the proposition of the service made, the plant in its present condition will be a long time paying off the indebtedness and with this offer we can get out from underneath the plant."

Alderman Thompson "The Council was taken by surprise when it was stated at that time the plant would require a large sum of money and now there is a complete right about face on the matter and the gas committee wants to sell."

Offer is Explained

Alderman Armstrong, "You know of the operation of the plant by the Ontario Shore Gas Company and that it was in their possession and it was the only feasible thing to do at that time. The present cost of this plant has been riding on the backs of the ratepayer for a long time. In taking over the plant the Committee thought the city could manage it as good as it was being done by the Company and the members are of the same opinion. But we have a cash offer here of $80,000 and it is up to the Council to accept or reject the offer. It is the Committee's business to lay the whole matter before you and we have recommended that the plant be sold for that figure. We could retrieve the money and the loss would not be very great on the debenture, but it is a big loss. There is only one way, that I see to make the plant pay and that is to increase the consumption of gas that is done. the Gas Committee will have to ask for more money from the taxpayer through the Council."

Alderman Jennings, "You will have to give some money to increase the consumption of gas and to keep the plant."

At this point A. K. Palmerston, who was present in the interest of Mr. Walters stated that Mr. Walters could not be present at the meeting as he had to be in Washington on other business but it was the intention of the purchaser to enlarge the production by increasing the service, enlarging the mains and if the offer is accepted Mr. Walters was ready with a certified cheque for $3,000 and the remainder invested upon completion of the agreement.

Mayor is Heard

Mayor Harry Hill—"The Gas Committee has many days on this question and I don't think the Aldermen present want to run the plant as a civic enterprise but we were in the position, that we had to take over the plant. I have been before us a legitimate cash, offer and there will be little loss and I think it is better business to take a little less and get the cash than take a little more with a small down payment and the remainder in a mortgage. If the plant is sold we have the guarantee of Mr. Walters, that Belleville labor will be used to establish this new service.

If the company at anytime should give it up, I think that the city should have a chance in the agreement. "Talk it over and come back to the city."

Alderman Thompson—"I think we should have been told at the time that the plant was taken back that the repairs and costs of tonight were needed. I am sure we did not get this information."

Alderman Jennings —"Yes, the council had the information that some repairs were necessary. Don't think for a minute, that we could run the plant at a profit the first year it is for us we can and return to the city as much or more than the Ontario Shore Gas Company received and I am sure we did not overestimate

Cooking School Closes Session

Mrs. E. McLean Reveals Many New Cookery Secrets

An innovation in the Hydro Cooking School held this week in Christ Church Parish Hall, was the open discussion at the close of the session yesterday when questions from the audience concerning electric cooking were ably answered. The discussion closed a very pleasant and profitable three day school in charge of Mrs. E. McLean, well-known expert, of Moffat's, Ltd.

A variety of delicious cookery was prepared by Mrs. McLean, winning the admiration of the audience. As Mrs. McLean worked she passed along various suggestions from her experience in cookery problems—the newest hints, and old and tried methods that form the principles of successful cooking.

The art of being a good cook is entirely a matter of following precisely basic recipes, and Mrs. McLean discussed these, adding variations which keep dinners from being dull.

Assisted by Mrs. Bagsdale, Mrs. McLean completed such appealing desserts as gingerbread, redcurrant rolls, cranberry pie, almond tarts, French fried custard, and-and-apple Betty with Creaming. Each step was closely scrutinized by her audience and alarmists in the group reminded Mrs. McLean from time to time of things still in the oven. Not one anything would be overlooked.

Mrs. McLean pointed out the advantage of cooking with electricity and stressed the latest improvements of the new type ranges. She also stressed some simple rules that will make electric cooking more efficient and economical.

Representing Belleville Hydro, Mr. Everett Smith presided for the discussion session and many helpful suggestions were brought out in answer to cookery problems.

At the conclusion of the class, Mrs. Earl Hickey, president of Christ Church Parish Guild, extended the gratitude to Belleville Hydro, Moffat's, Mrs. McLean, the local progress of demonstrations Mrs. Bagsdale and Mr. Smith for their help and co-operation. A vote of thanks was moved which had been a real benefit, intellectually and economically.

Mrs. McLean made a charming reply to the words of appreciation extended her.

MAN'S ABUSE OF HIS EYES MAKES TROUBLE

Seventy People Out of a Hundred Have Defective Vision, Says Eyesight Specialist

Statistics indicate that seventy people out of every hundred have defective vision. This is not surprising in view of the fact that many, today, use his eyes so utterly contrary to nature's plan of seeing. Indeed the surprising part is that any of us have escaped defective vision.

It is not as if eye defects merely dimmed the vision. They rob one of much of the joy of living. They frequently result in headaches, indigestion and pain.

And it is not as though defective vision were something which must be endured. Ninety-five per cent. of eye defects can be corrected by optical science. This fact is the one bright ray in the situation. And because it means so much to so many people, it is only the part of wisdom to have Edwards, Eyesight Specialist, test your eyes and correct all defects of vision that glasses will remedy.

Disgusted, Smyrla turned homeward only to be tagged by a policeman for not having a motor vehicle inspection certificate.

VIMY MEMORIAL DESCRIBED BY PADRE LAMBERT

Christie Street Hospital Chaplain Gives a Stirring Address

FINE ENTERTAINMENT

John M. Wilkinson Presided and With John Echlin Trophy

The story of Vimy Ridge, which though one, that has been written in blood, is one also that has been replete with thrills, pathos, and suffering, yet there has seemed from that terrible orgy of sorrow the greatest spirit the world has known or witnessed in the history of civilization. But it is one that has not ended yet, for even today it is a day by day battle with a display of courage unparalleled.

These were the words of Padre Lambert, C.O., Padre of Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, before whom the assembled members and friends of the Central Ontario Chess Association at their annual banquet in Moose Hall last evening pay tribute to the heroes who created spirit the world had known or witnessed in the history of civilization. But it is one that has not ended yet, for even today it is a day by day battle with a display of courage unparalleled.

It was a devastating indictment of war rendered by Captain Lambert yet yet Canada and Canadians had found herself and had shown the world, that her native sons had prepared to and had cheerfully given their all for a cause for which they believed—a cause of righteousness and love of country.

"War is the ugly thing, the ugliest thing in the world, but yet it remained the highest thing in my life and the life of others" asserted the Padre of Christie St., believed during the world conflict by thousands of Canadian troops and, who is still carrying on the work of rehabilitation among broken bodies.

Through the narrative delivered by Captain Lambert ran those thrilling and interesting episodes of life in the trenches and sights and scenes brought to life again during the second trip to Vimy Ridge this summer.

Judge McLean Chairman

Introduced by Duncan R. Cowan, Toronto, in charge of the entertainment of the evening, who was in turn introduced by Judge Ryan R. McLean, Picton, chairman of the banquet, Captain Lambert was described as a Padre who had also given of his share in the war's sacrifice, having been returned to Canada minus one limb. For over eighteen years has he carried on his work in Christie Street hospital, bringing daily a measure of comfort and hope to "his boys."

Admitting his right to be present and assist in a cheese maker's banquet because he, too, had been identified in his native county as Somersetshire, England with the industry, Captain Lambert pointed to a further tie in this district where his father-in-law, the Rev. S. T. Cousins had resided for many years. Not only himself, but his wife, also had had the privilege of serving Britain in the Great War, it was added.

Captain Lambert had been met at the station late yesterday afternoon by a guard of honor composed of local returned war veterans, and by Mayor Harry Hill, who accompanied him to the banquet chamber. Here he was greeted by the entire assembly.

Challenge Read

"The challenge was real to me as it was to the rest of the boys. They did not ask what they were going to get out of it, and it was hard for them as well as myself to be soldiers and to accept the daily grind and monotony of barracks and training ground.

"We were on the side, which seemed to come out best, and we came home to our own land, not as a defeated race, and we were happy that we had been able to get rid of the ugly business of war."

Recalling, that he had returned to France and Belgium on the Vimy Pilgrimmage as a representative of the disabled soldiers of this country, Captain Lambert related the incident of the King of Belgium thanking him for the part Canada's heroic sons had played in that great conflict. "Not it was not only the King of Belgium who gave us his thanks, it was the whole people of Belgium who turned out in their thousands to offer their gratitude."

Now upon row of graves still dot Belgium's fields, and are kept in first class condition by the Graves Commission through the years since the armistice, the speaker. "And on those breadcloses is placed the little sign: "Their Name Liveth for Evermore". One grave in particular that he visited was the one where lies the body of Private Price of Western Canada, who was killed by a stray bullet just a few minutes before the bugles had sounded ceasefire over the battlefields on that morning of November 11th.

Familiar names through the Ypres district were revisited and recalled. At Valsecimmes ,where Sergeant Major Price was Dr. Victoria Cross a boulevard is now named in his honour. Few cities have been built in the former war-torn areas with the only grim reminder of the conflict that now can be seen at the entrance to each city where a cross stands, and there is placed a stone of remembrance is placed.

Tour of Fields

Of the Vimy Memorial itself five hundred thousand tons of ageless granite now stand in a huge pile, surmounted by a carven Angel of Mercy and with the names of 11,000 men, who had died there carved imperishably on the huge monument that rears to the sky. At Ablain Duke many graves are marked seven thousand of them, whose names had not been learned but had died in Flanders fields believing that God was God and that right was right, declared the speaker in his world tour of the former battlefields.

"They had something worth while to die for. I wish there was something worth while to offer for the men and youth of today to lead them from the path on which they are like you may see now at Madoc soft other places, but a devastating urge has led them on to bigger things." Those men believed in a cause, a cause that was so great that they willingly laid down their lives. What a comment on the days when we have people who give everything they have for.

Not only has this spirit of sacrifice been given to those who were wounded and those who died over in the war, declared Captain Lambert, declaring that the same thing felt by the husbands and families of those, who had not returned. The story of war is one even yet of a day by day battle of men, of wives and children, of suffering and battling with a display of spirit which has been unparalleled.

"For eighteen years we in Canada have lived in peace, peace made certain that none our boys died in France. Peace has been bought for us by them. May we be able to catch that spirit of those who have gone and live to bring it about in our own generation", declared the speaker.

Chairman Speaks

As chairman of the evening, Judge Ryan McLean, Picton, in a editrial and amusing address referred to Prime Edward County and Belleville as the home of chess. Belleville because they had found the peace and quietness of the city most restful.

"Tonight I have imposed myself upon the Central Ontario Chess Makers' Association for the fourth time and in that time I have watch the seasons come and go and the fortunes of the chess industry with them. There is an old song "The World is Waiting for the Sunrise," in the words of that song I believe the sun is now rising and shining on the industry. "Happiness is just ahead," he assured.

To Mr. T. A. Thompson, M.P. for Lanark, was given the task of presenting the massive silver John Echlin Trophy to Mr. John M. Wilkinson, Toronto, for capturing the honors of making the best chess in Eastern Ontario for the exhibit which closed at the city hall yesterday afternoon. Introduced by Judge McLean as being associated with the chess industry for the past twenty-five years as secretary of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, Mr. Thompson gave evidence to the splendid work that was now being carried on by chessmen all through this district. Without the chess industry, Eastern Ontario would be bankrupt," declared Mr. Thompson, stating the importance of the industry. "And among those are found our finer band of men anywhere than the instructors who are charged with the responsibility.

Referring to the late John Echlin, Mr. Thompson described him as a man who knew the importance of a good man, who knew when a job was well done, and who rewarded them accordingly.

In expression of regret at his inability to attend was made by telegraph by Geo. J. Tuzin, M.P., Napanee.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption, as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wasting disease; sufferers lose in weight, energy and appetite, and finally die from exhaustion. Then, too, it is a communicable disease, spreading from person to person.

The war has fully realized by the founders of the Canadian Legion, and during the three forty years ago they resolved to do everything in their power to prevent the spread of this disease.

Starting in the year, with much opposition and even ridicule, at a time when little was known of the cause and cure of consumption, they have gone on doing things which had to be, as we further explain.

However, it was not long before the regions of the country were brought to their results—people were actually taken on the road to health and strength.

Such was the small beginning of the Canadian Legion War Services and the Mary Hogtgale for Consumptives, which have grown to be the great organizations of public and private organizations that they are today.

The results have been that thousands of Canadians have been given a chance to get well, who but for hospital treatment would have died. Many have been helped, and the mortality from tuberculosis has been greatly reduced.

Every penny collected from the poppy sale is used to carry on this great work. If you are ill, go to your doctor and follow his advice. If you cannot afford it, write to National Sanitarium Association, 372 College Street, Toronto.

Stirling and District

Stirling—St. John's parish hall was well filled on Monday evening when the members of the A.Y.P.A. entertained the members of St. Paul's Young People's Union and St. Andrew's Young Peoples Union to a musical numbers by members of the visiting societies and an illustrated address by Rev. W. B. Jennings recently returned missionary from northern British Columbia made up the very interesting program.

After a brief address of welcome to the visitors Mr. Morrow, president of the A.Y.P.A. called upon Rev. A. S. McConnel to introduce the principal guest of the evening. Rev. Jennings,who also officiated as Captain on the Mission Boat "Northern Crown" out of Prince Rupert, B.C. gave a most educating address on his work up and down the coast and in its Columbia river district. Beautiful slides artistically tinted were shown illustrating the scenic grandeur of this isolated area. A pictorial tour of the boat itself and the missionary's home was also in the service of the Great King proved more than interesting to the large audience. Shades of lighthouses on the lonely reefs of the western coast where the Northern Cross made regular calls and the fishing villages of the prospecting camps of the north were all very graphically described by the speaker. Character studies of the people with whom he came in contact during his ministry were portrayed as taken with his own camera and reproduced on slides. Through the lecture were stories of human interest, drama and grim tragedy sufficient to demand the rapt attention of all listeners.

At the conclusion of this fine lecture Rev. W. J. Scott expressed the gratitude of those present to the United Church, in a motion of thanks to the speaker which was ably seconded by Rev. J. K. Kellow of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. President Morrow who acted as chairman then continued to announce the remaining number of the program which included instrumental solos by Mrs. R. H. Williams, organist of St. Andrew's Church and Mrs. R. Moore, pianist of the St. Paul's organization, Mr. Robt. Hedley sang a splendid tenor solo with Mrs. Moore at the piano and a duet by Messrs Wm. Thompson and Arthur Duncan was also very much enjoyed. One of the outstanding numbers on the program was a reading offered by Miss Jane Thompson well known elocutionist of Stirling. The combined talent of the two visiting organizations along with the excellent address given by Rev. W. B. Jennings made up one of the most interesting programs ever presented in Stirling.

At the end of the program Rev. A. S. McConnal expressed the hope that more of such joint meetings would be held in the future and that from them a greater unity of society would reap great benefit. The New Memorial Parish Hall was built expressly for community service and belonged to all in the service of Jesus Christ he declared.

The young ladies of the A.Y.P.A. assisted by some of the older boys served a splendid lunch consisting of sandwiches and cakes and a social period climaxed a most pleasant evening.

Unusual Services at St. Paul's United Church

Sunday last was an outstanding day in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling. The day was given over to Sunday School and Anniversary work. The former occupied the morning hour and the latter the evening hours of worship. A similar service was held at Carmel in the afternoon.

A young people's choir led the service of praise in all services, the leaders of the Sunday School and of the Y.P.S. shared with the minister the conduct of the services.

Rev. Manson Doyle, D.D., associate secretary of the Board of Christian Education of the United Church of Canada, Toronto, was the special preacher at all services.

In the morning he addressed the boys and girls of the school on a message for the adult members, stressing the fact that the opportunity of the Sunday School, the opportunity it affords for character building, and how behind all such opportunity it stands stressing the values that matter most to life. The Christ teachings laying the foundations upon which other educational agencies build.

In the evening Dr. Doyle spoke impressively for young people, taking as his text the words of Ecclesiastics "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

This word "Remember" he pointed out, did not mean here an act of memory as it usually means, for youth does not possess a past in the sense in which age does, but to hear means "consider", or think upon". And from a great experience that life means and can mean he built in when men think chiefly of things that are temporal or fleeting, like money, or pleasure etc. This writer means, said he unto youth to think seriously, not to think sadly, nor yet pessimistically, but to think upon what values are permanent. For these are represented by the term Credo.

Carmel U.F.O. Entertain Stirling Organization

The Young People's Union of Carmel United Church were hosts on Friday evening to the members of the Stirling Young People's organization at their regular weekly meeting when the latter were entertained under the leadership of their president, Miss Mary Hicks, in a delightful social on the program. The meeting was opened with a brief song service followed by prayer by Mr. L. Bird. Secretary Wesley Brooks then presented his report which closed the opening exercises of the meeting. Miss Mary Hulin, President of St. Paul's Young People's Union then officiated as Mistress of ceremonies, the remaining part of the evening and after the singing of the theme song called on Rev. W. J. Scott to lead in prayer. Mr. Robt. Hedley offered a fine tenor solo, and the speaker for the evening was Miss Mae Currie who gave a splendid address on the subject "Jesus the Son of the Gospel". Miss Fenwick presented an interesting reading which was followed by a brief address by Don Williams on the aims and objects of young people's organizations within the United Church of Canada. This part of the program closed with the singing of another hymn and was followed by an interesting social period during which the members of the Carmel group served lunch. The meeting closed with the singing of "Blessed be the tie that binds" and the Mispah Benediction.

THE QUALITY CAR IN THE LOW-PRICE FIELD

FORD V-8 FOR 1937

Quality in its NEW DESIGN

Entirely new appearance, with a quality look in every line. A wide, roomy car with a low centre of gravity. Distinctive front end, with headlamps streamlined into fender aprons. Modern lid-type hood hinged at the back. New all-steel top sweeps back from the windshield in an unbroken line. Larger luggage space, reached from the rear through a wide door. Visors built over windshield in all closed cars. New interiors with the trim, tailored look you expect of a quality car. New instrument panel, with all gauges grouped for rapid reading. Starter button is on the instrument panel. Parking brake lever at the left under the panel. Battery is under hood for easy service.

Quality in its TWO V-8 ENGINE SIZES

This year the famed Ford V-8 engine is offered in two sizes. 85 horsepower for maximum performance with good economy —60 horsepower for good performance with maximum economy. The improved 85-horsepower V-8 engine delivers its thrilling speed and acceleration with unusually good gasoline mileage. The new 60-horsepower V-8 engine delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness—even at speeds up to 70 miles an hour—with gasoline mileage so high that it sets an entirely new standard of economy in modern motor car operation.

Quality in its ALL-STEEL BODY

The Ford all-steel body is costly to build, but cost does not count in a quality car where the protection of you and your family is concerned. The frame structure is all steel—not an ounce of wood. It is sheathed with steel panels—top, sides and floor. All are welded into a single steel unit of great protective strength. Safety Glass throughout at no extra charge.

Quality in its EASY-ACTION SAFETY BRAKES

The advanced type of brakes in the 1937 Ford gives you both dependability and soft pedal action. They are quality brakes, positive and direct, with "the safety of steel from pedal to wheel." Cable and conduit control type. Self-energizing—car momentum is used to help apply the brakes. About one-third less pedal pressure is required to stop the car.

Quality in its NEW COMFORT AND QUIET

The 1937 Ford V-8 is a big, roomy car. Extra space is in the body for passengers and luggage—not taken up by the engine under the hood. Comfort of the Centre-Poise Ride increased by smoother action of the long-tapering springs with pressure lubrication. New methods of mounting body and engine, and other refinements, make this a quieter car.

Great News in its NEW LOW PRICE

The smaller 60-horsepower engine makes possible not only a car with lower operating costs—but a new lower price. By far the lowest priced car to offer you the advantages of a V-type 8-cylinder engine. In this way, the quality car in the low-price field broadens its range of usefulness—makes Ford V-8 ownership possible for an even greater number of people.

"Old Eli" Yale Places Two on Mythical All-American Team, East Has Four Nominated

Eastern Gridders Predominate American Grid Iron in All Departments

KELLEY STANDS OUT

Kelley at End And Frank at Quarterback Are Two From Yale Chosen

New York, Dec. 4—(AP)— The star of all-American football teams brightest this year over the east, in general, and over the ivy-covered premises of Old Eli Yale, in particular, thereby marking a coincidence that is unquestionably will underway in the region that rocked the original gridiron cradle.

The all-star galaxy for 1936, as presented today by the Associated Press, reveals the east in possession of four places on the first team as well as a total of 11 positions on the complete all-American squad of 33 collegiate performers, picked by careful analysis from the best in the country.

This compares with three places on the first team for the mid west, two for the south, one each for the far west and southwest, and none around as a whole the midwest obtains nine places, south seven, far west four and southwest two.

The all-America 1936:

First team: Quarterback, Clint Frank, Yale; halfback, Edwin Widseth, Minnesota; guard, Mac John Starcevich, of Northwestern; guard, Averell Daukaus, Duquesne; guard, Joseph Bedell, Fordham; end, Gaynell Tinsley, Pittsburgh; end, Lawrence Morgan Kelley, Yale; quarterback, Ellsworth Dutch Clark, Colorado; halfback, Raymond Buivid, Marquette; halfback, Clarence McKay Parker, Duke; fullback, Harrison Francis, Nebraska.

The second team:

End, Andrew Bershak, U. of North Carolina; tackle, Charles Ba, Princeton; guard, Arthur White, Alabama; center, Robert Hafrig, U. of California; guard, Nathaniel Pierce, Fordham; tackle, Charles Sarnicki, Ohio State; end, Harold Wendt, Ohio State; quarterback, Howard Murray, U. of Pennsylvania; halfback, Andrew Uram, Minnesota; halfback, Samuel Adrian Baugh, Texas Christian; fullback, Cecil Isbell, Purdue.

The third team:

End, Matt Patanelli, U. of Michigan; tackle, Raymond Franco, Fordham; guard, Steve Rod, Northwestern; center, Walter Gilbert, Auburn; guard, William Shakespeare, Pittsburgh; tackle, Frank Rinard, U. of Mississippi; end, William Daddio, Pittsburgh; quarterback, Edward Goddard, Wash. State; halfback, Philip Dickens, Northwestern; halfback, Nello Don Falaschi, Santa Clara; fullback, John Hutchinson, Dartmouth.

To Yale, where the all-star idea was launched 50 years ago, goes a century ago and developing to its most glamorous heights by that spectacular Walter Camp, goes the distinction of placing two players on the 1936 team. Lawrence Morgan Kelley, spectacular captain and end of this year's accomplishments, Harry, and Clinton Edward Frank, the team's backfield powerhouse, received the blue to a place in the all-star firmament with dazzling performances.

Kelley last year was unanimously end in the United States this year. In the south, for instance, they would concede there is a performer superior to Louisiana State's Gaynell Tinsley in any department of the game. Yet the fact emerges boldly that for sheer genius at his position, plus rare qualities of leadership, of durability, and the knack of scaling the heights under pressure, Kelley comes close to being in a class by himself.

SNOW-COVERED FIELD LIKELY FOR BIG GAME

Expect 15,000 to Witness Sarnia-Ottawa Final at Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 4—(CP)— Interest sky-rocketed in eastern Canada's football classic today as fans realized tomorrow's contest here between Ottawa Rough Riders and Sarnia Imperials would likely be the last senior game of the season. With Kingston Roughriders, western champions, out in the cold, there was every indication the winner would be crowned Dominion champions.

A snow-covered, icy gridiron will likely greet the teams at Varsity stadium, with colder weather, snow and rain forecast. Both clubs will be prepared, however, should the weather-man suddenly change his mind, presenting a sloppy field and unsound footing. Green has been named referee, Gene Rossiter, umpire and Fran Bennett, head linesman.

Large delegations of fans are expected to come from Ottawa and Sarnia, with prospects of a 15,000 crowd providing the weather is not too severe. Imperial ruled slight favorites in betting but most Roughriders' Kingston supporters were not looking for odds.

MY BIG HOCKEY THRILL

(By JOE JERWA)

MY BIG HOCKEY THRILL ..... in everything but actual scoring. What I consider my best and most exciting game was one played with the New York Americans last season. I played against Toronto in the play-offs and that was some game. Both periods gone and no score and did we want to win! Orders to wall for the breaks kept us all on edge wondering which one would ever come. Fifteen Ormond fans gone mad and we did not seem to be able to get anywhere. Toronto had things their own way

Joe Jerwa

Wasn't I thankful I was not a goalie! Workers was the busiest man in New York that night, but he sure came through with the stuff it takes. Then with about nine minutes to go something happened. At our own blue line Chapman got the puck for a breakaway. Away he went, in line with Schriner, making the Toronto defence. Chapman passed to Schriner, and in the meantime I was trailing behind the play. Out came the goalie. The puck was passed back to me and I made sure of one goal for the Americans that night. From then on, to the end of the game we had a few terrific power plays, such as the Leafs are noted for. Fortunately we held solid and when the game was over I realized that with the help of my team mates, I had scored the only and winning goal.

Major Leaguers Willing to Let 'Dead Dogs Lie' in Feller Case

Rival Club Owners Find 'Skeletons' in Their Own Club Houses

LANDIS SILENT

Baseball Market on The Upward Trend, Many Offers Made

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Montreal, Dec. 4.—(AP)—A whisper, uttered in a corner, each with a big stick, was shaking the baseball world today.

Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis was nearing announcement of his long-awaited decision in the case of 17-year-old Bob Feller, sensational Cleveland Schoolboy pitcher, and the jitterys of baseball actually were quaking in their boots.

When Landis first launched an investigation into charges that Cleveland had violated the major-minor league agreement by signing Feller off the sandlots, many club owners hoped the young pitching wonder would be ruled a free agent and tossed into the market for a public auction.

And then, they looked into their own baseball closets. They found skeletons.

Club after Club suddenly realized that should Landis rule Feller a free agent, the gruff and autocratic commissioner would ride on with his investigation. And rule some of their established young stars free agents for the same reason.

There are at least a score of "Feller cases" in the major leagues today, the big league nabobs nervously admit in the profound hope the old man with the big stick will rule Feller to Cleveland and tell them to be good boys and mind their p's and q's against picking up sandlotters hereafter.

It is estimated that Landis has held at least a score of meetings in his effort to get complete and correct of information out of those connected, directly or remotely, with the Feller case.

No one knows when he'll announce his decision. Rumor has it today, maybe next week after he's examined all the evidence. Meanwhile the major league meetings in New York are generating the tension.

"PITT" TENDERED ROSE BOWL BID

Panthers Given Chance For Revenge for Washington Squad

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 4—(AP)—Pittsburgh and Washington, each with colorful 1936 football records of a slightly checkered design, will meet in the Rose Bowl New Year's day.

The Huskies, host team of the west, tendered Pitt the bid as "representing the best in eastern football," and called the Panthers' presence here "a must" for the three beatings they received in past years from the Bowl's hosts.

Athletic director Ray Eckmann of Washington made the selection announcement and said the made good a pledge it would bring a "surprise"

Up to the last minute, Louisiana State University, Alabama, Navy and Pennsylvania were other leading possibilities for the Rose Bowl game, emphasis on L.S.U. and Alabama, whose only blemishes this season were lone tie games. Pitt and Washington each lost one game and tied one during the otherwise perfect fall season.

Pittsburg, Dec. 5—Don Harrison, Director of Athletics at the University of Pittsburg, said last night, the Panthers would accept the Rose Bowl bid.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Contrary to the general belief today poker players of this and most recent generations have not let "Hoyle" decide their disputes on the technical angles of the game, as they surmised. Hoyle died before poker was born.

Edmond Hoyle was born in England in 1672 and died in 1769 at the age of 97 years. He was a teacher and systemizer in the laws and rules of card games and in late years wrote a short treatise concerning the proper play at whist. Later this essay was republished and other card game rules added and published under the name of Hoyle. Incidentally Hoyle's exceptional intelligence at whist prompted him to write a set of rules and therein lies the story of how the phrase "according to Hoyle" originated.

Ever since the artificial ice plant was removed from the Belleville arena rumors have been current about a hard about town has always been there are they going to put the ice plant back in the arena or will they have artificial ice in Bellerille?" Numerous other enquiries are repeatedly on the tongues of local hockey fans relative to the same subject, but seldom is the matter ever studied out thoroughly. Recently the Intelligencer put the question this self-same question with personages who have had experience with artificial ice arenas in other centres and we believe we can give one reason why the plant did not stay in Belleville. Last spring the management of the Whitby Red Wings informed us his club had to pay $12.50 per hour for practice in Oshawa. More recently Squadron Leader Lawrence informed us the R.C.A.F. team, while stationed at Camp Borden, paid $20.00 per hour to practice on the artificial ice at Midland.

When the Belleville Arena did boast of an artificial ice plant local hockey teams sprawled on the cold high heavens, every six and eight dollars were assessed for practice periods. Can you imagine the outright the first year the Belleville Arena operated, as an artificial ice arena, the revenue from practice hours was eight dollars, the next year this fee was increased to ten dollars per hour, however. How the local players ever managed to make an artificial plant a paying proposition, with that fee ruling, is one with other centres charging from $12.00 to $30.00 per hour, we fail to understand.

We are not trying to vindicate any person or persons regarding the loss of the local ice plant, but merely pointing out facts which, somehow, considerable loss was unavoidable. We sincerely hope the day is not too far distant when we can again see the Belleville Arena will boast of an artificial ice plant. Of course without a good hockey club, that can only be with its crown, but continue far into provincial play-downs, it is a hard proposition to operate such a rink without an artificial ice plant in a central centre. Without a pre-season league would warrant the installation of an artificial plant or not, Belleville is in ideal shape for it, with plenty of it to assure the necessary and adequate clicking of the turnstiles. Perhaps we have been taught by what we consider a reliable and authentic source, that the cost of the operation of the Belleville Arena, during the first few years of operation with an artificial ice sys-

CARE OF CHEESE

J. M. Wilkinson, Tweed, Elected President For Year

At the closing session of the ninth annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, at this city late yesterday afternoon, J. M. Wilkinson, Tweed, vice-president during the year 1938 was given unanimous choice of directors as president for the ensuing year. He will be assisted by W. E. Cooper, Sunbury, second time vice-president, and John H. Dodgson, Thomasburg, secretary, who was again elected to that office. Directors named were Grant Anderson, Campbellford; Samuel Anderson, Melrose; H. S. Channel, Hillier and W. E. Bowman, Sydenham.

The final days business marked the termination of the most successful convention yet held by the Association. The year, for the first time, what was declared one of the largest cheese exhibitions ever assembled in Canada and which brought the products of cheese factories throughout Ontario into the competition, was held by the organization. It is expected that the event will be repeated annually in the future, as a feature of the success of the event.

The entire convention, which occupied the two days of Wednesday and Thursday and was concluded by the banquet held last night at the Moose auditorium in the evening was devoted to addresses by those most prominently connected with the cheese and dairy industries both in the Federal and Provincial departments.

During the Thursday afternoon session Mr. Burgess, Chief of the Division of Dairy Products, Ottawa, in presenting his report to the assembled delegates paid particular tribute to the excellent exhibit, that had been assembled. He described it as one of the largest that had ever been shown, possibly the largest that had ever been shown in the Dominion.

In Fine Exhibition

"I have no recollection of any better ever being exhibited in my experience of thirty years at least, if it was added.

"The Central Association is to be highly commended upon the achievement. Two hundred and sixty cheese or ten shown in each crate to advantage. They were the best product of the best cheese-making province in the world. In this the Mayor of the City of Belleville and the city itself should be thanked for the assistance they have given in the promotion of this exhibition.

The prize money allotted was also declared to be the largest that has been set aside for many years.

"In this exhibit it is clearly shown, that the eastern section has fallen down but has continued Mr. Burgess. The quality is exceptionally high, and a credit to the makers of the Province. Once again the western makers have shown their superiority and the eastern men can learn much from their methods.

"One thing, that has been very noticeable is the fact, that the western men were able to turn out more cheese of a better and finished as they have," added the speaker pointing to a grand prize specimen, which stood on the table before him. The exhibit on final whole is wonderful one and the Central Ontario organization should be encouraged to carry it on annually.

Warning the eastern makers not to be discouraged, Mr. Burgess predicted the western men as having had the greater experience over the years in the make and preparation of exhibition cheese.

"We'll show them next year," commented one eastern representative.

Faults of the past years make of cheese in the Province were declared to centre chiefly upon mottled and dull color, a defect to be particularly avoided owing to the overseas buyer's preference for cutting the cheese and showing it on the counters of the grocery store. "A deep straw shade is generally the most suitable color, but less light straw or brick color is preferred," declared Mr. Burgess.

Fat on Good Finish

Carmel Zain, Western Ontario cheese maker and Grand Prize winner of the cheese exhibit, called upon to explain his methods declared there was no secret about it. Particular attention, should be paid, however to the finish upon exhibition cheese, it was pointed out.

"To get this finish in our own case we use lots of hot water to make a solid rind, that can be easily cleaned up. This also seals the cheese against the mould and formation of mould. If there is any secret at all, it is in getting a good, solid rind to begin with," he added. Samples of this perfect cheese were later given out by Mr. Burgess, who had halved it and then "ironed" it to give a first hand demonstration of its quality to other makers.

Senior Produce Grader, Mr. Thos. Hicks of Montreal, at the Thursday afternoon session presented his paper which dealt with a thorough survey made of overseas markets in Great Britain during a recent visit there. Although a strong bid was still being reportedly made for this market for cheesemen of New Zealand, Canada's distinctive cheddar type still held the preference, he had learned during this survey. In England, although a good type of cheddar was being made its production was no commercial threat owing to the small quantities that are produced. High quality is maintained, however, through the fact, that makers of this product are able to obtain milk from single herds over which they have the fullest control from feeding to ultimate milk production and handling.

Excellent Judges

"English buyers are excellent judges of quality, and while they are not too strict as regards the minor defects, they naturally insist upon a good grade cheese," warned Mr. Hicks.

As one instance of the hold of tradition upon them, the majority of buyers of that country have for years shown a decided preference for June and September cheese, even though the rapid advancement of refrigerating methods and better care of the product results in just the same good grade cheese in other months, it was related.

Consumption of the product again depends largely upon industrial conditions in the British Isles. The laboring man is counted as the heaviest consumer of cheese. When the industrial districts are undergoing black times, the sale of cheese suffers to some extent. Then, too, the demand for high grade cheese is seriously affected if the price is too high.

A further warning to cheesemen, that the product must be of good keeping quality if the market in that country is to be held was given by the speaker. Cheese was not considered at its best unless it had been aged for at least from nine months to one year. This habit has been largely, however, to ship green cheese from this country and expect the same high price, it was stated.

"Canada must be prepared to keep up shipments of high rooting cheese or suffer the loss of trade and the lowering of prices that must follow," declared Mr. Hicks in conclusion.

J. F. Singleton, Daisy and Edgar George, Commissioner of Ottawa, in a resume of the cheese industry in the past year or so pointed to the export shipments that had materially increased over this period.

Better Hold in Market

"At one time, not so long ago, Canada's volume trade had fallen so low that the situation was getting serious. We didn't have enough cheese to supply the overseas markets. We stood in danger of losing them altogether under the pressure of increasing methods and supply of other countries. It appears now, however, that we have secured a better hold with increasing trade and shipments.

New Zealand was still Canada's greatest competitor, it was definitely declared by Mr. Singleton, urging that his hearers not be fooled into the mistake that this product was of too inferior quality.

"We have been told, that New Zealand cheese is not of as good grade. It may not be quite as good as that we make here, but it is my own impression that there is no danger of creating a type of cheese, which will find an increasing market all the time to the disadvantage of Canadian cheese. The United Kingdom in the past few years has been getting more independent of the Canadian producer."

One reason for the popularity of New Zealand cheese was that the stringent regulations governing the industry in that country provided for a proper curing time, not generally observed here, it was stated. Cheese from that country were given an average of from ten to twelve weeks time before reaching the markets. Regulations there provide that a period of twenty one days curing must be given in the white cotton cloth and waxed during the remainder of the years. Their cheese are as many weeks away from their market as the Canadian cheese is days," declared the speaker, citing the need for better curing facilities.

"The not over-rosy these favorable reports we get on our cheese unit we see this reflected in better prices. Until we get better prices we should not be satisfied." We have been talking against shipping of green cheese for years now, but so far very little has been done about it," he added.

J. L. Irwin Praised

An expression of appreciation for the help, that has been given by J. L. Irwin, Dominion Dairy Grader of the Trenton district in arranging the cheese exhibit and the ninth annual convention of the Association, was given by the chairman of the afternoon, W. E. Bowman. That year three conventions have been bigger and better ones, and most of the success we have had was due to the man behind the scenes, Mr. Irwin. Without him it is not too much to say this Association would have a hard time surviving at all," it was stated.

The same sentiment was echoed by Mr. J. H. Zeiner, Dominion secretary of the organization.

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson of this city, delighted with a paperjar for the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, was also unfortunately unable to be present conveyed also the best wishes for the success of the industry and cheesemen who are connected with it. A word of appreciation for which the cheese exhibit, which was also declared by him to be one of the best he had ever seen was also tendered by Mr. Robertson.

A. C. Fraser, secretary-manager of the National Dairy Council of Canada also forwarded greetings and best wishes for the success of the convention. He also called attention to the growth of that body and the help that is being accomplished in promoting all branches of the dairy industry, particular attention being paid however to the advertising of the cheese industry by annual attempt and through other methods. Through these efforts stabilization of the industry had been effected greatly, it was declared.

Ma has been trying to get pop to buy a new suit for himself all week, and we was eating breakfast this morning and ma said, Now William you simply positively must get yourself a suit today, there are 3 advertisements from clothing stores in your mail this morning, it seems like the hand of fate.

The 3 fingers of fate mite seem more accurate, pop said, and ma said, One's from Herd and Linnett's and one's from Reed and Ritter's, we'll take care with both you go to-day long as you stop squeezing in public in shabby old clothes. There's absilutely nothing to be said in favor of a disreputable appearance, pop said.

Sure there is, pop said. If a man on and our staff of competent salesmen is cordially waiting to cheerfully show you the most attractive bargains we have ever offered. Most truly yours, and so 4th and so 5th. A very friendly letter indeed, but after all do Herd and Linnett know me well enough to address me as Mr. Potts instead of Dear Sir as Reed and Ritter discreetly call you pop said, and ma said, Now William the important thing is to get a new suit, is why split hairs about a quibble?

It's only fair to weigh their letters and compare them, pop said. It's true Reed and Ritter seem a little cold and distant, but people like that often make the truest friends when you get to know them. I hardly know what to say, he said, I'll know what to say if you come home today without having ordered a new suit.

With he did, and ma said it.

CONTROLLING TUBERCULOSIS

Everyone knows about diseases that at one time caused great loss of life and ...ill health. Typhoid fever was common ...in the last thirty or forty years as a result ...of polluted water supplies. Typhoid ...fever was responsible for 1,000 deaths ...five or thirty years ago. It was not ...uncommon for 100 cases to develop from typhoid ranging as high as 60 or 75 ...deaths out of every 100,000 population. ...To-day, it is almost a disgrace if a city ...has a death from typhoid. Only one ...or two per year. The average death ...rates for typhoid for the last year were ...less than 1.

Yellow fever is another plague of a ...thousand years ago. It is almost unknown in civilized countries to-day.

Diphtheria, the killer of children a ...few years ago, is now a curable ...disease. Many communities have not ...had a case for a year or more. Scarlet ...is several years, thanks to modern ...methods of quarantine, is losing its ...grip.

Smallpox, that scourge and terror of ...the early settlers, is practically under ...control. Vaccination is the secret of ...it.

And so it goes, these dread diseases which once decimated the population, are now ...practically eliminated.

Tuberculosis is still far from being ...under control. Every year figures show that more progress has been made in ...preventing it and curing it than in the ...thirty-five years of the century than in ...all the centuries that went before. In ...1904 the death rate from tuberculosis ...was 200 per 100,000. To-day it is 37.

It is a splendid showing and with the ...goal in sight we hopefully enter the year ...1940. But it is not going to be easy. In ...the last lap calls for the greatest effort ...and if we are to succeed in gaining the ...complete victory over this scourge that ...has been gained over others, we must ...not relax our efforts.

The Kingston Branch of the Canadian ...Tuberculosis Association, 253 College St., Kingston.

I am definitely opposed to the producers investing in a cold storage plant, but if they could use our facilities at one, and pay for it on a box basis, then it would be to their benefit".

PAPER EXPLAINS PRESS SILENCE

Manchester Guardian Believed Gravity of Situation Impelled Omission of Story

Manchester, Dec. 4—(CP Cable) —The Manchester Guardian refers red today editorially to the earlier silence of the British Press in the development of the conflict between the King and the Cabinet over His Majesty's friendship for Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The Guardian asked "if it can be seriously maintained that the newspapers of this country have been worried into candor by the freedom of the foreign press and domestic gossip.

"If they long held their peace it was because they and the English people at large, have for weeks realized the impending gravity of the situation. There has been no censorship, no instructions from anywhere.

"The newspapers did their duty by refraining while reticence could be maintained. This week, beginning with the country newspapers and ending the newspapers of the Capital, they have done what they conceived to be their duty by speaking out."

'FREE CHURCHES' HOPE SOLUTION

Are Not Pressing King Edward to Abandon Friendship

London, Dec. 4—(AP)—England's "free churches" of Methodists and Methodists to which many of the working and middle classes belong—are not pressing King Edward to abandon his friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, it was indicated today.

The attitude of the "free church" was stated by Rev. Dinsdale T. Young, pastor of Westminster Central Hall, a Methodist Church, and Rev. M. E. Aubrey, secretary of the United Union of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

The church officials declared they would refuse to pledge support to Prime Minister Baldwin at least until he announced his plans for the government.

"We cherish the fervent hope that all will be settled for the king's happiness and the good of the country," Young said.

"It is better for us all at present to wait and hope for the best."

JOHNSTOWN

Johnstown— A miscellaneous shower was tendered to Miss Muriel Bush at the home of her parents on Tuesday evening December 1st, about 100 friends and neighbors being present. The following address was read by Alex. Hillier:

Dear Muriel:—

There is an old and familiar saying "that coming events cast their shadows before them." We have heard rumours of wedding bells in your direction for some time and now they are confirmed by the announcement of your approaching marriage. Thus we have to submit to the knowledge that Cupid has made another fair conquest and we are to lose you from our midst.

We want to offer our heartiest congratulations and express our sincere good wishes. Muriel you have been such an active worker in everything that pertained to the community and the church that we shall miss you greatly and sincerely dare to think of making plans and holding meetings with you absent. It would be very easy and natural for us to dwell upon our regret and loss but we dare not let our interests blind us to your happiness. We hope you will be supremely happy. We will endeavor for a few to remember the fine service you have given and the splendid fellowship we have had together. Our lives are fuller and friendship because of your character and friendship.

As a token of our love we ask you now to accept this flower and all the members of Johnstown Club of which you have been such a faithful member.

Your neighbors and friends ask you also to accept this shower of personal gifts. We would make it a shower of blessing if we could be sure your devotion to your home and the community is deserving of such. Webrust that you and your young Lochinvar soon out of the west may find many happy memories clinging to these gifts.

We are pleased to know that you will not be going far away; because of this we look forward to frequent visits and happy fellowship in days ahead.

Rest assured that our good wishes and prayers go with you for a happy and prosperous wedded life.

Signed on behalf of the Johnstown Club: Mrs. Ken Sickle, Mrs. Ralph Lund.

ROEBUCK DECIDES TO ASK FOR PROBE

Management of Company Will be Investigated is Report

Toronto, Dec. 4—(CP)— Attorney-General Roebuck of Ontario said last night he had decided to ask the Secretary of State for Canada to act as the authorized "such as is provided in the Dominion Companies Act" into management of the Canadian General Investments Limited.

The Attorney-General, in a formal statement, said his decision was based on "statements and counter-statements with regard to the management of the Canadian General Investment Trust Limited, of which Mr. Arthur Meighen was chairman".

Reference to the Company was made by Premier Hepburn Wednesday at Madoc, Ont, during the joint debate with Conservative Leader Rowe at the official nomination sheeting for the Ontario by-election in Hastings East.

The Premier declared Col. George Drew, Canada Conservative organizer and former Securities Commissioner, with failing to act on information furnished him in connection with the trust.

Denying he ever gave special consideration while Securities Commissioner, Col. Drew later said:

"A request was made for investigation of a company with which Mr. Meighen was connected. It was pointed out to the applicants that the points raised were in the scope of the Companies' Act and the Ontario Securities Commission had the case for dealing with these points."

"Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

Doctor Ballard sent her a check. He wrote:

"Now, don't scold me, you young whippersnapper. Never let it be said that the Ballards can't hold their own. Not that you are one of my name, and speaking of names, I see Jonathan's dropping my name frequently in your letters. Does this mean that poor little Lyda has been relegated to the limbo of forgotten men?. Don't mind me, Rose, my dear, I suppose I'm homesick. Perhaps I'll get back East one of these days if only for a visit. Not that they aren't kind to the old crock out here; I have to take such good care of myself that sometimes I find the cottonwood getting in my scanty hair."

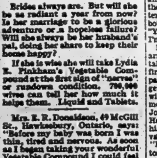
"Tell Jonathan to write me more often. I have occasional—and I must say very good reports of him from my old patients. How did he get along in the school work? His last letter on the subject was more or less of a howl.

Reading, Rose smiled; shook her head over the substantial check, and sat down to figure with pencil and paper. The house needed some repairs. Would she be justified in letting them go until the autumn and squandering the money things for herself? Her mother found time occupied and said definitely, "Nonsense, why shouldn't you have some new clothes! You are very very little on yourself, my dear, and now that you are going out more frequently you certainly owe it to yourself to be well dressed. Nothing gives a girl more confidence."

Rose was amused at her mother's attitude. Mrs. Ward had always listened to the arguments which raged about the house concerning the Sutton clan. She had seemed to agree with the younger people that disapproval of Sutton and all his works. But now that Sally had begun to run in and out of the cottage as an intimate, she took it in her stride and seemed to think it a just tribute to Rose's power of making friends. Rose, in turn, knew Rose, even the most democratic, were singly snobbish when it came to their children.

Frankly she was enjoying herself; there was a chance to dress and parties at his house on the Hill, and occasionally to the theatre, picnics, swimming parties, and trips on one of the yachts of the locals. Sometimes Jonathan was with them, but not always. On such occasions it seemed to Rose that Sally appeared to console herself very well with Phil or a visiting out-of-town man or one of the local crowd.

The one less happy result of this new friendship was that she saw Jonathan less often. When they were together in the evenings or Sundays, the general rule was that



"The Bride Was Charming—"

Brides always are. But will she be so radiant a year from now? Is her marriage to be a glorious adventure or a hopeless failure? Will her husband be a devoted lover, doing her share to keep their home happy?

If she is wise she will take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as we have done for over 60 years or rundown condition. 700,000 women can tell you it helps them. Liquid and Tablets.

Mrs. E. E. Donaldson, 49 McGill St., Hawkesbury, Ontario, writes: "Before my baby was born I was thin, tired and nervous. As soon as I began taking your wonderful Vegetable Compound I could feel myself getting stronger."

"I was weak and rundown after an accident and an operation. My doctor advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it gave me more strength. I have taken both the liquid and the Tablets." Mrs. Tilda Jodoin, Casselly, Quebec.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Sally and her crowd were with them. To be sure, he dropped in now and then on his way home from his calls or late in the evening. But for the most part they were occupied by other young people.

Once he mentioned this to her. They were dancing, at Sally's and he swept her through an open French window and stood with her for a moment on the big verandah high above the river. He said, leaning on the railing and looking across at the bobbing anchor lights, "Seems to me I see very little of you nowadays."

"Jon..." She began counting the tiles they had met during the last week—"not to mention the early invasion of your garden the other morning and the cup of coffee Evelina gave me..."

He smiled remembering. They had drunk the coffee at the kitchen table with Evelina hovering around them; the picture of a restrained and dour Benevolence: he remembered morning sunlight on the white walls; copper utensils, blue china. he remembered Rose's curly hair and her sparkling eyes and the funny blue overall she had worn; he remembered the taste of doughnuts and the scent of strong coffee and the purr of Evelina's pride in little morsels fed under Rose's hand. There was a pot of geraniums on the kitchen window sill. The blue and white clock had ticked like an amplified heartbeat.

"Yes. Agreed. But we aren't often alone."

He drew closer to her, and put his arm about her waist.

Rose—" he began.

Someone came out on the verandah, and Sally's high voice of the French windows, the music of the radio came to them, not loudly as it had before, but loudly, insistently. Sally cried, coming up,

"Here, you two. You can't sit alowed. Phil's doing his milk bottle act and he needs a big audience. Come on, you can look at the moon some other time and the river won't run away."

She put a possessive arm about each and led them back to the living room and the other guests. Jonathan could have throttled her in his knee and spanked her and Rose for her childish assertiveness. What had he been going to say, she wondered and then thought, with surprise, "There's plenty of time! he'll say it—a dozen Sallys can't stop him if he's going to kiss me!" it was done so thoughtlessly she hardly knew what happened or seemed the darkened, the caressing hand. Rose, not that he knew Sally better, very much ashamed of her distrustfulness she had caused him early in their acquaintance and even more ashamed of the fact that he had believed she had been deliberately provocative—with a purpose. She was still provocative, but she no longer exercised the purpose.

What was the song "Birds gotter fly, fish gotter swim"? Something like that. Well, Sally had to sun herself in masculine admiration. That was all there was to it.

He had thought that sooner or later she would marry Dexter. He was sorry about it, but not that he minded Phil, any more. Phil wasn't bad at all. He was simply a product of his parents' love for their money; a lightweight, but no real villain. Sally and Jonathan agreed that was more than could be said of Dexter Sutton. Rose had seemed to him that Sally could have done much better. She needed a lighter hand on the leash than Jonathan who would compel her better qualities.

He was essentially kind, under the arrogance and carelessness. Sally simply had to be shown. She had asked him not to broadcast the things she had done for two or three poverty-stricken miserable families in whom he had been interested. She had passed their wretched homes a thousand times in her short life and never noticed them. They had to be brought to her attention, but once that was accomplished, her hand and purse were open, and generous. "Why didn't I know of this before...? Please Kim, don't scold me... and don't tell them ..." Late people who did others under deliberate obligation. I'd rather they didn't know."

It had been rather a shock to him, carefully administering Sally's shekels back, to find that Rose had been looking after the people for a long time. It was Rose, of course, who had asked him to take them on, as charity cases. She had had one child in school for a short time and then had discovered that her pupil's protracted absence was due not only to illness, but to lack of proper clothing . . . no shoes . . . and the parents' record of undependability was most inadequate of outer coverings.

And so she had discovered, and found not only her pupil but the unemployed parents and the shabby younger children, two with ear infections. Through them she had found the whole family in need as well. She had gone to the relief agency and discovered that a visitor was employed there was nothing that could be done, despite the fact that his contributions to the local grafting machine were intermittent in the extreme, and very small.

Jonathan . . . arranging for hospital treatment for one child, for the mother of the next door family for a tubercular home for—ex-convict patient . . . was thoroughly disgusted that Sally had given him money for them. She had been in bed with a winter and Rose's big fat lard tipped. He had said, furiously and sarcastically, that Sally had she'd wanted to do something she should have long ago. Rose, not a discharged under-gardener of theirs, you know . . . As for the other family—they'd been cast out when the Dexter company began closing down its sawmill and water."

Well, that was a long time ago and since then Sally had assured him that if ever he came across a needy case . . . or a deserving father does a lot, privately—people never hear of it—Sally Trevor, that is. But he's busy, he can't investigate everything. You go around among the people so much, there must be a lot of needy cases which can't be reached by relief and the red tape or something similar."

It didn't dawn on him until much later that most of the relief was obligingly administered by Sutton through Lars Thorsen, and given the jobs of administering it.

Rose enjoyed the week on the island. There were crowds of young people coming and going and there was always something to do. There was a constant, pleasant distraction of the river. She had thought after Larry's accident that she would never look upon it again and out a cold coil of fear at her heart, but it had not proved to be the case. She perhaps regarded it with a little more respect than formerly, but even the ugly memories of that last summer could not change for her the glorious days, the exciting and luxurious boats and trips to the Thousand Islands. There was canoeing and fishing, swimming and tennis. There was dancing at night, and half a dozen times Rose and Jonathan were pleasantly attentive. And there was always the breathless expectancy of long, golden days wearing toward the evening which would bring Jonathan to her door, or later.

Was it happened his office hours were very slow. He was able to see his patients in the late afternoon and to reach the island by seven, in time for a swim before dinner. Only once during the week was he called to town at night and on that occasion Sally insisted on driving him.

"But you can't leave your guests like that. I don't know the way, I'm no good."

"They're all right. You must be tired. I'll chauffeur you back and down again. I don't mind waiting."

Over the holiday weekend he was free to lie in bed and to sleep late mornings, to be beaten at tennis by Phil Dexter, and to lounge around during the long hot afternoons between swims. The woods were vocal with red-winged blackbirds and the late flowers were blooming in fragrant profusion in the gardens. He told Rose guiltily, "There's something about all this—the sun, the luxury, which demoralizes me. This morning, walking up and knowing there was no hurry to get up, or, in fact, to do anything, made me think just for a moment how lucky a man is who has all this . . . so I envied Sutton and all his works."

Rose said firmly,

"You'd hate it. After a while. After all," she said slowly, "you haven't earned it; if you'd earned it, it might be different."

"Then you admit your host has earned it," he said laughing.

She frowned a little, looking out across the water. Then she turned over on her flat stomach on the dock and summed her chin in her hands. "I don't" she answered, after a moment . . . "not really. Oh, he's worked, of course, it's been through his own effort that he's made his money. But the effort itself . . ." She shook her head, "I don't know. I've got Babs in."

There was silence a moment. Phil was out in a motor with Babs and Sally. They could hear her singing across the water, Jonathan turned over on his back and squinted into the water at the mop of yellow curls which glinted in the sunlight. And Sally waved to him.

"Hi there! Bill was coming down," he said presently.

"He was asked", said Rose, "but then you know he's busy. Elections and all . . . not so far off."

"They'll never get Babs in," Jonathan prophesied.

"Not this year. But they'll swing some new votes perhaps. And perhaps they'll get . . . these things take time, Jon. I expect that Bill feels a little out of things. Being the hospitality of a man he's determined to get elected and not succeeding."

"Don't spill hairs," Jonathan advised her. He scrambled to his feet as Phil came in and Sally and Phil in it slid to the side of the dock. He went over and held out a hand to help the boat fast. Sally put her wet brown hand in his. She said, "Phil's been quite a virtuoso . . . I did love hear him . . .? Just a good old upand-down billy."

On the last night the evening of Labor Day, those of the guests who lived out of town had gone and there were only half a dozen of them left. During the evening they had danced to the radio, and then, toward eleven Sally suggested something to entertain. It was a boneless night, bright with stars, windless, very warm. The suggestion was greeted with enthusiasm and they all went off to put on their bathing suits. Later, they returned, and dripping over the kitchen floor, carried in big trays of pale ale and pitchers of milk, highballs for those stemmer souls who demanded them, and food. It was a gay and chaotic meal and sleepy and filled with a sense of well being.

Shortly before one, they all yawned their way up to bed.

Jonathan, catching Sally's hand as she passed him, "Look, I have to be uptown early tomorrow . . . I'm afraid I'll have to . . . I'll just sneak off. Evelina will give me breakfast at seven. I've always been Mrs. Ward's mother and father by an elegant fiction . . . you know I hate sneaking."

She just shook him on the chin. She said, "I'll get up—I want to talk to you."

"You'll never be up at six," he said laughing.

She made a horrible face at him.

"I suppose not. Look here, Kim you're not angry with me? Because I asked you about Hop into a bathrobe and come on down again . . . it's important."

"My child, your weary guests have gone to bed. It's late. Can't it wait?"

"No, it can't. Something happened tonight . . . I have to ask somebody's advice please, Kim."

"All right," he said, after a moment. "I'll be down again. Ju-jitty."

"Better way; something more substantial," she advised, laughing, and went on upstairs.

CHAPTER XXXI

A little later Sally looked in on Rose. Rose, just ready for her bath, was already in bed. Sally opened the door between and the light from her own room streamed in.

"Aren't you going to bed yet?" asked Rose, astonished for certainly Sally, in pale green satin pajamas which were never meant to be slept in her yellow curls caught into a childish knot on opt of her head, her little face delicately powdered, and her lips bright, evenly painted scarlet, looked as if sleep were a thousand miles away.

"I'm not tired," said Sally. "And I've a heavy date." She grinned at Rose cheerfully well she said gently, and began to shut the door. "Pleasant dreams," she added. The door closed.

After a while Rose, now perfectly wide awake, shook her head in astonishment. Phil, of course, she told herself; she's just trying to get rid of him. My dear Miss Ward, what deplorable language you use! She laughed silently into her pillow. She had caught a glimpse of Phil and Sally shortly before the swimming party. They had been walking toward the garden arm in arm, patently absorbed in one another.

But sleep had fled, as had the desire to go to bed. Rose got up, belted a silk robe about her slim waist and went out on the narrow screened porch which opened off her door and from Sally's. After a while, she heard Jonathan and Ray Heatherton—WABC

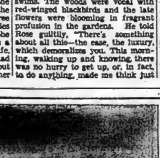
Sally put her arm through his. "Come out on the porch," she said, "we won't wake anyone. And it's a most warm night."

He followed her out, leaned on the railing beside her and pulled his pipe from his pocket. May I?" he said, and lit and drew on her head.

"What's on your mind?" he asked, the pipe going. The smoke drifted up to Rose, through the narrow balcony above, a familiar scent. She told herself, it's not your business, you get right back to bed. But it was her business. She sliced where she was, afraid of being afraid.

"Phil asked me to marry him tonight," replied Sally.

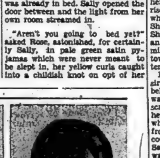
"Oh, that!" Jonathan laughed, relieved. "Well, it isn't the first time, is it? I thought it was all settled."



"Oh, you did, did you!" She turned on him angrily. "Well, it isn't! Of course there's been an understanding . . . for ages. Everyone knows that. It's common property. Our families arranged it. And —until lately I thought perhaps it would be a good anything else once I settled down. But—now, it's different."

"Of course, it's different. Why should you bother him—as a graceful gesture to your families. If you don't love him you'd be crazy . . . " Jonathan agreed.

She said slowly, "I don't love him, Kim, and I'm utterly miserable. You see, he—he takes it for granted. Tonight he suggested that we be married in the spring . . . "



"Well," said Jonathan practically, "Why all the fuss and bother? You aren't compelled to marry him, if you don't want to."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Daniel Boone"

A renowned episode of the American colonial period is unrecled in the historic adventure picture, "Daniel Boone," which comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre Saturday for one day only.

George O'Brien is cast in the title role, this being the first in a series of films of frontier heroes in which George A. Hirliman will present this well-known star of the outdoor melodrama. In "Daniel Boone" the purpose is to bring before the theatregoers in authentic form the conditions which surrounded the settlers of this country when they were pushing forward the pathway of civilization.

This episode in the life of Boone, greatest of frontiersmen, revolves about the period of 1775, when the settlers in the eastern colonies were looking toward the western horizon. They wanted newer and more fertile lands, and had visions of founding a new empire in which they would be the dominant factors. Boone had just recently returned to the frontier town of Yadkin, in North Carolina, where the story opens, and his description of the fertile lands beyond the Cumberland Mountains in the then unknown territory which later became Kentucky aroused the spirit of adventure in the Yadkin settlers. They urged Boone to lead them to this new land, and finally agreed. Thirty families set forth on the long march. Everything that they might require was packed onto or within covered wagons, the former of their cattle and spare horses provided them. The women and younger children had to take their part in the arduous duties. Night and day the men were forced to deploy lines of armed scouts, so that they might beat off Indian attacks, buy in spite of this their herds were raided, their cattle stolen, and some of the men of the expedition were killed.

Then were the dread and little known Cumberland Mountains to be crossed, and after this a vast unclaimed territory in the southern part of Kentucky, before the fertile Blue Grass region in the neighborhood of what is now Lexington, Kentucky was reached.

Through all this long march the settlers depended upon the skill, courage and resourcefulness of Daniel Boone, and he finally guided them through to their destination. There they established the village of Boonesborough, labor of months, and fortified it. After they had done so and had begun to clear their land, there was peopening. They learned that the colony of Virginia had declared them squatters, and that their land was to be sold into the hands of unscrupulous politicians and their friends. In addition they were subjected to a savage assault by Indians, which lasted for nine days, and which threatened their utter extermination.

George O'Brien, as Daniel Boone, has a very much to his liking. His previous experience in virile, outdoor films has made him a worthy figure for this role.

Heather Angel as a patrician Johnny Mercedes is a most convincing white rebegade, Ralph Forbes as a crooked official and Chingachgook as a faithful servitor, are featured in the big and efficient cast of players in support.

This film epic of "Daniel Boone" is based on the original historical novel of the same name from the pen of Edgcumb Pinobon—who also wrote the story, "Five Pals," from which a film was made.

Added Featurettes

Sheila Howard is one of his lighter moments "Serves You Right", also a colored cartoon "I Haven't a Gal," and a travelogue "Fayrounds."

Coming Today

The dramatic hit of the season, a story which ran in Liberty Magazine, and conceived by Franklin Roosevelt, President of United States in "President's Mystery" as hit No. 2. A light romantic comedy with gallons of laughs created by Leon Deming Stooges in "The Man I Marry."

AT THE BELLE

"The Last Of the Mohicans"

The men who made "The Count of Monte Cristo" have done it again.

This time Reliance Pictures, have chosen to bring to the screen, with a magnificent cast, "The Last of the Mohicans," James Fenimore Cooper's immortal classic of the hand-to-hand struggle for a nation yet unborn and have turned out another picture which is top notch entertainment as well as a film of truly epic proportions. The picture comes to the Belle tomorrow and Monday, matinee daily and cannot fail to prove a monumental item on the cinema list of the millions of lovers of the book as well as those unfamiliar with the stirring story of pioneer men and women who faced death and danger and glorious adventure side by side for the country they loved.

Great Cast

As depicted by one of the greatest casts ever assembled for the writer Cooper's colorful characters come to a warm and pulsating life on the screen.

Brilliant performances are turned in by Randolph Scott, as Hawkeye, the primitive man of the forest who Cooper made his hero; Henry Binnie Barnes, who is ideally cast as Alice Munro' the British Colonel's daughter, who loves Hawkeye; Henry Wilcoxon who plays the gallant major Duncan Heyward, Hawkeye's rival for the hand of Alice; Bruce Cabot, who with shaved scalp and scalplock, makes a perfect Magua, the renegade Indian spy; pretty Heather Angel as Cora is one of the big thrills of the picture; and Philip Reed as Uncas, the "Last of the Mohicans."

Unforgettable Moments

Unforgettable moments in this unforgetable picture are the canoe chase, the Uncas guiding Cora to safety through a shower of enemy arrows; the French attack on Fort William Henry, last stronghold of the British and Americans; and the savage war-dance of the Huron tribe. "The Last of the Mohicans" is one of the great epics of the screen. To miss it is to skip a glowing and glorious page in film history....and to cheat yourself of a memorable evening's entertainment.

Monday Same Bill

As tender and charming a Cinderella love-story as you could wish for is announced in the second feature attraction on the same program, namely, "Along Came Love," the romance of a bargain basement sales girl and a handsome young medical student earning his way as a theatre doorman. Irene Hervey and Charles Starrett play the leading roles in "Along Comes Love" is from the pen of Lenore Coffee, author of "Seventh Heaven," and it was directed by Bert Lytell, one of the silent screen's outstanding leading men. The way in which he blends high comedy, pathos and romance in "Along Came Love" augurs well for him in the directorial field. Belle Late World News, will be exhibited on the same program.

On Saturday afternoon, Clyde Beatty world greatest animal trainer will appear in the further adventures of "Darkest Africa."

"Anthony Adverse" Leaving

"Hervey Allen's monumental literary classic, "Anthony Adverse," brought to the screen with all its wealth color, romance and dramatic fire, will be presented at the Belle today for the last time, along tonight for the last time, along with a smart, and tuneful musical revue.

HOPE TO COMBAT DUST STORM HAVOC IN U. S. AND CANADA

To prevent their soil from blowing away in 1937 dust storms, thousands of farmers in the central great plains area of the United States are contour listing their fields with beaded listers, under supervision of government agencies. Small dams made of furrows will help hold moisture that falls and keeps it well distributed. Basin listing has been found to almost completely eliminate blowing of soil. BOTH SCRAPPERS DOWN AND ALMOST OUT OF THE RING

German Walter Neusel and Ben Foord of South Africa, locked in each other's arms, split out of the ring and among the paying customers during their brawl at the Harringay Arena, London. Foord, holder of the British and Empire heavyweight championships, was declared on points—by the German heavyweight ace. Judging from this picture, the old box-of-the-ring idea indulged in frequently by Canadian grunt and groan artists of the mat, seems to have crossed the Atlantic.

ROOSEVELT WILDLY ACCLAIMED IN PEACE CONGRESS CITY

According President Roosevelt the greatest ovations he given a visiting dignitary, a million Argentines thronged the streets of Buenos Aires to greet the U.S. chief executive as he arrived to address the opening of the Inter-American peace conference. DAILY SHORT STORY

BRICK TOP

By LEE CALVERT

The fiances eased slowly up the Hudson. Tom Chambers leaned perilously over the rail, peering at the crowd lining the pier's edge. There was no sign of the blazing glory that was Lis. An unreasoning fear seized him. He could not believe she was not there.

"Hello, Tom," Jim Waters, his partner, called, pushing forward through the crowd and smiling. "you're looking fit."

"Where's Lis?" Chambers demanded, extending a shaking hand, "anything wrong with her?"

"Not a thing." Waters reassured him, gripping his hand tightly. "Too foggy and wet for her to risk coming out."

Lis! The ugly diminutive fitted her so perfectly. Elizabeth Ann Wyatt, worth, the most successful post-deb, the most ostentatiously beautiful bride. Lis, all-luminous in clinging white, her hair shimmering red through the soft diamond veil, her little face lighted by enormous topaz eyes, tremulous mouth tender with happiness.

Chambers had first seen his across her aunt's drawing room, her amazing hair sparkling in the firelight. He was fascinated by its flaming beauty, the loveliest thing he had ever seen. Later he knew that Lis was as precious, as glorious as her hair.

Curiously, before their honeymoon was over, something of the wonder, the magic of their love was lost. The change was intangible, inexplicable, but an unscalable wall had risen between them. Now, on his return after seven months, she had failed to meet him. Chambers was filled with dismay.

An embarrassed preoccupied silence rose between the two friends as Jim drove through the late afternoon traffic. "I've missed Lis like thunder," Tom spoke more to himself than to the other man, "her hair has haunted me, it's so beautiful. I felt in love with her before I even knew her."

His partner eyed him sharply. "Her hair isn't the only beautiful thing about Lis," he reminded him tersely.

"I know," Tom agreed, and then lapsed into silence until they drew up before the door of his apartment.

Chambers watched the car until it was out of sight and then turned wearily toward the house. He wished the meeting with Lis were over.

"Mrs. Chambers is in the living room, sir," the maid welcomed him, beaming. "It's nice to see you, sir."

He nodded absently, dropped his hat and coat and walked softly down the carpeted hall. Then squaring his shoulders, and face set, he opened the door quietly.

Soft radiance welcomed him. And Lis! Standing with her arm on the mantle shelf, a slender figure in clinging white velvet, soft fur encircling her slim wrists and pulsating throat, big eyes seekin his, wide with fear.

"Lis!" it was question as well as a greeting. "Lis!" Tom Chambers repeated, and springing across the room, clasped the swaying figure to him, his lips covering her face with kisses of longing and happiness.

His fingers stroked tenderly the hair that shimmered like cold moonlight on freshly fallen snow. "Lis, darling," he whispered, his lips against the fragrant but no longer blazin hair, "Lis, sweetheart."

"You don't mind, Tom darling?" she asked wonderingly as she pushed back the shining white waves. He held her at arm's length, eyes on her face as if he could never have enough of her.

"Mind?" he repeated. Mind? Why should I? You're the most beautiful thing, Lis, that I ever have seen."

"I was afraid to meet you at the pier," she confessed, creeping into the shelter of his arms and hiding her face. "I was afraid, I" didn't Jim go without me. He didn't say anything?"

Chambers laughed. "Afraid of what, sweetheart?"

"You said on our wedding night that you fell in love with my hair, and I've been so afraid, afraid ever since that you would find out that it was not natural. You see, darling," the words were a mere whisper, "my hair was almost white at sixteen. It thought you would not love me any more if you found out about it. It seems like cheating. I've lived in fear ever since we were married. While you were away I determined to make an honest woman of myself and take a chance that you would still love."

THE KING CANCELS ALL HIS ENGAGEMENTS

Voluntary Abdication Expected in Some Quarters; Delay Counselled

POPE PIUS XI GRAVELY ILL STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS

Ruler Devotes All Time To Solution of Crisis; Crowds Sing, Cheer Him

Buckingham Palace Announcement Cheers Subjects Who Hope He Will Not Abdicate Throne

MONARCH IS PRAISED EVERYWHERE

Hope is Expressed That No Irrevocable Step Will Be Taken And Delay on Decision is Counselled

London, Dec. 5—(AP)—It was officially announced from Buckingham Palace today "all of the King's official engagements have been cancelled for the present."

The words "for the present" were received joyfully by those of his subjects who hope he will not abdicate in order to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The formal announcement was taken in informed circles to mean only that the King wishes to devote all his time to the present constitutional crisis.

The King's official schedule for next week was heavy.

It included an inspection of the Scots Guards at the Tower of London Tuesday morning with a visit to the Smithfield show in the afternoon.

Wednesday and Thursday King Edward was to have toured the potteries of Staffordshire and Birmingham and Saturday he was scheduled to open the new Proples Palace at Mile End.

Abdication Forecast

London, Dec. 5—(CP Cable)—With members of the royal family as his sole witnesses, King Edward VIII will within the next few days, it is expected in usually well-informed quarters, sign a declaration of voluntary abdication.

His only alternative is to renounce his proposal of a marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson. The middle course, a morganatic marriage, has been ruled out.

The King has not yet reached a final decision. But authoritative quarters see little hope of the King changing his intention to marry the Baltimore-born Mrs. Simpson, now in southern France.

Abdication would be followed by the summoning of the accession council, precisely as happened upon the death of King George V last January. The Duke of York would be proclaimed and members of parliament would take the oath of allegiance to the new King.

Results of Abdication

Legal authorities hold that abdication would not automatically dissolve parliament as the death of the King used to do. Legally it would be a "demise." Parliament would continue but a new oath of allegiance would be necessary.

The accession of a new sovereign would necessitate the passing of parallel legislation through all the empire parliaments:

1. To confirm the accession of Edward VIII's succession.

2. To bar the issue of Edward VIII from rights to the throne;

3. To remove from Edward VIII any disability under the Royal Marriages Act of 1772.

The third provision would be necessary, by a strange reversal of roles, to permit Edward to marry anybody except with the consent of the new King. The Royal Marriage Act of 1772 has no application to the sovereign himself. It provides, however, that the marriage of any other members of the royal family is null and void unless the consent of the sovereign, declared under the great seal, is first obtained.

Special Legislation Suggested

Thus so long as he is King, Edward VIII is legally free to marry anybody. But if he abdicates he ceases to be King. As a member of the royal family, he can then only marry with the consent of the new sovereign. The suggested legislation would confer upon him full freedom to marry without it being necessary to obtain consent of the new sovereign.

Not since Richard II abdicated in 1399 has there been an abdication in British history. James II fled the country, By legal fiction his flight was interpreted as a voluntary abdication. But James always regarded himself as a King in exile. He never renounced his rights to the throne. Henry VI was deposed in 1461.

The cabinet held a 40-minute session this morning to consider the latest developments in the unprecedented situation.

NO IMMEDIATE INTENTION TO WED IS PRESS VIEW

King Has Been Urged by Friends Not to Make Irrevocable Decision

NO HURRY SEEN

Daily Express Says Britain Cannot Afford to 'Lose The King'

London, Dec. 6 (CP)—Prime Minister Baldwin soon will be able to tell his colleagues that King Edward has no immediate intention of marrying Mrs. Ernest Simpson, The Daily Herald declared today as an anxious press urged a rapid solution of the deadlock.

Generally all newspapers expressed sympathy for His Majesty in his hour of crisis.

The king has been strongly urged by a small group of friends in his behalf to take great confidence — not to make an irrevocable decision but let the matter of marriage simply drop for the time being, The Daily Herald added.

These friends pointed out that in any event Mrs. Simpson cannot marry for nearly five months (the time needed for her divorce decree to become fully effective), the newspaper said.

"Throne" Sacks Baldwin.

"The prime minister's statement means an end to the ill-considered suggestions which have been advanced in some quarters," said The Times, referring to Mr. Baldwin's Commons statement, "that the government might urge the king in order to meet the circumstances of a particular case.

"This is not a matter in which this or that view can be identified with 'right or wrong' peer or plebian, clergy or laymen," the newspaper continued. It cited the cheers which greeted Mr. Baldwin's declaration as evidence that special legislation "will not possibly be needed even if it were introduced or, at least, that it could not be passed without opposition.

"The attitude taken up by the government is supported by all Commonwealth governments and by people of every class and of every profession. There is a widespread desire not only that this profoundly disturbing difficulty should be rapidly settled but that once settled it should have neither permanent nor temporary effection."

"Cannot Afford to Lose King"

The Daily Express asserted:

"We cannot afford to lose the king. We must let him give up the throne."

The News Chronicle:

"There unquestionably is a strong and growing desire among the people that the king should not marry the woman of his choice as soon as she has obtained a decree nisi and that he should not become queen of England.

"If such a solution could be arrived at, the public would heave a sigh of relief. There is no such thing in England at present as a morganatic marriage. But the laws could be changed."

Charges Effort To Hurry King From the Throne

London, Dec. 5.—(AP)—Lord Rothermere, powerful British newspaper publisher, in an interview printed in the London Evening News today said a "conspiracy of effort" is being made to hurry King Edward off the throne this week-end.

"Too cannot smuggle the greatest King Englishmen ever had off the throne of England during the week-end," Lord Rothermere said in the article printed in black type two columns wide.

"There must be given for a solution of this matter. The present haste is incredible and it gives rise to unpleasant rumors affecting high political and other personages.

"No government which, on the matter of supreme importance, runs counter to the wishes of the people of England can survive.

"I have just returned from a trip around the world and wherever I have been, and in whatever I spoke, people of all nationalities were unanimous in manifest affection and admiration for our King."

H. R. H. THE DUKE OF YORK

In event of abdication of His Majesty King Edward, his brother the Duke of York would ascend the throne according to British custom.

'WWS' Initials on Baggage Which Reaches Cannes, France

CAR LOST IN FOG

Cannes, France, Dec. 5 (AP)—Mrs. Simpson's baggage—five valises and eight large trunks initialed "WWS" —arrived here today and were sent to the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rogers, socially prominent New Yorkers.

There has been speculation Mrs. Simpson would seek refuge from the turmoil over her proposed marriage with King Edward at the Rogers' 16-room villa, "Lou Viou", on a hill outside the city.

The residence was surrounded by plain clothesmen and Mrs. Rogers, who has several times been a guest of the king, was living elsewhere in the city. She refused to say whether or the hill-top home was being prepared for Mrs. Simpson.

Rogers met the train on which the baggage arrived in Cannes. He was accompanied by a detective from Scotland Yard.

"I don't know anything about Mrs. Simpson," Rogers said.

Travels in Dark Car.

Blois, France, Dec. 5 (CP)—Mrs. Ernest Simpson, whose proposed marriage with King Edward has caused a constitutional crisis in Great Britain, sped southward across France today.

She traveled in a large, dark automobile with three companions—his chauffeur, a bodyguard and a secretary—who carefully shielded her from the curious.

She left Blois unobserved before dawn today after a four-hour stop at the Hotel de France, old fashioned country inn.

Before retiring at 11 o'clock last night, Mrs. Simpson had asked that she be called at 7 a.m. But about 3 a.m. her body-guard appeared in the lobby, talking elaborate gestures to veil her departure.

Word spreading through the night dissolved when word spread Mrs. Simpson was asleep and would not be down until 7 o'clock.

Disappearance From Blois.

Fifteen minutes later she and her three escorts descended quickly, paid their bill and hurried away. Only a few of the hotel staff saw them go.

Her automobile was quickly lost in the fog veiling the road, gone so swiftly none knew its direction.

Joseph Redoux, the hotel manager, said he did not know who his guests were when they arrived last night and asked for four rooms.

RIGHT TO DECLARE WAR IS GIVEN TO SOVIET GOV'T

Under Original Draft Could Declare War in Case of Attack Only

UNANIMOUS VOTE

Action Believed to Bolster Alliances With France And Other Nations

Moscow, Dec. 5—(AP) — The Congress of Soviets today approved the new Russian constitution after amending it to create a commissariat of military industry and empowering the government to declare war "in case of necessity."

The clause empowering the government to declare war was believed inserted to bolster the Soviet Union's defensive alliances with France and other nations.

Under the original draft war could have been declared only in case of "an armed attack against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics."

The constitution as amended grants the government power to wage war "in case of necessity to fulfill international obligations arising out of mutual assistance pacts."

The Congress accepted the constitution by a unanimous show of their red identity cards after Joseph Stalin, secretary-general of Communist party, spoke for 10 minutes in a voice that betrayed no changes which had been made by the editorial commission.

Forty-three amendments, most of them of slight importance, were made to the draft document.

Among the more important revisions was one establishing two houses of parliament of equal numbers to be elected by the direct vote of the people.

Another guaranteed ownership of private property acquired by inheritance and made grants of land to peasants for their use forever free of charge.

The query came again:

"Do we want Baldwin (the prime minister)?"

"Boo-oo!" came the reply.

The demonstrations were noisy but orderly. The crowds obeyed commands from squads of helmeted police, lined from one district to another to break up jams.

Before Buckingham Palace, in Trafalgar Square, through Hyde Park, Haymarket to Piccadilly Circus, near Downing Street, down Whitehall, anywhere the ruler's supporters gathered the cry was always the same.

"Edward is right! Baldwin is wrong!"

WORKERS REMOVE ICICLES FROM EAVES

While pedestrians with wary glances above dodged the miniature avalanches of snow and ice which cascaded from roof tops of Front Street buildings yesterday afternoon, property owners commenced the first of the season's annual task or shovelling off the frosted snow and spear-point icicles which hung precariously from the eaves. Workmen engaged on the job protected themselves from sudden descent, with pieces of tin, theirs experience from chimneys and cornices. Several narrow escapes from injury by the falling ice were recorded on the part of pedestrians.

LITTLE WORK AS YET FOR SNOW SHOVELLERS

Though streets in the city have been liberally coated with the heavy fall, as yet no extra force of workers has been required to keep the roads open, according to reports of the city engineer's office. Surplus snow on roads has been removed by the city snowplow now engaged on its first work of the season, mainly no pedyling streets where drifting had occurred. Unemployed of the city who anticipated work upon snow shovelling for extra pocket money at this season as yet report little work in their line.

SAND AVAILABLE

Clean sand for slippery spots on sidewalks in front of householders' homes is again available upon request to the department of public works office. Orders may be furnished upon telephoned or personal application if a necessary form of order is placed conveniently at the required address.

SNOW BRINGS DECREASE IN ILLNESS

Providing the general health of school children of the city continues to remain as good as it has been for the past week or more, very few of them will spend Christmas holidays in bed, victims of illness or communicable disease. It is indicated by reports of nurses of the local Victorian Order.

Snow, the great sanitary agent which annually does pretty well in dampening and holding to the ground the usual number of germs floating through the air, is held responsible for the noticeable decrease in contagious diseases usually experienced at this season.

General health of children and adults of the city is pronounced good by the Department of Health.

HOLIDAY TAKEN FROM CAMPAIGN

Tweed Conservatives Enjoy Social Evening And Dance

Tweed, Dec. 3 (Special)—Friday night the Conservative organization took a holiday from the strenuous speaking campaign that has been in progress for the last three weeks. Orchestras were engaged for dances held in Tweed, Madoc and Deseronto. The young people, and not only young people but many old ones, enthusiastically into the evening's fun. A Tweed addition with between 400 and 500 attended the dance with music being provided by a local orchestra. The feature of the evening's entertainment was the exhibition of tap dancing by the Bertram trio of Belleville. At midnight Hon. Earl Rowe and Mrs. E. Thomson ex-M.P. arrived and the leader was accorded a hearty enthusiastic reception. He addressed the gathering briefly. After his departure lunch was served by a committee of the ladies. At two o'clock Col. George A. Drew, K.C., the candidate Dr. H. E. Welsh arrived and received a great ovation from the gathering. Both addressed the meeting briefly.

POLICE BLOTTER

Reported disturbances in a local pool room last evening resulted in the detention at the police station of Claude Quinn, local resident, last evening. The local constabulary answered a hurried call to the billiard parlor, where an alleged fistic encounter was in progress. Subsequent investigations resulted in Quinn being taken to the police station and held for examination. Charges will be laid against Quinn in Monday's police court. Chief Kidd stated this morning. The law was permitted his liberty until that time, however.

Oshawa police reported the theft of a Chevrolet coach from that city last night. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates No. Y-6877 and was blue in color, the information stated.

RULER DEVOTES

(By George Mahoberac)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 5.—(CP Cable)

The Cabinet held a 40-minute session this morning to consider the latest developments in the unprecedented situation arising out of the constitutional crisis. The King and the Government, Meanwhile belief grew in strength that the abdication of King Edward VIII is only a matter of days.

No indication was forthcoming as to what decisions, if any, the ministers had reached during their morning conference. The Cabinet will meet again Monday.

Ministers dispersed to their country homes to spend the week-end. They were keeping in touch with London.

No Sign of Yielding

Nothing yet has developed to indicate any yielding by King and his constitutional crisis. The King is understood to be as firmly determined as ever to marry Mrs. Ernest Simpson.

Prime Minister Baldwin and his Government continue to pass any legislation which would make it possible for the King to go through with the marriage without affecting the existing succession to the throne. The Prime Minister told the House of Commons yesterday that the Dominions supported the British Government in this stand.

Crowds gathered in Downing Street this morning as the Ministers with auxiliary Cabinet members for the momentous cabinet meeting at 10 a.m.

Any General of Duchy Confers With Government

It was considered significant that W. T. Monckton, K.C., Attorney General of Duchy of Lancaster, who had been at Fort Belvedere with the King, was in consultation with members of the government at No. 10 Downing Street this morning.

That the King's abdication might be only a matter of days only continued as a possibility in the situation. The King is expected in London from York, next in line of succession to the throne.

Abdication would under the statute of Westminster involve legislation in the parliaments of the British commonwealth. Abdication in itself is a voluntary act on the part of the King. Such legislation would have to follow such an act.

Question of Succession.

Under the Act of Settlement the succession passes automatically to the eldest surviving son. If the King married Mrs. Simpson, their child would be next in succession. Abdication does not affect the succession. Legislation, however, would be needed to establish the issue of the new King to the succession to the throne. Otherwise, under the Act of Settlement, they would not succeed to the crown of near from a marriage between King Edward and Mrs. Simpson.

It would be the first legislation of its kind in British history. For there is no precedent for abdication since the flight of James II in 1688 which was interpreted as an abdication under parliamentary government.

Necessity of Legislation.

The preamble of the Statute of Westminster says that "any law hereafter made in accord with the established constitutional position of all members of the commonwealth in relation one to another that any alteration in the law touching the succession to the throne or the royal style and titles shall hereafter require the assent as well of the parliaments of all the dominions as of the parliament of United Kingdom."

It necessarily follows that legislation in the British parliament would be accompanied by legislation in each Dominion parliament to establish the issue of the new King in line of succession. There again rises a difficulty in connection with the Irish Free State. If President Ramon de Valera's decision that the title to the succession to the throne is no concern of the Irish Free State (a not unlikely) this curious situation might result: that the children of King Edward and Mrs. Simpson, if any, would theoretically inherit in the Irish Free State but nowhere else in the British Commonwealth.

Simon And Baldwin Meet

Sir John Simon, Home Secretary conferred with Mr. Baldwin for an hour before the cabinet session began. There was an unconfirmed rumor that their conversation might have dealt with a compromise which Sir John was understood yesterday to have been debating with Mr. Baldwin.

Crowds in London voiced support of King Edward.

"God save the King! God save the new Queen!" shouted fretting crowds outside Buckingham Palace. "King Baldwin! Down with the Bishops!"

Throughout the night the paraders meandered through the avenues and alley, cheering for the King.

The ruler remaining in seclusion in the countryside quiet of Fort Belvedere.

Mrs. Simpson, assured he (the King) would have no hasty steps, left Biots early today for an undisclosed destination in southern France.

Dispatch Riders Leave Palace

There was no sign during the morning of the King either at Buckingham Palace, at Marlborough House or at St. James' Palace. His car left Fort Belvedere at 10 a.m. but only doubtful whether he was in it. It never is possible to tell for sure whether he is in the car, for the rear windows are painted black.

SPEECH PROTESTED BY CONSERVATIVE

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—Protesting against the tenor of recent speeches by Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, and Col. George Drew, Mr. Howard Gospel, Lennox and Addington has resigned as president of the East Ottawa Conservative Association and replaced with a Conservative party.

A meeting of the Association's executive has been called for next Wednesday by Leon Chequette, secretary of the Association and Conservative candidate at the last Federal election.

Mr. Chequette announced he also would tender his resignation at or after the meeting. He said he would withdraw from the Ontario party but remain in the Federal party.

Mr. LaFleur said he had hoped Mr. Rowe would stand above prejudices of race and religion but recently the Ontario leader had been more and more drawing the lights of the Catholic and French minority in Ontario into politics.

"Nothing can be said without provocation had insulted the French-Canadian people, described them as a "vanquished race" and declared a "brutal majority must control."

Canada Centres Patrimony

Canada is the greatest patrimony of the two races, said Mr. LaFleur, and God has a way of using his time if he sought to crush the rights of French-Canadians under his military heel.

"A few months ago I attended conventions held in Toronto for the appointment of a new leader for the provincial party. Several of my compatriots were also present. And, together, we endeavored to prevent the party from taking a stand which would inevitably raise the racial question cry. For a time we believed that Mr. Rowe, the Conservative leader, would obey above the race and religion prejudices.

"I have followed closely the Conservative leader's speeches since his nomination. I have noticed with regret that he falls more and more deeply into the error which drags into politics the rights of the English and French minority of the province.

"A few days ago, Col. George Drew speaking at Kingston, Ontario Party, revealed his narrow mindedness and provincialism by declaring whatsoever he has utterly insulted the French-Canadian people. It is the overwhelming duty on our part to accept this insult without defending ourselves. The party is out and leaders of the Conservative Party have taken the party longer policy which looks to me as dictated by Orangeism. On the other hand Mr. Howard Gospel, of the Toronto Convention, these people are the true friends of Bilingual schools in Ontario.

"Like the American nations of the Middle Ages, Col. Drew tells us that brutal majority must dominate, and that the vanquished race". He places the knife on our throats. Mr. Howard Gospel explains, submit yourselves to the majority or die.

Consider Rights is Claim

"Col. Drew loses his time, when he declares that we have no right to liary heel the sacred rights of the French-Canadians. French-Canadians were one of the contractees at the time of the Confederation and formed the common patrimony of the two races. The principle of equality of the both was established by the Fathers of Confederation will outlive these agitators.

Col. Drew should recall the words of Sir Charles Tupper, who have never considered the idea of equality one to be a crime. I dare say that if Canada would lose its two millions and a half French-Canadian inhabitants, it would mean the loss of the best part of its moral resources.

"He could also read this statement by Sir Wilfrid Laurier: "Whatever Canadian does not wish to domicile, neither does he wish to be assimilated. All he asks for is liberty of sun and liberty, justice for one and all."

HEALTH OF KING IS EXCELLENT

His Majesty Has Great Reserve of Physical And Mental Energy

London, Dec. 5 (CP)—Lord Dawson, King George's royal physician, today said King Edward "has an excellent health". Lord Dawson, an old personal friend, made a statement to many Mr. Wallis Simpson. The recent days the king has been busy keep out of the 24.

For years he has been his custom to take setting-up exercises on getting out of bed each morning then to jump on the scales. If the scales showed an ounce over 143 pounds he called for the squash racket and a tremendous workout.

There was every indication, that the monarch and his Belvedere Residence was astir early today, although the king did not take his usual morning walk. At 10 a.m. the royal motor sped to London, returning after 3 p.m. It was believed to have conveyed a member of the king's entourage.

POULTRY DISPLAY ON LOCAL MART QUITE IMPOSING

Turkeys, Ducks, Geese And Chicken Quite Plentiful

EGGS DECLINE

What apparently was a harbinger of the Christmas markets, which will likely feature between now and the holiday, the City Market this morning was productive of one of the finest displays of turkeys, chickens, ducks and dairy produce that has been seen for a long time. Sunny, crisp weather brought Saturday morning shoppers in crowds and the local market was the scene of a milling crowd at an early hour. The best trading season in months brought out some keen competition on the part of vendors and the result was that prices ruled stated as sellers vied for trade.

Chickens were plentiful and maintained a high quality. Spring chickens ranged in prices from 70c to 75c each. Fowl and roasters were in quality and sold from 50c up.

Ducks were also plentiful with prices ranging from 60c to $1.25 each. Turkeys were not offered at points lower than 30c per pound, the "bird" at from $2.50 to $3.50. White rabbits made their first appearance of the season, selling from 50c each offered at 35c each. Ducks "on the hoof" were offered at 50c each.

Dairy butter was plentiful with prices remaining fairly steady at 35c per pound. Eggs sold at a few vendors quoted at 60c with one lady offering a dozen at 50c.

Egg Prices Decline

Eggs took a sharp decline from the prices of a week ago. Select 'A' were quoted at prices ranging from 45c to 50c per dozen. Select 'B' were quoted at from 35c to 38c with No. 1 stock ranging from 30c to 32c the dozen.

Fish-lovers found plenty to entice them and a whitefish was offered at 20c the pound and fresh haddock at 15c per lb. Fresh salmon steaks were quoted at 15c per pound and mackerels were sold at a similar price.

Winter apples and staple vegetables were plentiful in the market the outside fruit and vegetable stalls. Potatoes were offered at the prices moving from $1.25 to $1.40 for ninety pound bag lots.

Cabbages were plentiful and onions were plentiful in bushel lots. Carrots were quoted at 3c per bunch at 75c, parsnips at 65c with winter cabbage selling fairly well at three for 10c. Beets were offered selling at 10c with Chinese cabbage going at 5c per head. Cauliflowers were offered at 15c the quart with one vendor quoting at 3 quarts for 40c. Celery was offered at 5c per bunch.

Mackintosh Red apples highlighted the fruit mart, being offered at from $1.75 to $2.00 the basket. Spy apples were quoted at $2 for the select variety, with Delicious and Wealthy offered at the same price. Tolman Sweets were offered at $1.50 the hamper and 60c the peck.

THRONE SYMBOL OF EMPIRE UNITY

Canada For First Time is Faced With Constitutional Issue

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—For the first time in Canadian history the Canadian people are faced with the issue of a constitutional issue affecting the crown as a result of the reported wishes of King Edward to marry and the United Kingdom cabinet's refusal to give consent, Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared in the House of Commons today.

For years ago the passage of the Statute of Westminster placed Canada and the other self-governing dominions on a basis of constitutional equality with the United Kingdom and they became united in a commonwealth unifying force in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Prime Minister Mackenzie Kingindicates that any change in the succession to the throne, in the present style and titles should require the consent of the parliaments of the dominions.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King pointed out that Canada governed by London just the Canadian government governed by Ottawa. Canada's consent situation but had nothing to add to the statement made in the House of Commons last week by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin.

It is understood the government had not taken the initiative in the matter of consulting the dominions and felt the same was true of the other dominions. The initiative had come from the King himself and from fellow ministers, with due regard to the collective concern and responsibility of governments of the dominions.

Mr. King met the other ministers in a regular cabinet meeting yesterday and also conferred with Sir Francis Floud, British High Commissioner in Canada, but it could not be learned whether the question of the King's future was discussed.

The St. Lawrence waterway was the subject of a meeting between Mr. King and a delegation from Washington and New York but the nature of the discussion was not revealed.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—The Toronto mining section opened strong but turned a bit heavy before the close and ended the day's trade dull.

Little Long Lac gave a demonstration of strength by advancing 35 cents to 7.35 and the market was a fair second. Lamaque, Macdonald, Cockshutt, Perron, Dartwater, Central Patricia, Hasaga, Consolidated Chibougamau and Moneta.

Chemalloy dropped to a new low at 1.10 and recovered only part of the loss, while Sherritt, Gordon was about ½, Sherritt a few cents and Pend Orville at 2.13 was down about 10 cents. Consolidated Mosher was also heavy and the close around 2.30 showed a loss of 10 cents.

In the oils Royalite reached a new high at 40½ but dropped the gains.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Buying power was lacking in the industrial share market of the Toronto exchange and the list closed the day and the week with a majority of losses over gains.

British American touched 22½ and closed around 22¼ for a bit gain of ¼ while Imperial and International Petroleum added minor fractions. Nickel dropped an early advance and closed with a loss of about ¼ points.

Refining issues was higher while other distillery stocks were unchanged to slightly lower. Close sales: Bell Telephone 156, Brewers common and Brewers and Distillers.

Foods were irregular with Fanny Farmer off ¼ and Canners B. up a like amount. Steels were lowered for the Abitibi issues.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 5—(AP)— Stocks grasped at a few bargains in the day's market and an assortment of specialties managed to work ahead for gains of a point or two in the forenoon.

Many of the leaders, including the steels, motors, rails and utilities, churned indefinitely and light selling cut down the volume to a trickle there. Transfers were around 900,000 shares.

Among Canadian stocks, small declines occurred in McIntyre, Hollinger, Mines and International Nickel. Distillers-Corp.-Seagrams gained a fraction. Commercial investment bonds were inactive. Canadian dollars ruled unchanged at par.

Conspicuous gainers included Newport Industries, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Air Reduction, American Locomotive, Baldwin, Houston Oil, Mathieson Alkali, Penn R., Penn Coal, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, United Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol and International Hydro-Electric.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

We present herewith brief notes and 'opinions on Canadian stocks by Financial Statistical. These opinions should not be taken as representative of the view held by Financial Service but rather as considerations interesting for the reason that they show what Canadians think of our securities.

Aluminum Ltd.—

The common stock should be held only as a radical speculation; the preferred is fairly safe investment regardless of possibility of payments soon against dividend arrears.

Bell Telephone—

The capital stock qualifies for investment holding. Canadian issues are justified in adding to holdings.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol—

Liquidation of the issue is advised in view of the uncertain outlook.

Consolidated Mining & Smelting—

Despite the bullish factors, however, the stock has so far demonstrated expected gains in earnings that liquidation is advised.

Distillers-Seagrams—

Long-term purchasing has been effected to liquidate bank loans, but the outlook for common dividends is still uncertain. Speculative retention of the shares is advised.

Dome Mines—

Earnings have increased in recent months as a higher grade of ore has been mined, and stock is now expected to equal that of 1935. Indications are that dividends start production next year. The attractive yield justifies long-term holdings, chiefly for income.

Fort of Canada—

Improved operating operations of Class "A" is justified.

Hollinger Gold—

Improvement in the average grade of ore mined has somewhat increased earnings. Dividends for the year are expected to hold $1.05 a share. Retention is warranted by the long term.

Hudson Bay Mining—

Higher prices for copper will more than compensate for the drop in production shown in the first half. Earnings will be up a share for the year. The company's low cost and ample reserves make the issue worth holding as a speculation.

International Nickel—

Net of $3.25 a share is expected for 1936 and higher profits in 1937 are possible. The preferred may be held, since the recommended stock is yet not to called. The common is attractive for speculative purposes only. Canadian owners are justified in maintaining holdings.

Lake Shore—

Holdings may be retained on a yield basis.

McIntyre-Porcupine—

Cash dividends are large and earnings are at least double the dividend rate; the shares fully merit retention.

Noranda Mines—

While this year's $3 in dividends will probably be exceeded in 1937, the stock is considered attractive for continued holding by Canadian investors, particularly private purchases by Canadian clients.

Pioneer Gold Mines—

Earnings have been reduced because of lower average grade of ore handled. Reserves of ore are adequate for present rate, and the rate of production may eventually be increased. Though the dividend rate and may be moderately reduced in 1937, the stock is attractive for income.

Teck-Hughes—

Retention of the stock is advised for holders in prospects for Canada which are carried at low values. Earnings for the year to August 31, 1936, rose to $6.97 a common share, from $4.14 in 1935. Current $2.50 annual dividend rate is safe, and the long term outlook favors further extension of common shares is advocated.

Wright-Hargreaves—

Little change has been shown in the position of this leading gold producer. Earnings are large, and sound financial position are incentives for maintaining present dividend rate.

Next Issue.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday excepted) by The Ontario Intelligencer Building Front Street, Belleville.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Christmas shopping has begun in full earnest in many parts of the Province. In Belleville merchants already report that heavy buying has begun.

The early buyer gets the best choice, great as the display of presents are and he has the always important ally, time to help him make his choice.

The early buyer makes it easier for the later buyer because he relieves that much pressure on the sales staff in the hectice last days of th season.

The early buyers can carry the Christmas spirit right through the month of December and still have a great deal of it left after Christmas because he and she have avoided the inevitable anxiety of last day purchasing.

From the general improvement in conditions which are reported from all industries and all parts of the land, and from the healthy attitude of conditions in this city and the surrounding district, it is clear that there is every ground for believing that for most people this will be a happier Christmas because times are better than they were some years ago.

People are urged to join the early buyers and make purchasing gifts an enjoyable experience.

THE SPARTAN WAY

Port Arthur News Chronicle compares the modern Italian as represented by Mussolini with the Spartans of the days of old who surrendered everything for physical supremacy and military service. The Italian cradle-roll of soldiers-to-be recalls the old story of the parents of Sparta who left their weakling babies on the mountain top to die, for they had use for only the healthy and the strong. Boys were taken from their mothers at the age of seven years and placed in a communal barracks and began their physical training.

Sparta or Lacedemon had but one aim, efficiency. Old Spartans were they alive today could have something to delight them as they look over the Italian infant battalions. The state was all in all. Sons were sent to war by the Spartan mothers to come home with the shield or on it.

But will Italians endure this national spirit to the bitter end? They are a likable folk. They are the descendants of the mighty ancient Romans with an infiltering of other races, some Greek blood being in the south, but ancient Rome never had so nationalistic a law of life as the Spartans. Ancient Sparta left the world, what?—A story of brave Spartans, three hundred in number who with Leonidas held the Persian hordes at bay and died to save Greece, and a record of relentless efficiency. They left little influence on the days of the world, none on art, while their foe—Athens, though in the end they fell has enriched all civilization by the breadth of her interests in all the arts, in politics, and in philosophy. Ancient Rome, warrior nation as she was, did not confine herself to warlike preparations. She took time to cultivate the arts, and her achievement while falling short of that Greek inspiration and originality yet represents a hardy race, and a race which gave the world the law.

Italy will not be content to deprive herself of everything but efficiency. Mussolini is credited with being very brilliant and he is surely farsighted enough to see the fate in store for a pure warrior race.

DIESEL ANNIVERSARY

Several hundred engineers have celebrated the fortieth anniversary of the Diesel engine's introduction and gloried in the fact that it now drives the fastest trains in the world at the lowest cost, generates electricity in many a central station, takes the place of horses on the farm and crowds out steam on the high seas. What strikes the historian of technology is the manner in which Rudolf Diesel conceived and developed his engine.

Most of the great inventions of the past have come from tinkerers and whit. lers of genius. Watt was an instrument-maker, Morse painted pictures, Bell taught deaf-mutes, Edison was a telegrapher, the Wright brothers were bicycle makers, Galling was a physician. But Diesel was of a different species—an academically trained engineer whose tools were mathematical equations and graphs, a scientist who carefully calculated the efficiency of his inventions before it assumed tangible shape. Hence his elation when his first engine blew up and almost killed him. "I knew then just what I wanted to know," he once said, "it proved that air could be compressed and heated so highly that when oil was injected there would be an explosion without any spark." The rest is a long story of designing cylinders that would withstand terrific pressures and expansions.

Already invention has become a branch of applied science and engineering, which means that the technical theorist of the Diesel type is supplying us with the mechanisms that make this culture what it is. If we ever have engines driven by atomic energy or heat from the sun they will be designed by Diesels. If ever we have lighting systems as efficient as those of nature's glow-worms and fireflies they will be created by Diesels. The day of the empiricist, of the attic inventor, will never be over; but the great technical problems of today and tomorrow are more likely to be solved by Diesels than by whitlers. The man whose triumph the engineers have celebrated proved that nothing is so practical as a sound theory.—New York Times.

A TRAGEDY OF SHAKESPEARE

Contemplative, these garden shades entrance you
Therein discerning curious Butterflies,
Green, Tyrian, black, blood-red, saffron or wax-pale,
Or white as Indian ivories.

You mark them in the glooms, drifting, now frantic fluttering;
Still uneclipsed, lights them one peering gleam,
Each to its doom, thorn-shattered, drunken on poisoned flowers,
One in a rush-net caught to the marshy stream.

Frail Odysseys constrain your gaze, still Thinker,
Downward: how read you yonder those that magical
Out of the slime, as of a music drawn, take wings,
Aloft an innocent, share a fate thus tragical—

Most venomed of intent, sometime that were,
Perished in destinies of geosamer?

CHRISTMAS IS COMING AND A WHOLE LOT OF YOUNGSTERS ARE WONDERING what Santa Claus will bring this year. Some youngsters get so much that it takes almost a miracle to give them a thrill, a miracle that costs much money. Some children get so little that it does not take much to give them a big thrill. Then there are the folks who get a real wonderful blessing out of giving at Christmas time. Few, if any, kids of their own but manage to get in the Christmas spirit and absorb that wonderful feeling that comes only at Christmas time. Folks of good will who want to do their bit for the kiddies whose Christmas otherwise might be a forlorn one can join up with the service clubs and get all the thrill their service crave—Rotary Club, Kiwanis, Kinsmen, Y's Men are making plans now to give many children a happy Christmas, one long to be remembered. Join up, if only for the duration of the Christmas season and get the biggest thrill of your life.

GIANT BRIDGE BETWEEN SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND HAS BEEN OPENED, and illustrates the big scale in which all thinks Yankee are done, especially on government money. More than three years were required to build this bridge at a cost of $77,000,000, 24 lives lost and 1,167 men injured. The bridge was opened in the presence of great crowds of spectators including 250,000 out of town visitors. The span extends a distance of 8 1-2 miles over water and tide land and has three miles of approaches. Its height above the water varies from 192 feet on the Oakland side to 216 feet on the San Francisco side, enough clearance for the largest vessels. Passenger automobiles will travel a six-lane highway across the upper deck. On a lower deck are lanes for trucks and space for inter urban railway tracks expected to be completed in 1938. The speed limit on the bridge is 45 miles an hour. This toll bridge was built by the State using loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation (R.F.C.) It is expected that in twenty years traffic will pay off the bonds and make the crossing free. The bridge is of suspension cantilever and truss construction. It has fifty-one piers, contains 52,000 tons of steel and a huge quantity of concrete.

EAST HASTINGS CAMPAIGN ENTERS THE FINAL DRIVE

Voting in The By-election Will Take Place on Wednesday

TAKE DAY OFF

Meetings Held by Both Parties in All Parts of The Riding

With another night of campaigning already accomplished in the Ontario by-election in Hastings East at least had the prospect of a Sunday halt to activities prior to entering the week-end drive for Hastings East votes Wednesday.

Conservatives didn't wait till Sunday for a rest, 39 Tory orators campaigned at scattered points in the 140-mile-long riding last night, supporters of Conservative leader Rowe declared a moratorium on official electioneering efforts and attended dances at Tweed, Deseronto and Madoc.

The government campaign increased in intensity as end of the bitter campaign neared. Premier Hepburn spoke last night, joined by two cabinet ministers and prominent Liberals.

At Plainfield, Mr. Hepburn in his address accused Col. George A. Drew, Conservative organizer, of trying to sidestep responsibility for a reporting statement about the French race. Three affidavits were produced, that Col. Drew had referred to the French people as "a defeated race."

Plants Increase Output

Nationality of the Conservative leader was injected into the campaign by Provincial Secretary Nixon at Point Anne. He demanded Mr. Rowe say whether he has renounced United States citizenship and sworn allegiance to the British Crown.

W. L. Houck, Liberal legislature member for Niagara Falls, speaking on the same program with Mr. Nixon, asserted cancellation of Hydro power barons, who were he publicly-owned power plants in Niagara Falls increased output from 10 per cent of capacity to full development.

"One own plants purchased and paid for by the people of Ontario, were literally standing idle until this government came into power and wiped out the contracts with those power barons, who were becoming rich on your money," Mr. Houck said.

Premier Discusses Claim

Premier Hepburn told Plainfield electors Col. Drew was too prone to make statements and deny afterwards that he had said them. He asked if anyone in the audience had heard the statement.

Eleven persons stood up in various parts of the hall. A man pushed forward, saying he had three certified statements. The Premier took them and read the names of Dr. Jane Gordon, editor of Lethi, J. E. Bradden and Harry L. Bradden of Thurlow Township.

The Premier criticized Mr. Rowe for what he termed was his "evasive address" with regard to the Quebec power contracts question. Mr. Hepburn said he relied upon the Conservative leader "to tell the public definitely where he stands on the issue."

Conservative Dances

Pressing the question of Mr. Rowe's citizenship in his Point Anne address, Mr. Nixon said: "Present with me is W. L. Houck, Liberal member of the legislature for Niagara Falls, who was born in the United States but has taken out papers renouncing allegiance to the land of his choice. All I ask of Mr. Rowe is that he should say whether he has taken similar action. What is wrong with that question?"

Mr. Nixon mingled with crowds at the Conservative dances. Premier said was A. R. Acres, Conservative legislature member for Carleton who has been in the riding since start of the campaign. He has announced he will not return home until the election is won.

FUMES OVERCOME SEVEN AT GLENCOE

Mother Telephoned For Aid And Then Collapsed

Glencoe, Dec. 5.— (CP)—Seven occupants of a farm home near this Middlesex County town were recovering from the effects of coal gas today after several had been overcome unconsciousness last night when a furnace pipe became clodoged and permitted the fumes to spread throughout their home.

After one of the farmer daughters collapsed for the second time and fell to the floor from a chair in the Russell Eddie farm home, which detected the odor of coal gas, sending the alarm through the telephone, summoned aid then collapsed.

The telephone operator immediately summoned Dr. L. W. Freele and with assistance of district residents rushed to the house to find the seven occupants in various stages of stupor from the fumes. Several had become unconscious.

Those who suffered from the effects of the fumes were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Eddie, their two daughters; Vivian Eddie, a brother of Russell; Jame Eddie, father of the two men and John Bales, a hired man. All were revived and reported out of danger.

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday afternoon I was reading Paul Peppy Among the Insurrectors and I heard fellows whiseling for me outside and I went out and it was Puds Simkins and Leroy Shoomer, Puds saying, We're going around to the Bella Grand to see the Kut Up Komedy with Percy Peeds and Slick Summers in it, why dont you go on and see if you can get the money for a tickit, is your mother or your father home? Wich I did, and pop was in the living room looking at the financial page with an unsatisfied expression, saying, Yes gods, I would have to take a bilmpe just when the market decides to fall like a load of bricks, when it comes to money matters I am not to hot a nerse.

Well Jimminy, pop, why dont you just stop reeding the financial page for a while, I never do, I said, and pop said, Scram.

Wich I did, and Puds and Leroy had got tired of waiting and wasn't there any more, so I went back to Paul Peppy.

Addresses Club On 'Citizenship'

An interesting feature of the regular monthly meeting of the King George Home and School Club held yesterday afternoon in the Teachers' Room was the splendid address on Citizenship given by Mrs. J. W. Kinnear, guest speaker.

The president, Mrs. G. W. Sankey presided and opened the meeting with the singing of "O Canada." After extending a welcoming those present, the president despatched the usual business of the Club. The parents' attendance award was won by Mr. Ralph Rose.

Mrs. Kinnear said of the privileges of Citizenship in a vast, comparatively new and democratic country such as Canada and expatiated upon its duties and responsibilities. Citizenship had its beginning in the Magna Charta signed in 1215 and the speaker gave the chronological evolution of the rights and privileges we enjoy today. To the edification of her audience, the speaker explained the departments of government and touched briefly on the conclusion she said that self-sacrifice, the courage to stand by one's convictions in the face of opposition and honesty were the essentials of good citizenship.

St. Andrew's Club Sponsors Bazaar

In a colour scheme of red and white, the hall of St. Andrew's Church was a charming picture yesterday afternoon when members of St. Andrew's Club held their annual bazaar. Red streamers were used on lights, pillars and to mark off the tea room, while the booths were picturesquely decorated in Christmas colours. Red carnations and cherry trees added to the attractiveness of the scene.

The guests were received by Mrs. R. A. Wilson. In the tea room in charge of Mrs. George Thomas and Mrs. Clifford Mayhew, small tables were grouped about the tea table, charming with a centre piece and fancy work tables. Mrs. Percy Bascom, Mrs. Cyril Bateman, Agnes, Mrs. Bruce Beavis, Miss Helen Blair; candy, Mrs. A. Boynton, Mrs. Harry Boynton; fish pond, Mrs. Woods, Mrs. Vernon Weir and Mrs. Alex Weir; home cooking, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. M. Campbell, Miss Gallagher; book stall, Mrs. A. B. Baird and Mrs. W. R. Van Steenburgh.

A vivid interpreter of Victorian manners and mores, Mr. E. F. Benson after his biographies of Queen Victoria and of Edward VII, has turned to the Queen's most distinguished descendant, William II, Emperor of Germany, in his latest book "The Kaiser and English Relations." To Queen Victoria, the Kaiser was the son of her favourite daughter, Princess Royal and the eldest grandson. To Edward, he was a foreigner who happened to have a family connection with the throne and a seat of trouble. Mr. Benson has developed the fascinating picture of the Kaiser who wielded so much power in that day-before-yesterday, and-easily-forgotten, he believes, had almost as much to do with the World War as the rivalries of the time. He traces the energetic career of Kaiser William II to the present day and his retirement in the role of country gentleman at Doorn, Holland, mourning the unbending, wood-chopping and reading, made famous by Carlyle. There was on his throne at Potsdam. The biographer speculates amusingly as to the results if the Kaiser had been allowed to live out his life entirely in that role.

The unique journey of a modern traveller who takes the Acts of the Apostles as his guide-book is described by H. V. Morton in his book "In the Steps of the Master." Author of many outstanding travel books and of the book "In the Steps of the Master," a best seller in 1935, H. V. Morton has again returned to the Holy Land and has himself the task of following the missionary journeys of St. Paul. To reach his goal, it was necessary to make four journeys to the New East for the same number of times. Palestine, Syria, Turkey, Macedonia, Greece, the Island of Cyprus, Malta, Rhodes, and the city of Damascus traces the route by which Christianity came to the West. In the footsteps of the man who, emerging from bishop Saul of Tarsus, very young anti-Christian bend on the road to Stephen, the fire, Christian martyr, the literary of Saul, as Paul the Apostle, the same fury against the Faith as he himself had once instigated, the author shows St. Paul as a saint and man, indicates the problems he faced in Christianizing the world and contrasts the cities of that world with their counterparts today. This book should prove a popular a choice of Christmas gift as did its predecessor, "In the Steps of the Master."

Derek Palmore, great-grand-son of the Victorian poet, Coventry Patmore, has not won only fame for his biographical study "Portrait of a Family" but is even better known as one of the writing authorities of the day on the art of interior decoration. His latest book, "I decorate My Home," is in the nature of a delightfully personal guide to meet the needs of the average home of today. Mr. Palmore does not give mere directions or instructions but takes the reader into his confidence over certain problems he has had to face—the choice of carpet, fabrics, furniture, ornaments, pictures, lighting. The author deplores the fact that many people are afraid of modernism in decoration. He maintains that good taste is never sensational, and that modern interior decoration with its clean cut lines, varied width of fabric and subtle use of glass and metal will create a style that can take its place probably beside the great monuments of the past.

A fascinating and inexpensive hobby for a winter's night entertainment is that investigated by J. S. Forester in his book "Marionettes at Home." Interest in marionettes and puppets is steadily growing and many people have felt the desire to create a puppet theatre of their own. Mr. Forester takes us behind the scenes and shows exactly how it is done. The marionnette theatre productions can be things of charm and beauty, he says, and the story of this hobby shows that it can reach a peak of almost professional perfection.

Article No. 1

Hello Everybody!

This series of articles is by many kind friends in Belleville, Hastings County, and far, far beyond in other climes most of necessity be very brief. Therefore I have leave of absence from business for only a couple of weeks, for already within three days my note-book is full of important matters for me to publish, and I know much more will come to pass soon.

I must tell you first that I am writing these lines in the great, beautiful library of the University of Toronto where nearly half a century ago I was a regular literary and legal consumer as hundreds of Canada's finest young men are now engaged all around me in perfect silence. I too looked into these books, and found not a few brilliant woman too) as revealed in the printed page, and now I have been given the reference library counter in charge of two library young women (undergraduates I believe) and asked for a medium sized English dictionary. They gave me that searching but kind look which only plainly, they say, are a graduate, and can spell" At once I responded but to her astonishment with a twinkle in her eye to spell "benefited". Like a good Canadian sport, she responded but to her astonishment chagrin discovered that she was not as she spelled it the same old way with two t's. Then I made them laugh heartily about my spelling when in the streets of Los Angeles a few months ago. Then I withdrew from an astounding dictionary to the honor for my Alma Mater.

In our business we often receive letters from teachers and professors too containing such words as the following: "oblidge, advise, perceive, curcuity" and many others, and I am sorry that they have not consult a good dictionary often.

But nevertheless I have been delighted to meet many graduates from California last June due to the fact that CENTURY pointed out by each authority that there is "Wow, was to be one of two Dominion Universities to speak well". It worried me because during my visit there in June I had never done anything or tried to do anything without stepping on somebody's toes, and creating plans jealous, or envious or openly hostile. Now this is a matter of deep concern and I worried because there wasn't anything to worry about. Just then in my innocent delight I thought I happened in rapid succession and I can have you all over again.

Event number one. One day I stepped out of the office into Bloor street (now the City Hall) to go to our bank as usual in a more or less preoccupied frame of mind, and I only gone a few paces in Mr. Risey's direction when I heard one of my own original Ford chariots coming up the street with a terrific "chunk, chunk," and it's just a wonder that I didn't say "I think I can make it!" Then it entered again the centre of my head that so dangerously that I turned around in time to see a well known Belleville resident, most portly grandidad, open the chariot door, roll out on the road, and then with a sweet smile, coolly (a swell word, look it up) and then hail me by name. I returned from Scotland Yard, "Mr. James!" I stood petrified (another good word) and then went to the assistance of my friend.

He did not like what you wrote about California so well," continued this charming gentleman, beaming approach. Then he burst into laughter and added, "Your articles were not so popular."

When I had sufficiently recovered, I was somewhat amazed: "For one so grandded, you nearly gave me heart failure."

Event number two. On fine days I often walk to and fro on business north and use a very fine walking cane (an esteemed present) as it is very useful for pointing out objects eye sight; a few bad falls at curbs have made this ornament a necessity, and I have always found it very useful. Now one of Belleville's best schools, where I was kick a football as high as their school. To my amazement one day a fine little fellow about eleven, well dressed and with handsome face, pelled out as I passed by: "The big Bologna." All the boys stopped playing and looked in my direction but not seeing anything of unusual interest went on with their game. Little did I dream that more indignant than ever repeated the remark with added emphasis.

I was greatly surprised because I did not know the lad, and did not remember having seen him before. Then I realized that he undoubtedly meant for me, I began to ponder for a possible cause without success for a long time. Then it came to me like a flash. The fine little lad had heard oneself, shame and hypocrisy. Why should anyone, who walked upright and regularly, be seen on a Sunday cane on a week day. It was my own honest and bright self, as a missionary for proper conduct, the little lad made public his stand on matters of street decorum and "Bologna" was the best righteous outburst at hand. Bologna!

Since these momentous events I have begun to realize that I am just a human being with many limitations, and not a favorite of the gods. (I am using my dictionary, I trust, with good effect.)

ernment and we are proud to be associated with it in the cause of courageous Premier, who is one of the greatest this province ever had. (Cheers).

"He has a keen analytical mind and sincere honesty of purpose. His courage has never been doubted and he is possessed of an ability to view the problems of the common people as well as those of others."

Sudden Change

"In March next, we are going to balance the Budget", declared the speaker, "something which has not been done before in this century. And during that year we are going to see the revision of diminished taxation and we are proud, that we have been able to accomplish this in two short years. And furthermore, I am proud to say the Department of Education has had a part in the balancing of the Budget."

Words he shared, that we are balancing the Budget at school and hospital expenditure, but we have continued Dr. Simpson. "Hospital grants have been increased and public school grants have been increased by $211,000, or in other words 3.9 per cent. over last year. But the Department of Education is operating on one million dollars less than before, but that million was not taken out of school grants. I believe today and the people of Ontario do too, that the Department is being run at a delightful low cost of the reduced cost".

Citing the improvements of unnecessary costs removed since the advent of the Hepburn Government, the Minister claimed that the annual $16,000 advertising bill had been cut and bonuses given to the school inspectors for the inspection of agricultural societies throughout the province, which amounted to $27,000 had been eliminated and teachers had been asked to do without the examination fees, which amounted to an annual saving of $40,000.

"This", declared the speaker "was no hardship on the teachers, because we made it part of their school year for the examinations earlier."

Referring to the abolition of the examination fee, amounting to $180,000 Dr. Simpson asserted that "we always boasted of our free education in Ontario. We felt that the children of the rich and poor alike should have an equal chance with those of the wealthy. It was one of the most tragic things, that ever happened, that children of the poor or people were deprived of their chance of education because they could not send their money to write their examinations.

"Now", he continued "we are introducing the Extension of Recommendation System, and looking forward to the time when we will do away from the written set or examinations. We are not going to place the same importance to examinations in the past."

"We abolished the second year Normal Course for teachers", he said, "and we are keeping up the high standard of our teachers by encouraging them to take the summer course".

Two Systems of Grants

"We have two systems of grants", declared Dr. Simpson "the first is the regular grant based on attendance and districts' salary. Second is the special grant. We found, that we are paying too much in secondary and High School education, because we have a 'rich man's system', and this because we have always held in the importance of that magic matriculation examination. We are introducing a new system of education in the schools that those boys and girls, who find trouble with the matriculation examinations will have further instruction given them, and when they turn out of our schools, pupils, who will be good citizens of Ontario."

Appealing for a fair trial for the Amendment to the Assessment Act, Dr. Simpson declared, "it might be for yourselves, and satisfy yourselves on what you want. Only a great number of the Opposition speakers are coming on insinuations, lies and prejudice to get them by. But these things do not exist in the minds of the people to any more. They are thinking for themselves to study the Act carefully before condemning it, then if you think it is unfair and giving privileges to the Separate Schools, which are not theirs, it is your privilege to take the proper steps out of power. But we need not worry for after it has had a fair trial, the people will vote solidly behind the measure."

"It is my duty", continued the speaker" to see that the children of Ontario, regardless of nationality or creed are given a solid satisfactory education. There are a great number of Separate Schools in Ontario, which are Protestant, which have been erected and maintained by the denominational minority under the right and privileges given them by the B.N.A."

"In 1863 a law was passed to allocate taxes from property to Separate Schools. Then these taxes on property was held by individuals and there were very few corporations. and people did not foresee that money would be invested in the corporations. In 1896 a Bill was passed, giving the Separate School supporters the right to go to the corporations and say 'I want the taxes of my property allocated to the support of Separate Schools'. This, however, was not made compulsory."

"And the result was that many directors of the corporations disregarded these requests and paid the taxes to the support of the Public Schools."

Gives Statistics

"I don't think that the Protestants have been quite fair in this matter. Don't we read Roman Catholic Cons on, die deeper'. He knew the Income Tax did not affect the farmer, the working man or the man on the basic assessment.

Charging that the Bank of Canada was nothing but a privately owned concern, when under the Bennett-Rowe regime, the speaker said, "We took it and made it a real Government-owned affair. Bennett and Rowe fought it because they wanted it controlled by the Conservative Party.

Agreements Discussed

The U. S. Trade Agreements have been discussed, declared the People of Canada, declared Mr. Simpson, because of the fact that U. S. has increased in nine months by $60,000,000. We have imported $60,000,000 more U. S. goods with the Treaty $23,000,000 worth more than in the period before." The speaker quoted figures showing the difference in trade before and after the Trade Agreements:

Article	Before	After
Strawberries .. $	67,000	$ 67,000
Maple Sugar	192,710	864,000
Potatoes	67,000	624,000
Turnips	228,000	463,000
Whisky (9 mo.)	7,172,000	13,601,000
Wine	1,623,000	2,000,000
Oil (9 mo.)	4,676,000	7,572,000
Cattle	1,340,000	1,340,000
Cheese	50,827	1,234,000

"I ask you, he said, "were we right in reducing tariffs?"

"The Hepburn Government, has throughout the year, the right head of fellowship to the United States," he continued. "There is something that has been lacking in the mere dollars and cents. We are cementing a great friendship between the two countries. The Rowe policy in this respect was nothing short of insane. The Hepburn Government's policy was treat and the manner in which the younger artists played their part was a revelation.

The first act showing country dad by Iva Lemmins presented two songs in a style called Fashion Parade all the "Wilds" and "I Won't Believe it's Raining". They both received encores. Also stole the hearts of all her listeners when she led a chorus in "I Want a Sweetheart".

"The Man From Brandon"

A very amusing half hour playette entitled "The Man from Brandon" gave the older dramatic artists a chance to show the manner in which to display their talents. It was a very clever laugh-provoking play that kept the audience laughing from beginning to end with a startling climax, concerning the most of each individual part. Among those in the cast beside Mr. Burgess the director were Mrs. Rowe in presentation who is a talented artist, Mrs. Lee Bowen, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Jas. Lemmins, Mrs. Bennett, Miss Betty McGee, Miss Frances Clark and Mr. Wm. Jones. The play and its cast made a hit and upon a series of mistaken identities and crimes.

A pretty garden scene starring Misses Iris Mitchell as Cecily and Ella was another outstanding number. The first half of the performance ended with the Chorus Girls' Lady' chorus by the entire company with Miss Betty Shapley carrying the in the solo role.

Following the intermission the show continued with a brilliant Spanish number featuring a Spanish tango presented in a picturesque manner by Miss Frances Clarke and Mr. Bennett Deline. Then came on a second curtain call for her song "Rhythm in My Nursery Rhymes" and a fine encore number. The village choir including the senior members of the company in a choir of laughter with their offering of "Sweetheart of Sigma Phi Sweetheart Soldier" and very cleverly managed to stay out of tune with each other throughout the number which also called for a repeat. A military drill featuring Miss Betty Shapley as a chorus in the singing of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp the Boys are Marching" was carried through with all the regal splendor of a Military Tattoo with Jimmie Sheridan the attention of the audience.

The last finale including the introduction of Miss Ruby Stapley as queen of the Dollies and guard of honour dressed in brilliant uniforms was very effective. The entire presentation is the result of the director should be highly commended and the organization behind the show can be justly proud of his efforts. The stage settings were of the most colorful type and the manner in which the whole went over portrays a real knowledge of the show business on the part of the director, Mr. Burgess, who with Mrs. Ella, stole the hearts of the audience with their presentation of "The Indian Love Call" which really demands unusual musical ability.

bloodletting would reduce the blood pressure and bring some relief, but the Pontiff declined to permit this, officials asserted.

The medical bulletins, it was stated, will be issued for the moment twice daily. The Pope had cancelled all activities and audiences and spent a fitful day in bed since becoming head of the Catholic Church.

Physicians have declared he might never walk again.

The Pope's illness was called to attend the Pontiff and has remained at the Pope's bedside.

The Pope's condition was disclosed officially this morning by his valet, Malvezitti, when he attempted to enter the Pope's room. In a hearing, church officials reported.

Unable to Sleep

The Pontiff declared the Pope was unable to get out of bed, Doctor Milani said, and was in need of immediate examination.

The Pope's condition close to the Vatican declared, was determination the Holy Father had been stricken with pneumonia, but it is feared he was said, may be progressive.

The Pontiff was first stricken by the attending physicians to inflammation of the heart.

Pope Pius XI had both the Pontiff's mother and elder brother, Francesco Ratti, died within a week.

Pius spent the last year of his life in an arm chair which, some believed, may be the case with the Pope.

Retreat Ceremony

This morning the Pontiff was to have attended the closing ceremony of the Retreat, which he began Sunday last.

When it was found he could not arrive, Cardinals and a group of a Bishops and Prelates who had gathered for the ceremony, went to his bedroom and held the services there.

The Jesuit preacher, Father Magnino, was to have read the last sermon of the Retreat in the Sistine Chapel, read it instead standing beside the Pope's bed.

The Pontiff listened intently, Prelates said, apparently in possession of all his mental faculties.

In the Sistine Chapel, Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, Papal secretary of state, read a message signed by the Pope himself.

News of Illness Spreads

In the meantime, the Pontiff called attention to the importance of the spiritual exercises just concluded and accused himself for not attending, owing to a "local disturbance."

News of the Pope's illness spread quickly throughout the Vatican, causing consternation in all quarters.

It was announced at noon that all audiences had been cancelled. The Pope was to have received hundreds of persons, mostly newly married couples, who had been sent invitations.

They were told the audiences might begin Monday. Private sources said, however, there was no definite time set for the receptions.

Pope Is Comfortable

Some prelates expressed the theory the Pope was suffering from a slight attack of the thoroughness with which he had conducted this year's spiritual retreat.

Others thought it might be due to the sudden change from his ordinary, strenuous work to complete repose in meditation and prayer.

Prayer will be offered in Rome churches tomorrow for the Holy Father's health.

A high Vatican official disclosed the 78-year-old Pontiff had a weak heart.

Stirling and District

Stirling—One of the finest variety shows ever presented to a Stirling audience was evidenced when two performances were given in the local theatre on Friday of last week in presentation including nearly one hundred of the district's most talented artists was given under the auspices of the Stirling Agricultural Society and directed by D. J. Bourque formerly of Brantford, Ontario. The spectacle of beauty in color with unusual scenes and delightful costumes and the audience expressed its delight with the performance as they loudly applauded the choruses, skits, and vaudeville turns given by artists ranging in ages from the Kindergarten class to the adults. A catchy faced comedy team of James Ward and Jack Delong in their black faces and the team of Stapley and Bell in a fast moving act of cracking whips was outstanding number with Bell giving an unusual impersonation of a Spanish senorita. All the choruses and dance novelties were a treat and the manner in which the younger artists played their part was a revelation.

The first act showing country dad by Iva Lemmins presented two songs in a style called Fashion Parade all the "Wilds" and "I Won't Believe it's Raining". They both received encores. Also stole the hearts of all her listeners when she led a chorus in "I Want a Sweetheart".

The cold weather is the main topic of conversation these days. On Monday and Tuesday the thermometer hovered from 16 to 22 below zero. Wednesday was the worst of the day. This is real extreme weather for this time of the season. Many people are suffering with an attack of flu.

Even the autos have the sniffles and some simply refuse to start on account of the cold and the cold weather seemed to clash.

Pres. Bruce Bristol Makes Announcement at Banquet. Last Night

MacLaurin, principal of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, chairman in his usual capable manner and after the toast to the King, the Motorcycle Club upon a fore-thought in the staging of such a fine sporting event, added his compliments to George Pepper, the winner, "if ruby realize the honor you went to the race little realizing the difficulties encountered but to be theirs and I can assure you for one, I'm keenly interested in this clean sport and will lend my assist whenever possible." stated Mr. MacLaurin and concluded by referring to the sportsmanship and stamina displayed by the various riders to complete the race.

Gordon Davies, Don Bird and other members of the club spoke and the meeting closed with a feeling of enthusiasm in regards to the race now started and the second annual 200 mile Canadian motorcycle race to be held in Belleville next Labor Day possibly.

MAROONS MAKE TRADES, BOLSTER FOR LEAF GAME

Gorman Trades MacKenzie to Canadiens For Paul Runge

LEAFS WEAKENED

Thereware something very like desperation in the usually calm blue eyes of Thomas Patrick Gorman Toronto Maroons' manager-coach of Montreal Canadiens into Toronto for a clash with Toronto Maple Leafs tonight. The team that held the world title two seasons ago has not won two games in ten and the ebullient Ottawa Irishman is beginning to show the strain.

Gorman's latest attempt to strengthen the club seem as desperate as a one-legged jeffersonian's efforts to shut out Chuck Conacher. And about as useless unless his latest acquisitions show more than they have in the past.

To bolster the team that lost a 2-1 decision to Leafs Tuesday, Gorman has traded defenceman Bill Mackenzie to Montreal Canadiens, for Paul Runge, a wingman, and purchased Lionel Conacher, veteran defender, from Boston Bruins. Shannon's departure has first loosened up the tight Maroon purse strings this season.

Casaliss Resist.

Only Shannon will be available for tonight's game, however. Runge may not be available for a month under an arrangement between Canadiens and New Haven Eagles. Shannon will be used in place of Carl Voss who will be out of the game for ten days recuperating from an ankle injury.

Canadiens get a break on the deal Gorman they can use MacKenzie tonight against Boston. He probably will replace Roger Jenkins whom Montreal have announced they will trade.

Gorman need not be too worried about his injury-riddled team. Toronto has its casualties. Conacher won't be back in the game for another week and Hap Boll and Bob Gracie who will be absent at least for tonight.

The Maroon-Toronto and Boston-Canadien games set the National League schedule tonight for a fast pace after a slow week. Only single games were played Tuesday and Wednesday but each was hard and decisive as usual.

Football play Americans in New York Sunday night in their second meeting of the week-end. Dutnery's team defeated the world champions 2-0 in their only other meeting, last Sunday. Brooklyn Dodgers face Rangers and Black Hawks tangle at Chicago in the other Sunday night test. It will be their first clash of the schedule.

'Fliers' Lead Kingston Loop

Scoring all goals in the initial period, Trenton Flyers defeated the Prescott seniors 2 to 1 in a regular scheduled hockey game played on the Kingston City League last evening. The Fliers' victory was their fifth straight and gave them undisputed title to the city league championship. Prescott scored early in the initial frame, Mickey Riddell netting the counter for the Comptr put his team into the lead. Despite the last both clubs tried hard to score in the subsequent periods, their efforts were in vain, full time finding the score remaining at 2 to 1. The pace set was exceedingly fast and the game was clean.

On Monday the Belleville Recruiters are scheduled to meet the Kingston Frontenac Club in the league fixture with the R.C.A.F. Fliers doubtless with the same Kingston team next Friday night.

Although it has been the claim of many, "no one ever broke the Bank at Monte Carlo." On different occasions players won all the money pro-rated for hours at an single roulette table, and then that table would quit functioning for the night, but the other tables continued to operate—profitably. Monte Carlo was founded about 80 years ago by a gambling German waiter named Francois Blanc, who had left Germany for many European countries before he located in the bankrupted country of Monaco nestled along the shores of the azure Mediterranean. Stockholders in Monte Carlo have been known to receive as high as 1500 per cent on bonus days.

With the Minor Baseball Leagues in session at Montreal and baseball trades daily making the headlines on the sport pages, maybe it would be a good opportune time to bring the subject closer home. In Eastern Ontario the cry in baseball has been "We don't get a fair shake from the O.B.A.A." If the be so, and we are not questioning this statement, the time to remedy this trouble is now as at hand. It is understood the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. is to be held in Cobourg next April. If Eastern Ontario baseball magnate feel they need more and better representation on the executive of the parent body, now is the time for the various magnate to be present in person and vote into office their own selections for representation on the executive of the O.B.A.A. What really should be the object of the senior baseball leagues, from Oshawa to Gananoque, and as well the Intermediates meet in Belleville and air their views and tribulations.

The small troubles and questions of the O.B.A.A. and the local club naturally cannot be legislated by the O.B.A.A. but the clubs would take their troubles to their leagues who in turn could present them at meetings of the O.B.A.A. parent body, then some of these differences, could easily be ironed out to the mutual benefit of all concerned. The individual clubs should remember their petty troubles cannot always be settled by the O.B.A.A. but by the association of leagues, not an association of individual clubs. It is with this idea in mind we suggest a general meeting of all leagues and individual clubs in Belleville where these troubles can be settled. It is the duty of the local individual clubs they should do a little missionary work in the off season.

Yesterday the Chicago Cubs traded Captain Woody English and pitcher Roy Henshaw to the Brooklyn Dodgers for second baseman Linus Frey and that is only the beginning of many more sensational trades to come.

While on the subject of baseball we have heard many rumors floating up and down the local main stem relative to the future possibilities of baseball facilities of senior baseball in Belleville. In 1936 the local senior baseball positively in the cellar, but thanks to the good managerial guidance of Leroy McDougal the club finished on the right side of the ledger, but what about next year. Ed Mercer has forsaken the shores of the Bay of Quinte and is located at Sydney leaving baseball without a first string pitcher in Belleville. Judging from the way ballad balls were hit through the local infield last summer, the club has a real class infielders, or a net will have to be erected in order to stop the barrage of base hits another year. Actually baseball is dead as a door nail in Belleville for another year and much too remote for comfort.

Of course we do not mean to suggest that all the defensive qualities of last year's senior ball club was sound, but the difficulty in their hitting was woefully weak, as could be seen by their batting average of .270 to lead the league. Vinny Dimond in the season's honors with an average of .400 followed by .370 for the rest of the team. If baseball is to survive and flourish in Belleville in 1937 a few tried and proven willow-wielders of the first school must be secured. We think we can expect to win many games without a few hitters of the selected .300 class on the roster, however.

Last evening the Quinte Motorcycle Club entertained those who assisted in the staging of the record breaking 200 mile motorcycle race held last Labor Day. When President Bruce Bristol announced the club had already opened negotiations to repeat this thrilling spectacle in 1937, he also added, with candor, that the club was not financially in the matter, however, as other clubs in existing corridors were toward the holding of the second annual 200 mile Canadian motorcycle championship race. Chairman F. C. MacLaurin fittingly summed up the race as referring to it as one of the finest sporting events ever staged in this country.

Manager Jackie Thomas expressed satisfaction relative to the grouping afforded his two local O.H.A. entries, the Juniors and the Intermediates. Insofar as the junior grouping is concerned, however, little can be done about it as a third club had to be added along with Tweed and Belleville to make up a grouping, so naturally Peterboro was the logical choice being on highway No. 7. This should make an interesting group, however.

Insofar as the Belleville Intermediate club is concerned, however, we believe Manager Thomas has a logical objection in his favor. The local Redmen, after playing in the intermediate "B" series last year, were raised to an intermediate "A" rating this season and safety to give Peterboro and the R.C.A.F. a breathing. Now here's really the folly of the whole set-up—Last spring the local Redmen were eliminated by the Whitby Club in the "B" playoffs and the Whitby team continued on to the finals of that series. This year the O.H.A. permits the Whitby club to retain its intermediate "A" rating, but elevates Belleville, who were eliminated by Whitby in an "A" rating. If there is any consistency in this, we fail to see it.

We understand Trenton is far from satisfied with their lot in intermediate "A" grouping also, because the only alternative would be to give Trenton and Belleville a "B" rating, leaving Peterborough in the R.C.A.F. in the "A" senior series, then inter-lock schedules and make all games played among the "B" class club count in both schedules. The Trenton club feels Peterboro-Belleville pair could then continue into the provincial play-downs, while the senior game on the other half of the group, R.C.A.F.-Peterboro could do likewise in the "A" series. In other words let all four clubs compete in the same group, but Belleville and Trenton would have a "B" rating and the club to finish in front of the other competitors. The same would hold good for the class "A" clubs also.

Albert "Toots" Holway, who received his unconditional release from the Cleveland Falcons yesterday, is expected home some time this week end. "Toots" is not worrying too much over his release, as he has already had offers to sign with other minor league clubs, but may remain in Belleville and attend to his business enterprise. "Toots" would be a welcome addition to the local hockey circles. His wide knowledge of hockey should materially assist in the coaching of local junior and juvenile players.

The R.C.A.F. "Fliers" moved into first place in the Kingston City League last evening by defeating the Prescott scribble 2 to 1. The Fliers play fast and clever checking, as all scoring was completed in the initial frame.

"DIVIDED HOUSE" EXPECTED WHEN U. S. A. A. U. MEET

Brundage Proposes Organization Confines Efforts to Amateur Sports Only

By ALAN GOULD

Associated Press Sports Writer

Houston, Tex., Dec. 5.—(AP)—After two days devoted to administrating Olympic controversies, shadow-boxing for world titles and wrestling with its 1937 sports program, delegates to the 56th convention of the Amateur Athletic Union faced a final, sharp warning today against the "divided house" from President Avery Brundage of Chicago.

The American Olympic chieftain, in a report marking his "farewell to A.A.U. arms" in addition to wield the convention gavel for the remainder of last this year, said the organization "will continue to grow and prosper if it confines itself to amateur sport alone."

He added: "Once it is made the tool of some individual group or is used to serve political ambitions, personal profit or for any other purpose than its high aims set forth in its constitution, it will inevitably decay."

The statement to the first general session, reviving echoes of the Olympic fight, which nearly disrupted the A.A.U. a year ago, followed committee struggles to whip the 1937 business program into shape for tomorrow.

Tightening of opposing lines was noted in the contest between Jeremiah T. Mahoney and Judge Patrick J. Walsh, two New York lawyers for the presidency. Nominations the Mahoney forces were shifting their pro-carnival lead and that the Brundage-led group would, less control of the A.A.U. situation, especially with the retirement of their leader.

NEW GROUPINGS RAISES REDMEN TO "A" RATING

Intermediates to Play With Airport, Trenton And Peterboro

3 IN JUNIOR GROUP

Belleville, Tweed And Peterboro in Junior "B" Schedule

Entirely new groupings were announced by Manager Jackie Thomas of the O.H.A. Belleville Redmen at the executive meeting of the O.H.A. held in Toronto last evening when the local intermediate team was grouped with the Peterboro Hockey Club and Trenton, both in the R.C.A.F. Hockey Club while in the junior grouping Belleville Tweed and Belleville were included in the same grouping. Both groups are to consist of three clubs. Jack S. Bacon, executive member of the O.H.A. is also a resident of Belleville.

In the intermediate grouping the Belleville and Trenton clubs were raised to a class "A" rating apparently to make a grouping for the Peterborough R.C.A.F. clubs. Last season the local Redmen were granted a "B" rating but Manager Thomas had not only requested the same rating this year, but pointed out to the O.H.A. that the grouping for affiliation, his club had been weakened through the loss of men, he therefore could not possibly ice an intermediate "A" team this year.

In conversation with the Ontario Intelligencer today Manager Eddie Thomas stated that the new groupings relates stated he was far from satisfied with the Belleville Tweed affiliator of his clubs. "Junior hockey in Belleville is far from a paying proposition and I feel that the O.H.A. would be doing a big favor to the local intermediate grouping as I have been forced into is concerned, however, I have been forced to affiliate with teams over with Mr. Burrows. I distinctly informed the O.H.A. that our intermediate club was not in the financial position and requested not to be grouped with the R.C.A.F. Fliers and Peterborough, both of whom have intermediate "A" clubs.

Lost Three Players.

Outside of this fact I have nothing else to say at present, but might add it cannot be denied that at one time the O.H.A. ruled us as "B" class, especially as we have lost three of the best players in the city who they can raise our status to an "A" class hockey club in 1936-37, that's all," stated Mr. Thomas as he intimated doubt as to whether or not the Redmen could compete against such overwhelming odds or not.

In the matter of the junior grouping, Secretary Manager Thomas stated he was not in favor of the long jump to Peterborough, but supposed the liftlock city entry was included in order to make a grouping with Tweed. "In regards to the junior grouping I intend to communicate with the Tweed Club before making any statement," added Mr. Thomas.

It is understood the Trenton Club is far from satisfied with their intermediate lot in the O.H.A. also. Mr. Burrows, local O.H.A. representative, had not arrived back in Belleville from the meeting in Toronto at noon today and no statement was available from him. In the meantime local fans must await the call of the convener of each group at which time all controversies will be aired.

MY BIG HOCKEY THRILL

By "BALDY" NORTHCOTT

One of the most exciting incidents, I have experienced since I have been in the league, was in winning the Stanley Cup in 1932 with the Montreal Maroons. We swept through the Chicago Black Hawks, and then York Rangers in the semi-finals and then went on to beat the Toronto Maple Leafs in closely fought series for the world's hockey championship.This, to me, was my one ambition since starting to play professional hockey, to be on a Stanley Cup team before my time was up in the big league.

The most exciting part of the whole series was the second game in Chicago. This game went into overtime with the score tied 0-0. Lolo Couture of the Black Hawks was given a five-minute penalty for accidentally cutting Dave Trottier. Our manager, Tommy Gorman, put on Bob Gracie with Jimmy Ward and myself as the forward line. With Couture in the penalty box, Gracie broke away with the puck and on hitting the Chicago defence shot a forward pass right on to my stick. I counted in on Leroy Goheer, with only him to beat, faked a shot and when Chabot started to slide out, lifted the puck over him into the top corner of the net. I can still see the expression on Lorne's face. He just kept right on going from his end of the ice and into the dressing room. It was the greatest thrill I have ever experienced playing hockey.

Chicago, Dec. 5 (CP)—Unharmed but seemingly annoyed when an automobile knocked him under a street car, a dog startled traffic on the Ashland Avenue line by refusing to come out from under.

He spurned the motorman's overtures. He failed to respond to a police squad's offer of cookies, candy and sausage.

Finally with a dozen street cars stymied by the animals stubbornness, two wrecking crews were called. They hacked up the car. Out walked the dog.

AT THE BELLE

"Last of the Mohicans" and "Along Came Love"

Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon and Heather Angel head one of the greatest casts of stars ever assembled on the screen in "The Last of the Mohicans", Reliance Pictures' film version of the immortal James Fenimore Cooper's classic, on the Belle screen today and Monday, matinee daily.

Also featured in important roles in this unforgettable story of glorious adventure, heart-stirring romance and thundering conflict are Bruce Cabot, Phillip Reed, Robert Barrat, Hugh Buckler and Willard Robertson.

Scott is seen as Hawkeye, the brave and handsome colonial scout hero, beloved by the millions of readers of the book. Edna Barnes is cast as the glamorous Alice Munro, who is torn between love for him and loyalty to her father Major Duncan Heyward, played by Wilcoxon. Cabot has the role of Magua, the renegade Indian spy. Miss Angel is seen as the lovely Cora Munro and Reed as Uncas, the young Indian brave who hopelessly worships her.

Breath-taking highlights of the picture are the defence of Fort William Henry against the onslaught of the French Legions; Cora's death leap from the Rock of Despair Cliff; the thrilling rescue of Hawkeye from the torture-stake of the savage Hurons; the barbaric ordeance of the Indian tribes, and last but not least, the hand-to-hand tomahawk battle to the death between renegade half-breed and "The Last of the Mohicans".

"Along Came Love"

Simple, tender and "sweet" is the fast moving honeymoon romance of ordinary folks, "Along Came Love", announced as the second feature attraction on the same program. Dealing with the love of a highly romantic shopgirl and a serious young newspaper editor, it is earning his way as a theatre doorman, this film is a delightful account of life in high society, intrigue, sophistication and dazzle and as such is excellent entertainment for all theatre-goers.

"Along Came Love" is a comedy of a girl who lives in her dreams, played by Irene Hervey, who is in quest of the man who has all the virtues and attributes of the ancient Greek gods. She finds in the student, Charles Starrett, and their love blooms until they are faced with a dilemma caused by a scandal when the girl's mother, Irene Rich, a burlesque performer, is arrested. Rather than blight the young physician's career she disappears. But love finds her out. The intricate social problem is skillfully worked out and the two are married, all to the tune of comedy, good music and skilful performing by an all-star cast.

Austin Strong, who wrote "Seventh Heaven" has responsibility for "Along Came Love." Also in the cast are Doris Kenyon, Ralf Harolde, Nat Pendleton, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Charles Judels.

The Belle Late News and Views will be exhibited on the same program.

Performances start daily at 2.20, 7.00, the last complete show starting at 8.40 p.m. "The Last of the Mohicans" begins at 7.00 and 9.40 p.m. "Along Came Love" begins at 8.40 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Accusing Finger" and "Country Gentlemen"

The Capitol brings another smashing double hit show on Monday and Tuesday with "The Accusing Finger" and "Country Gentlemen."

Considered food for though: to those who hold opinions on capital punishment as an institution as well as those who feel that circumstantial evidence should be entirely ruled out, in capital cases is contained in "The Accusing Finger", a new drama featuring Marsha Hunt, Robert Cummings, Paul Kelly, Kent Taylor, Harry Carey and Bernadette Hayes, which begins on Monday at the Capitol theatre as bit No 1.

"The Accusing Finger" tells of Kelly, a district attorney with a perfect record for convictions, who himself stumbled in a series of circumstances which result in his being arrested for the life time crime. All evidence is against him and he is forced to face trial. It is known that he is in love with Miss Hunt and not with his wife, Margaret Hayes, but the rule of unwritten threatening when she created a scene in a public restaurant. It is also known that he was arguing with and over Miss Hunt before her body was found in her bedroom.

He alone knows how she came to be killed but with the exception of Miss Hunt and Taylor, the investigator in the district attorney's office, who believes him, nobody else also in love with Miss Hunt and despite the fact that the conviction of Kelly would make a suitor, he undertakes to prove the man innocent of the charge.

While Kelly is in jail the love affair between Taylor and Miss Hunt flourishes. The day comes when Taylor must tell him. He does, but everything is worked out to everybody's satisfaction and future happiness.

Added Hit Attraction

If it's Kraft Music after the screen fare on Monday and Tuesday at the Capitol you will get your money's worth satisfied. Olsen and Johnson, a rollicking, roistering comedy team of stage and radio fame, make their bid for screen fame in the comedy, "Country Gentlemen", and if anyone would like to go on record as saying that they are surpassed by the Marx Brothers only in numbers!

The Scandinavian duo portray Chick Chandler and Ben Turpin, stock promoters, bill jumpers, riddlepapers, performers, men, and scoundrels who in the end prove that their intentions were not all along, and not a widow or an orphan could condemn them for bank role, and with that same wont to see her oftener.

This is a feature which should be seen by all theatre-goers, as it is a landmark in comedy production. It introduces a brand of subtle humor too often lacking from the average production of the day.

Ends Today

George Arliss is seen in one of history's greatest thrillers "Daniel Boone," a stirring tale of the pioneers who won the Kentucky wilderness. Also a selected program of hits and runs with this picture. A Stemo Howard comedy, a cartoon and a sports novelty.

Arguilles Sectori in Madrid Focus of Attack

Madrid, Dec. 5 (AP)—Ten Fascist bombers swept over the capital today in another concentrated drive, quickly following the fiercest aerial bombardment in the six months of Madrid's war. It was believed at least twenty persons were killed.

The fascist bombers' greatest hit last night when at least thirty incendiary and explosive bombs of the flames spread swiftly.

The bombs wrecked houses throughout the populous workers' residential district, Cuatros Caminos and also in the Rosales sector near the Model prison, where the government had one of its most important defence lines.

Officials said the property damage caused by tons of high explosives and incendiary bombs was incalculable. They counted at least 19 buildings razed by the bombs and many others damaged by fire.

Many civilians lost their lives, officials said, when the great armada of Fascist warplanes swooped low over the bombed areas and raked them with machine-gun fire.

HALIFAX, Dec. 5 (CP)—Nothing stumps the information girl behind the switchboard of a local telephone company, A. M. MacKay, general superintendent, revealed. Recently a voice at the other end of the wire said, "I want Mr. Smith on Birch Hill. He has a red cow for sale and a wart under his left eye." The caller got the party.

"Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

"Yes, I know. Father wouldn't mind. He was terribly set on it from mother still is; and of course the Dexters." She laughed shortly, "It's nice to keep the money in the family," she said.

"But your father — you just said—"

"Oh, he wants me to be happy," she said sighing. "No, he wouldn't mind. The fact is, he's grown a little fed up with Phil lately, doesn't like the way he conducts himself in the business."

"Then," said Jonathan, "I don't see what all the shouting's for. You and your father are a match for a dozen Dexters."

For a moment she was silent, staring across the lawns and gardens to woodland and water, then she said,

"Oh, I don't know what to do, Kim....I'm wretched! It might as well be Phil I suppose...."

"Hold it. I believe you've got over your mind," he said mildly. "Why is it logical as well? How lovely. With a million men in the world.. you'd have no difficulty choosing."

"Wouldn't I.... I'm not sure," perhaps that's just the trouble. Perhaps I have chosen and he doesn't care—"

Jonathan was as gullible as most men and very free from vanity. Having once made up his mind that Sally was all hers and no bits of it was said for him to unmake it again. But he could not now debate himself that he did not understand her. He was excessively uncomfortable. He felt like a fool. He was torn with pain from the scientific and biological standpoint, it is the unexpected people who does the pursuing. He was also aware that the majority of men prefer to retain their illusions, to the extent of believing themselves the hunters and not the hunted. He said quickly, after a moment,

"Look here, Sally, you're overwrought. You go to bed and sleep on this. No one is going to force you into a marriage you don't want—"

She said sullenly,

"You will...." Suddenly she turned and clung to him. She cried, "I thought I'd go through with it, just playing. I can't. Kim, you do like me, don't you? We—we could have such marvelous times together...we'd get away from this hole in the world, we'd be free of interaction in New York—we—"

Her arms were about him, straining close. Her cheek was against his own, her mouth....

She tried to kiss him.

Sally stepped back. She said, after a moment, and her voice was cold,

"I'm sorry I made such a fool of myself, Kim...."

"Oh, for pity's sake," said Jonathan, sorry for everything but principally for himself, tasking the absurd position into which, in a moment's distrust, "If you knew how sorry I am....."

"You needn't be," she said, with something of her old arrogance. "I'll get over it."

He said quietly,

"Sally, perhaps there's nothing to get over. You don't really mean it. You can't. I'm not at all your type. I'm just a man, and you're not terribly interested in his profession. It's a profession you've come to detest after a while because it doesn't leave much over, you know. It makes a man selfish and impatient and neglectful. I—I wouldn't have much time for you, you see. And I'd hate a big city practice. I'd need my back on that when I came up here. I should be unhappy."

She said, "Never mind that. I know all the arguments. Don't you suppose I've thought them out myself?"

He said, "Sally, be sensible. It's hat because I'm new, still unfamiliar. The girl would soon wear off the gingerbread and the novelty and my dear, I never could be."

"Who is your kind?" she demanded.

He was silent. Presently he mocked out his pipe. He said, "Let's go on it, shall we. I'd like to think you'll forget all this and that we'll go on being friends. I—I like you a lot.....I don't want you to dislike me."

She came up to him again and put her head on his arm.

"Tell me," she demanded. "I have to know. Is it Rose?"

After a moment he answered her, amazed at his own joyous shock of utter perception. He'd always known, in a way, but not as clearly, as definitely and as finally as he knew it now. He said, "Yes, it is Rose, Sally, it always has been."

Rose heard him. She had not heard everything that had been said, Jonathan's voice had been low at times; and once Sally had spoken in a rush of eager words, with only a phrase here and there reaching the listener's ear. But something Jonathan had said, that she had been waiting for, had said it slowly, strongly, happily.

Rose went back to the bedroom and flung herself across the bed. Listeners never heard well of themselves, did they? Ah, but that was wrong, wrong—she had heard so well of herself that for the rest of her life she would be a different person.

It was not that she had doubted that Jonathan cared for her. She had had, she had known, she had been content to wait. But to hear it said like that, quietly, irrevocably, the confession given not only to Sally but to himself, and to Sally, who listened, she was not in the least ashamed of listening.

She lay there, overheard all that Sally had brought him there to tell him, she had heard enough. Sally had offered herself, and been refused. It did not occur to Rose that a proper heroine would have found some means of urging her lover to reconsider Sally's offer; would have dabbed with herself in tears, all through the night that it would be better for him to have Sally and the Sutton influence and the city practice and all the frills. Rose never considered her mind. She was entirely too logical, too practical and too much in love. For Jonathan did not want Sally and the Sutton gilding; he did not mean, now, to succumb to Park Avenue office; he wanted Riverport and a home and the exercise of his profession; he wanted work and hope and a decent living and herself. And Rose, perhaps prone on the bed, too glad for laughter and too rapturous for tears, he should have them!

She did not know when Jonathan went, minutes again, than was put in another wing from her own. But Sally came up almost directly, walking with her light, easy step on the polished bare flooring of the hall, her heels clicking, walking with a step that seemed as entirely detached.

Rose thought, I ought to be sorry for her. I ought to be ashamed for her, but I'm not.....

It wouldn't go very deep, she reflected, not much beyond hurt pride and astonished arrogance and amazed vanity. Sally would be herself again, before very long; she would laugh it off; she knew a good most things off. And in a way Phil was a certain admiration, for her going straight after what she believed she wanted, brushing everything aside, even the conventions which, if shop-worn, still held most women bound. She had the courage of her convictions had Sally....perhaps this was admirable. Or was it too like her father to be wholly so?

Rose thought suddenly, and the vicious happiness within her stilled, remained but it was no longer exultant—if Jon's made her his enemy?

Perhaps that woman scorned Business was an concern as contention she consoled herself, perhaps Sally who had some pride after all would have too much to permit Jonathan to know how contemptuous and how humbled she had been. Yes, surely that would be the way of it. It must be.

Rose thought comfortably. I'll get up, early, be cait take me to town with him, I'll pack for Sally, I suppose it would be rude—but she.

She slept suddenly, lying there in her light robe across the bed without neither sheet nor light blanket drawn over her, a misery before she had not been in the least drowsy yet now she slept like a child, breathing evenly, her lips just parted in a faint smile.

CHAPTER XXXII

In the next room Sally sat by the window smoking. Her eyes smarted. She wouldn't cry. She never cried except to get her own way and what good would that do now?

Yes, it's Rose, Sally, it always has been.

Idiot!

He deserved all he'd get, a stuffy little house, a stuffy little wife, babies, dobbi....

No, he didn't.

Rose wasn't stuffy. Sally lit another cigarette. Rose was — a person, observed Sally, and threw away the lighted Rose.

The lump in her throat thickened. She was very sorry for herself, began to hum the wedding march absently, for it—it did—did—

They'd do the church in arum lily and spring flowers, perhaps. Their light would stream in from the stained glass windows which her father had given in memory of his father and mother. The Bishop would officiate. Shed wear not white, but flesh pink, the colour of pale tea roses. she would carry white orchids. People in church would not appropriate and nudge each other, Sally, but she would. Phil so dark. A handsome couple.

She began to laugh a little, down in her throat, like stabbing at the air in the arctic out on the window sill, barefoot of the chair, and sit another—

I hate him, she told herself quietly, I could kill him, I never want to see him again....

She hadn't meant it, of course. It had been—Oh, Phil had been insistent, she was tired of his blazing her, he had kissed her for years, it was monotonous, unexciting, hurting, a little disgusting .....She hadn't wanted to "settle" things as he had urged, to be pinned down to a day, a date. She'd felt impatient....So she'd done a foolish thing, she'd thrown herself at another man. Well, her aim hadn't been very good, had it?

Phil wasn't so bad. She was used to Phil. If Jonathan Kimber had—it's come to town she would have married Phil ever...night.

Eventually, w.; not now!

She'd show them. She hadn't been all that. She hadn't given a snap of her fingers for Jonathan Kimber.

And he'd be sorry, he'd always believe he'd driven her to it, he'd approach himself, he'd look at Rose a hundred times in the months to come and wonder.....

Sally got to her feet. She left her room very quietly. Rose, deep in that exhausted, almost deathless sleep, heard nothing. Sally went down the stairs and rapped lightly on Phil's door. She'd say, "I've changed my mind....but it must be now. Let's drive there, run for their money, let's give this town something to talk about....

Phil was unresponsive. She waited for him to open the door. In the name of the town, downstairs, the Gretna Green of New York. It wouldn't take ten minutes to dress, to pack a bag.... The point was moored at the Island pier. Phil's friends were on the neighboring islands. He mustn't stop for anything. He could buy what he wanted....If they started now, within half an hour and drove like mad—Sally got no answer. She could be there by early morning....they could even be back by night if they pressed their luck, saying "Well, we fooled you, we're married...."

Jonathan, waking early, lay a moment frowning at his surroundings. His first conscious thought had been that something disagreeable had happened. Then he was ill? Oh, now he remembered. He shook his head as if to dispel it. Mid-summer mush. Rain and a grayed sky. Sally would laugh at him when next he saw her, as if nothing had been said. As if nothing had happened....

He would be who would feel a fool.

He slumped out of bed, showered, shaved, dressed. He hoped the noise of the running water had not awakened Rose. He threw the contents of the old grip and with it in his hand went cautiously downstairs. Rose was in the dining room, the room a small figure rose to confront him. "Jim, he's gone, Sally.

But it wasn't Sally.

Rose said, and indicated the suitcase beside her. "I'm driving up with you, Jon." "Well, for heaven's sake!" he exclaimed hopelessly.

"I've left a note for Sally. She won't think I've run away, knowing that she knew how little Sally would mind. On the contrary. "I thought you'd like the fastest way, so why wait.....Or won't you take me?"

"I'd be delighted," said Jonathan quite formally. For no reason at all they looked at each another and laughed. The complexion they opened the big front door and crept out, across the lawn and down the path to the landing pier. Jonathan carrying the bags.

"It looks like an elopement," he said then and then paused furiously. But Jonathan wasn't listening. He said, puzzled, "The boat's gone. I was sure it was here last night. In fact I made certain that it was."

They looked at one another in astonishment. There was the mast plainly moored across the water. "Well, I'll be hanged," commented Jonathan, annoyed. "I can't be expected to swim for it. Rose, I wonder if we can rouse anyone."

He cupped his hands to his mouth and shouted. They were far enough distant from the house not to make anyone there. Presently by one of the men thrust a tousled head from the upstairs boat house window. Several of the men were in summer. Jonathan made explanatory gestures and the head vanished. A few minutes later the man, blue dungarees pulled over his underwear and with bare feet thrust into old shoes, came running from the boat house and jumped into the boat.

While he was rowing them across Jonathan said to Rose, "I thought that boat was on the island side, last night." Rose said, I, Doc, and Gladys left, figure I was there myself before I turned in. I had the canoe and the outboard at the boat house, giving them a going over, as you might say. But the punt was cooler, and I thought I'd take it. I should be left there, she said you were going to bed, and would row yourself over."

Jonathan said, quite Jonathan, "one of life's little mysteries, I suppose."

Presently he and Rose were in the car with the suit cases thrown in the back. It was an exquisite morning, pale gold, deep blue. The dead were green as spring everywhere now and then where a lovely maple flamed against the pines and fir trees. Crows were noisy above the field stubble on their left and toward the right, long field and fence and strips of wood and the chasms of gullies, the river lying placid smooth as blue glass. The air was still and cool, not yet warmed by the sun. They could hear a train whistle in Canada. A farm dog was on his mettle, stabbing at the arctic out on the window sill, barefoot of the chair, and sit another—

I hate him, she told herself quietly, I could kill him, I never want to see him again....

She hadn't meant it, of course. It had been—Oh, Phil had been insistent, she was tired of his blazing her, he had kissed her for years, it was monotonous, unexciting, hurting, a little disgusting .....She hadn't wanted to "settle" things as he had urged, to be pinned down to a day, a date. "It looks like an elopement," he said then and then paused furiously. But Jonathan wasn't listening. He said, puzzled, "The boat's gone. I was sure it was here last night. In fact I made certain that it was."

They looked at one another in astonishment. There was the mast plainly moored across the water. "Well, I'll be hanged," commented Jonathan, annoyed. "I can't be expected to swim for it. Rose, I wonder if we can rouse anyone."

He cupped his hands to his mouth and shouted. They were far enough distant from the house not to make anyone there. Presently by one of the men thrust a tousled head from the upstairs boat house window. Several of the men were in summer. Jonathan made explanatory gestures and the head vanished. A few minutes later the man, blue dungarees pulled over his underwear and with bare feet thrust into old shoes, came running from the boat house and jumped into the boat.

While he was rowing them across Jonathan said to Rose, "I thought that boat was on the island side, last night." Rose said, I, Doc, and Gladys left, figure I was there myself before I turned in. I had the canoe and the outboard at the boat house, giving them a going over, as you might say. But the punt was cooler, and I thought I'd take it. I should be left there, she said you were going to bed, and would row yourself over."

Jonathan said Jonathan, "one of life's little mysteries, I suppose."

Presently he and Rose were in the car with the suit cases thrown in the back. It was an exquisite morning, pale gold, deep blue. The dead were green as spring everywhere now and then where a lovely maple flamed against the pines and fir trees. Crows were noisy above the field stubble on their left and toward the right, long field and fence and strips of wood and the chasms of gullies, the river lying placid smooth as blue glass. The air was still and cool, not yet warmed by the sun. They could hear a train whistle in Canada. A farm dog was on his mettle, stabbing at the arctic out on the window sill, barefoot of the chair, and sit another—

Smoke rose from chimneys, and the road wound ahead of them, narrow, and rutted. Once they stopped at a cattle crossing and waited until the cows crossed the road, slow moving, implacable, heavy with great unattended udders, a scent of hay, of warm milk of the fragrant about them.

They had crossed, the gates were up again. The car had forged ahead. Rose said, "Don't let hurry. In such a marvelous day....."

"Aren't you hungry?"

"Terribly, but that doesn't matter. Breima will give us coffee, won't she? She'll growl like anything when she sees me, but she'll feed me," said Rose serenely.

"Oh....the air, it smells like nothing on earth!"

"Barnyard," observed Jonathan.

"Unreasonable creature.....I can hardly believe that school will soon open...and the first thing we know it will be autumn and then winter. ...Time begins to go a little too fast to suit me."

He asked idly, "Larry Dexter returning?"

"Yes....We got him into the senior class by hook or crook—frankly I don't see how he did it. His work was far too poor, probably, thanks to the tutoring. I don't see how he'll graduate next year, unless there's a new leaf," she said soberly.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Pair of Shoes

By J. Campbell Haywood

It was dark. A night fog was settling over the pathways through which Mr. Robert Whipple was stumbling. He was not conscious of nerves, already frayed by a strenuous day, but of other considerations. Behind him about twenty paces was the "clip clop" of a pair of hard-soled shoes upon the asphalt. At first he had thought it a child on clogs. But he had looked back and seen through the murk a man who loomed large and stomped along in shoes clearly too big for him. The heel hit. The sole "slip clop, slip clop'd."

Mr. Whipple increased his pace. No use. He could not distance the "slip clop" of the man behind.

"Come out of that — you," he called; "what are you following me for?"

The "slip clop" drew closer. "Is all right, Mr. Whipple," said a quiet husky voice. "I had no intention of annoying you or of frightening you."

"Frightening me!" Mr. Whipple sputtered. "What d'ye want? You know me, eh?"

"Yes, sir. I've seen you many times. I want to get out of these shoes." The man pulled at his feet. "Old Mr. Whipple. Heavy work—his shoes. Twelves at least. 'I'll be on my uppers, actually, not figuratively, and—and a woman gave me these. I—I can't wear them."

The man's husky voice broke. Mr. Whipple stood aghast. This was a new one on him. He was used to the tricks of panhandlers. But this was something different. He had no doubt he was to be touched. Usually it was a "cup of cawfee." He studied the man. Respectable clothes. No collar. Shirt clean. Face half hidden below the brim of an old fedora. Black stubble. The white teeth puzzled him. And the husky but cultivated voice.

"What's your trouble? Booze?" he asked roughly.

"No, sir I don't expect you to believe me but I haven't had a drink in seven years."

"Hey! Well—here's fifty cents. Go get yourself a meal and don't panhandle in the park. You might get run in." Mr. Whipple held out his coin. He was going to move on. But the man pushed his hand aside.

"I don't want your money. And I'm not a panhandler, unless my wanting you to help me rid myself of these wretched shoes makes me one."

"How the devil can I help you?" Mr. Whipple asked irritably. He was too interested, too curious about the man, to move on. "You don't expect me to take you to a bootshop to be fitted to your feet?"

"Hardly, sir. You live over in that apartment house?" The man pointed to a building where lights shimmered dimly through the fog. "I know that. Seen you often coming in and going out, sir. I thought maybe if I went home with you you might be willing to throw me a pair of your old shoes out of the window. You do sometimes help people, don't you?" The irony of the last sentence was lost on Mr. Whipple. There was a sardonic grin on the man's face that pushed him.

"At right," he said gruffly, "come along."

"I'll follow you, sir."

"No you won't. Walk beside me or I'll not take you home. Not for a good deal would Mr. Whipple have the "slip clop" behind him again. The man brightened perceptibly. Mr. Whipple tried to draw him out as they went along, but it was useless. He had one answer, "It would not interest you, sir," politely and firmly spoken. He clearly saw the difference between interest and curiosity, which in one of his breed added to Mr. Whipple's puzzlement.

Mr. Whipple's apartment was on the second floor front. It was lighted. He asked the man to go up with him. "No, sir, thank you. I will wait here." He leaned against the basement railing. Mr. Whipple was inclined to insist but thought better of it. Self-respecting chap, he thought. Didn't want to be seen in the bright light. Panhandlers rarely do.

He went up, took off his shoes and opened the door. "Here you are. Catch!" The man thanked him and Mr. Whipple heard him "slip clop" down the stairs. He waited.

The next morning he received by special messenger a package. In it were his own shoes and a brief typewritten note.

"Dear Mr. Whipple. You have the reputation downtown of being a hard man. I took pleasure in defending you with some mutual friends and betting a hundred dollars you would give the shoes off your feet if properly approached. You did. Thank you."

"PAN HANDLER."

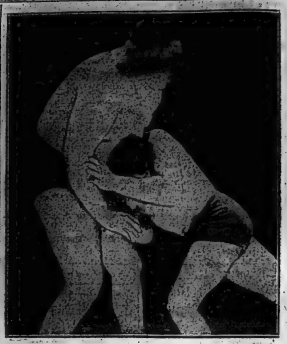
TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

As the cannibal pygmies watched tensely, Whiz went about her task of cold-blooded murder with ultimate deliberation, savoring each moment of her triumph. From the belt of one of the warriors she drew a long knife and advanced slowly toward her helpless victim.

Meanwhile, Old Timer, trudging through the forest, heard voices, muffled and indistinct, from the black void ahead. His heart beat faster. He advanced more cautiously, until he came to the palisade of Robega's village. Between the loose poles he watched the scene.



The dancing warriors did not interest him. He was looking for Kali Bwana. Perhaps she was hidden here in a hut. While the pygmy warriors danced, he could catch the little people, so now Old Timer slashed the rope that held the gates.

Then there was a little break in the circle of pygmies, and through that opening he beheld a sight that turned him cold with horror. Kali Bwana lay there, bound hand and foot. Beside her kneel a savage looking devil-woman with a long knife poised to strike!

DER MAXIE DECIDES TO DO HIS OWN TALKING

With a Braddock-Louis non-title bout being mooted for Atlantic City during the winter, Max Schmeling, German heavyweight challenger, has sailed from Germany to personally defend his right to a title fight before the New York boxing commission. Since Max declared he would not name anyone to speak for him—not even his erstwhile friend and manager, Joe Jacobs, Cauliflower Row sees a possible rift between the Teuton and his talkative Joseph. Here they are in a congenial pose with Joe whispering many words of advice in Der Maxie's ear.

WHERE A GOOD BUTT COMES IN HANDY

When artists of the bone-mending business get together anything and everything is likely to happen! Here we see Dean Detton, oldtimer to the heavyweight wrestling title, hoisting Big Chief Sanooke in the midsection. The "champ", who tipped the scales at 305 pounds, soon softened up the 236-pound North Carolina Cherokee and finally finished him off with a flying leap, after 14 minutes and 20 seconds of wrestling. The bout was held in New York.

OTTAWA-SARNIA HUSKIES GROOM FOR EASTERN CANADA GRID CHAMPIONSHIP

Slated to tangle on Saturday with eastern Canada's football championship as the prize those huskies will help stage a battle of beef and brawn that will probably produce one of the stiffest games of straight football seen in the east for many a moon. Ottawa Rough Riders, champions of the Big Four, have played plenty of two bucks and a kick football to win their title, and Sarnia Imperials, for the sixth year O.R.F.U. monarchs, can match them in hard-plugging ability. It should be a classic when big Ormond Beach (LEFT), Ottawa halfback, crashes into the Rider line that features heavy blockers and plungers like Bunny Wadsworth (BOTTOM CENTRE) and Co., but both teams have plenty of grid strategy to fall back on, also as witness "Curly" Moynahan (TOP CENTRE), Rider snag, and Rush, "Bummer" Stirling (RIGHT), one of the smartest kickers, passers and plungers in the east and a power on the Sarnia half line.

TRADES AND SALES IN BIG LEAGUE MAIL

Dizzy Dean

Charlie Gelbert

Virgil Davis

The baseball world is again humming with trades and sales. At the minor league meeting in Montreal Cincinnati Reds bought Infielder Charlie Gelbert and Catcher Virgil Davis from St. Louis Cardinals in a straight cash transaction. Jerome "Dizzy" Dean's expected move to the Cincinnati Reds is reportedly off. Rumors now have it that he will be sold to either New York Giants or Pittsburgh Pirates.

BURLEIGH GRIMES STARTS HIS WORRYING

As manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, Burleigh Grimes, former National League spitball pitcher, has plenty of things to worry about. During the 1936 season the Dodgers sank to the league cellar. Grimes has been signed as manager for one year, and it will be his job to secure a winning line-up from the Daffiness boys. Burleigh Grimes is seen here in a pensive mood, and no doubt the Dodgers are on his mind.

SCHRINER OF AMERICANS AND METZ OF TORONTO LEAD HOCKEY SCORERS

The outstanding rookie of a couple of seasons back is still leading National Hockey League players in scoring honors. He is Dave "Sweeney" Schriner, high-scoring forward of the star-spangled New York Americans. In official scoring records, announced by N.H.L. headquarters, Schriner again is leading the league with 11 points to his credit. Close on his heels is Nick Metz, speedy left winger of Toronto Maple Leafs, who is only one point down with 10. Nick was well up with the leaders last season until he suffered a groin injury when he collided with Ching Johnson during a game against New York Rangers.

READY TO CATCH PUCKS FOR CANADIENS

Set to take any proffered puck, even if it is headed for the corner of his nets is Willie Cude, brilliant little Welsh goal-keeper for the reinforcated Canadiens of Montreal. Canucks didn't realize Wilfred's value until he starred with Detroit Red Wings while out on loan, but they were not long in snapping him up afterwards. With a better defence this year than last, Wilf, at least, gets time to straighten his pads once in a while now.

NINE OUT OF TWELVE PLAYERS, AND HALF THE REFEREES, COMBINE ON THE PLAY

Three-quarters of the active player strength of both line-ups and one of the two referees are crowded into this picture, showing Toronto Maple Leafs ganging the nets of Montreal Canadiens in an N.H.L. game with the Redskins trying frantically to hold them out. Goaltender Wilfie Cude is caught in a praying attitude at the edge of the goal crease while one of his henchmen backs him up in the goal mouth. The Toronto player on one knee and carrying No. 8 on his sweater is Harvey Jackson, Leaf left winger. Nine pucksters are busy keeping their eyes on the rubber—or the other fellow—here with only Toronto's goalie, Brode, and two others out of it. And at least one of these was in the penalty coop!

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1936

THE KING HAS YET TO MAKE HIS DECISION

Pope Pius Much Improved in Health, Report from Vatican States

His Majesty is Afforded Full Time to Decide Baldwin Tells Commons

Hon. Winston Churchill Again Asks Question And Causes Scenes of Interest in Commons Today

RISK IN PROLONGATION OF SUSPENSE

His Majesty Given Advice Only on Question of Morganatic Marriage British Commons is Told

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 7.—(CP Cable)—The King has still to decide whether he will marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

Prime Minister Baldwin, reading from a typewritten statement, told the House of Commons this afternoon with the exception of the question of morganatic marriage, no advice has been tendered by the government to His Majesty, with whom all my conversations have been strictly personal and informal."

He continued: "These matters were not raised first by the government but by His Majesty himself in conversation with me some weeks ago when he first informed me of his intention to marry Mrs. Simpson whenever she should be free."

Mrs. Simpson's divorce decree from Ernest Aldrich Simpson would become final, with the approval of the King's proctor, on April 27, 1937).

The Question of Future Advice

"The subject has therefore been for some time in the King's mind and as soon as His Majesty has arrived at the conclusion as to the course he desires to take, he will no doubt communicate to the governments in this country and the Dominions."

"It will then be for those governments to decide what advice, if any, they would feel it their duty to tender him in the light of his conclusion.

"I cannot conclude this statement without expressing —what the whole House feels—our deep, respectful sympathy with His Majesty at this time."

He said: "In considering this whole matter it has always been and remains the earnest desire of the government to afford His Majesty the fullest opportunity of weighing the decision which involves so directly his own future happiness and the interests of all his subjects.

Risk in Prolongation

"At the same time they cannot but be aware that any considerable prolongation of the present state of suspense and uncertainty would involve the risk of graver injury to the national and imperial interests,—and indeed no one is more insistent upon this aspect of the situation than His Majesty," the Prime Minister continued.

When the King has arrived at a conclusion as to what he will do, said Baldwin, "he will no doubt communicate it to the government in this country and the Dominions."

House is Packed

A packed and anxious house hung on the Prime Minister's words. The peers filled their gallery. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, sat with the other Dominion High Commissioners. In the corner of the ladies gallery sat Mrs. Baldwin, an observant witness.

As he entered the house half-way through the question hour, Baldwin was cheered from both sides.

But he had little information to give. Everybody wondered whether the Prime Minister would be able to give the King's decision. But the King's final decision Baldwin was unable to give.

When Baldwin said the government "cannot but be aware that any considerable prolongation of the present state of suspense and uncertainty would involve the risk of the gravest injury to the national and imperial interests" he was interrupted by cheers.

Churchill Figures in Scene

Then followed a remarkable scene with Winston Churchill as the central figure in a passing storm and E. A. Fitzroy, Speaker of the House, rising to restore order.

Churchill began with the same phrase he has used on two previous occasions in the House. "May I ask," he said, "that no irrevocable step will be taken—." He was interrupted here by shouts of "sit down", "shame" and "oh, oh" and also cheers. He continued "that no irrevocable step will be taken before the House has received a full statement, not only on the personal but also on the constitutional issues involved.

"May I ask the Right Honorable gentleman to bear in mind that this issue affects not only the personal occupant of the throne—." Again Churchill was interrupted. "Speech, speech," members shouted in dissent. They apparently thought Churchill, instead of asking a question, was making a speech.

"Sit down," the cry was repeated from the back benches.

Churchill endeavored to proceed but loud shouts of "speech, speech, order, order," drowned him out.

MRS. W. SIMPSON MAKES NO PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

Story From Cannes, France, Says No Preparations For Any Other Guest

MRS. SIMPSON INDOORS

Speaks Through Close Associate to Press

Cannes, France, Dec. 7 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson limited to seclusion at the Villa Lou Viei, indefinitely, she said today through an intermediary.

She has made no plans for any kind of a trip or any change of residence from the villa or her New York friends, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, she let it be known.

The American woman whose friendship with King Edward precipitated a constitutional crisis spoke through a close associate from the garden of the villa where she arrived during the weekend.

Despite the barrier thrown up about the villa, it was stated there were no preparations for the arrival of the king or any other person. A guard said: "As far as I know I'm not expecting any other guest. At least there are no signs of any preparation."

Mrs. Simpson had not gone outdoors. There were rumors—not confirmed—that she even had talked by telephone to Prime Minister Baldwin.

POPE PIUS XI WINNING FIGHT

Stayed in Bed But Irritated at Restraint by Physicians

Vatican City, Dec. 7 (AP)—Pope Pius XI reluctantly curbed his activities today as he appeared to be slowly winning his fight against partial paralysis of the legs.

The Pontiff finally shed under the repeated urgings of his physicians but protates said the 79-year-old Pontiff was irritated at the restraint.

A verbal bulletin issued during the morning after a visit by Dr. Amintu Milani said the Holy Father's condition was "satisfactory."

"His Holiness passed a tranquil night, reposing well," the bulletin said. "The doctor who visited him this morning found his condition satisfactory."

Vatican prelates said the Pope would be unable to receive the Italian specialists, Father Agostino Gemelli, who was called for consultation Saturday.

It was reported, however, Father Gemelli would be received late yesterday but, perhaps, was unable to make a diagnosis Saturday.

His doctors insisted quiet was necessary for the Pope's recovery and his legs might have a chance to readjust itself.

Some 300,000,000 Catholics of the world prayed for his recovery during services as special effort of the week.

The Holy Father had insisted he be allowed to take part in the Vatican services for the beginning of Advent today and the ceremony was prepared as if he were to be present.

TWO CARS STOLEN BOTH RECOVERED

Police Believe Cars Taken For Purpose of "Joy Ride"

Two automobiles, that had been stolen in Belleville over the week end, were reported recovered early today, local police announced at noon. While attending Divine Service last evening, Mr. F. Daley, 78 East Moira Street, left his automobile parked on Church Street. Upon his return the vehicle was found missing. The theft later was reported to the police.

Early today, while proceeding to school, a number of scholars saw an automobile abandoned on the third concession of Thurlow. Police authorities were immediately contacted and after verifying the license plate numbers, the automobile was identified as being the property of Mr. Daley.

On Saturday G. E. Jordan, Maynard, reported the loss of his sedan to local police. The vehicle had been parked on Pinnacle Street. Early yesterday the car was found abandoned on Hillside Street. Joyriders are suspected as being responsible for both thefts. Mr. Jordan was notified of the recovery at noon today.

Kingston police reported the theft of a 1936 model Plymouth sedan, stolen from that city last night. The vehicle carried Ontario license plates number AT-190. Twenty transients slept in the cell block at the police station over the week end, from Saturday night and seven last night.

Despite the slumpy and hazardous conditions of the adjacent highways, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine reported "no major or serious accidents" on the local highway over the week end.

BAN BY CHURCH MAY BE SEQUEL

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP)—Bishop Douglas Stuart of the Chicago Episcopal Diocese declares the Anglican Church will have "no alternative" but to place King Edward under ban if he "breaks the laws of the church by marrying a divorced woman."

"I know the Archbishop of Canterbury personally as a courteous, kindly, noble gentleman and his attitude toward King Edward that of a father," said the Chicago churchman. "But the Archbishop is a firm man and is pledged to support the church.

"Were Edward to be crowned and then marry Mrs. Simpson, the Archbishop would be compelled to refuse them both communion, and that would be a tremendous crisis in a country where Church and State are so intertwined.

"Even if Edward abdicates to marry Mrs. Simpson, he will lose communion."

First Time a Premier of Province Has Visited Marlbank

G. JORDAN CHAIRMAN

Marlbank, Ont., Dec. 7.—Hastings East provincial by-election campaigning in full swing for the final two days today with no let-up in the pace by either Liberal backing Dr. Harold Roger, Deseronto, or Conservative candidate Dr. Harold Welsh, Madoc.

Voting Wednesday is expected to be a record number out to the polls. Never before has this prosperous dairying rural district seen such interest in campaigning. Not only a schoolhouse or hamlet in this 130-mile-long riding, which has not been visited by Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader.

Advance poll for railwaymen, sailors and commercial travellers opened today at eight a.m.

Speaks at Marlbank

Saturday night, when Premier Hepburn spoke at Marlbank, first Ontario premier to visit the hamlet Mr. Rowe left the riding for the week end but addressed an appeal to it and Ontario generally over the air.

At Marlbank, Premier Hepburn said, "the issue seems to narrow down to this: whether the government has unjustly charged Hastings with a fraud expenditure and to the school question."

The $150,000 bill presented to Hastings for drainage work on No. 7 highway done in 1934 was a direct result of Mr. Henry government's effort to buy its way back to office," said Premier Hepburn Saturday. The incoming government had no power to relieve Hastings of the bill but had never agreed to do so.

Since the day of his first budget, April 1, 1935, Ontario's debt has been reduced from 674 millions to 671 millions now, claimed Premier Hepburn.

"Where Mr. Rowe is wrong in claiming we increased the debt is that we took office July 11, 1934, and the fiscal year did not end until

Say Mrs. Simpson From Line of Kings

London, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Sunday Chronicle says students of history declare Mrs. Wallis Simpson is descended from the kings of the Isle of Man, the small island in the Irish Sea.

The newspaper says students assert old records show in the 14th, 15th and 16th centuries the head of the House of Montague, from which some persons say Mrs. Simpson is descended, married Alfrica, daughter of the King of Man, and that her descendants reigned for 56 years on the island.

PRESS IN CANADA IS GIVEN PRAISE

London Times Says Canadian Attitude is Commendable

London, Dec. 7 (CP)—The Times today praised the attitude of Canadian newspapers and the Canadian government in events leading up to the constitutional crisis between the king and the cabinet.

"The Canadian people more than any other in the empire," said a Times editorial, "have been exposed for many months to a flood of scandalous suggestion pouring across the American frontier. Despite the severe provocation, their own press has shown the same honorable reluctance as the rest of the empire to drag down the private life into the dust of controversy until this last week, when events outside their control made publicity unavoidable.

"With no less self-suppression, their government has been content to express no opinion until at His Majesty's own insistance they were consulted."

After quoting the statement issued last Friday at Ottawa by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, the Times adds: "When the advice of the Canadian government was sought, it was given in the same sense as that of the rest of the empire. Press evidence shows that th weight of opinion among Canadians is solidly behind their rulers.

Foresee Second Crisis

The Havas News Agency says the possibility of a second constitutional crisis provoked by the Irish Free State's possible refusal to recognize a new sovereign if King Edward abdicates was considered in political Circles here.

If President Eamon de Valera refuses to place before the Free State parliament a law modifying the Act of Succession, King Edward would in effect remain king of the Free State there. The assembly of all the Dominions is necessary before the law of succession can be changed.

Fears Republican Party To Arise.

Toulouse, France, Dec. 7 (AP)—Frederic Cocks, Labor member of the British House of Commons, declared a Republic party would arise in England if King Edward should abdicate. He charged "one of the reasons for which (Prime Minister) Baldwin wishes to make the king abdicate is because of the latter's democratic spirit and because he feels it is a sympathy for workers still unemployed."

Declaring the king should have the right to marry whomever he pleased, "exactly like any other of his subjects," Cocks stated it "is time to end that old, detestable custom of obliging a sovereign to marry without love".

Hollywood, Dec. 7 (AP)— The Earl of Warwick, under contract as an actor at a film studio here, said today he has instructed his solicitors in London to file suit for divorce against his wife, the Countess of Warwick.

49 P. C. of Men Favored Marriage

London, Dec. 7 (AP)—The London News-Chronicle made an analysis today of letters that poured in over the week-end on the subject of King Edward's affair. Mr. Simpson and found:

49 per cent of the men favored the projected marriage.

29 per cent of the men opposed it.

21 per cent of the women writers favored the match.

Nine per cent of the women were against it.

The analysis ignored all letters which did not give a definite opinion.

YEAR IN JAIL FOR G. ASSELTINE

Gordon Asseltine, of this city, pleaded guilty to the breaking and entering of the premises of the Belleville Construction Company's warehouse, Bayside Park, early, when he appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in today's local police court. Asseltine's guilty plea followed a lengthy questions for similar offences prompted by the recent wave of thefts recorded in the Ontario Reformatory. Asseltine strenuously objected, contending he has recently obtained employment and is now living honestly.

The charge was laid against the accused on June 10th last. Asseltine has successfully evaded arrest until late last week when he was apprehended by Belleville Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien, who investigated, was charged in the writing on bees prior to the passing of sentence.

On June 10th last I was called to Rawdon Township, where the manager of the Belleville Construction Company informed me a number of car batteries, tires and other automobile accessories had been stolen. Later we found these articles cached in a nearby thicket, and also found a truck nearby, that belonged to the accused. He did not return for his truck and we arrested it," stated the witness. Asseltine pleaded guilty to the charge.

"This man has a lengthy record. He has been convicted seven times for theft and robbery in the last few years," added H. J. Donnan, K. C., local Crown Attorney.

"Your previous jail terms appear to have not taught you a lesson. I'll give you 18 months in the reformatory and, however," concluded His Worship.

SUPERLATIVELY FINE QUALITIES OF KING PRAISED

Viscount Rothermere Publishes Letter on Constitutional Crisis

NO TEXTBOOK TEST

Situation Demands, He Says, Sympathetic Consideration

London, Dec. 7 (CP) — Viscount Rothermere published a letter today in the Daily Mail asking if Great Britain "can afford to lose a sovereign of such superlatively splendid qualities."

The matter should not be decided by legal text books, he wrote; it needed all-round human sympathetic consideration.

The newspaper, peer, followed tonight with a letter in the Evening News, urging a morganatic marriage between the king and Mrs. Ernest Simpson. He explained that while as a man the king would be married, he would remain single as monarch.

It would be simple to legalize a morganatic marriage," he wrote. "It would be difficult and dangerous to legalize an adulteration.

"One short act passed through the British and Dominion parliaments would make this legal." He predicted they would pass such an act with a huge majority.

He added there had never been a suggestion that Mrs. Simpson become queen from any quarter whatsoever. She had no desire to be made a member of the Royal Family or to appear on ceremonial occasions

"If it's right and reasonable for any subject to make Edward's choice, how should it be inadmissible for the king?

"In a word, the affair means that Britain's divorce chickens has come home to roost with a vengeance. If they are honest with themselves, they will see that Britain's the pain and blinding vexation its consequence is causing her now."

Hon. Earl Rowe Reviews School Question and Hydro Contracts in Radio Broadcast

Condemns Action of Gov't. in Passing Amendment to Assessment Act

DEFENDS CONTRACTS

The following address on the East Hastings by-election was delivered by Hon. Earl Rowe, K.C., Ontario provincial-wide radio hookup from Toronto on Saturday evening:

Ladies and Gentlemen:

"In view of the tremendous interest that the citizens of Ontario are taking in the East Hastings by-election, I take this opportunity of speaking to the people of the Province of Ontario, and particularly to the electors of that fine riding of East Hastings.

May I at the outset, express my deepest regrets on the death of the late member for East Hastings, the very warm personal friend of mine, in public life, while we may differ on matters of political persuasion, he is a very enviable reputation to secure—that of being loved, honoured and respected—not only by your political friends, but also by your political opponents. The late member will enjoyed that enviable reputation, and I extend to the citizens of East Hastings, and in particular Mrs. Hill and members of the family my sincere sympathy on the occasion of Mr. Hill's death such a short time ago.

Since the hurried proclamation for the election was issued to fill the vacancy created by the death of the late Whip of the Conservative Party there has been a flood of literature, one of the most vigorous campaigns in the political history of Canada, since Confederation.

The Honourable the Premier, assisted by his Cabinet, and a large number of the Liberal members of the Legislature, have been out all over the land on the highways and down the by-ways of Ontario, in a strenuous effort to save the prestige, of a now floundering government.

Characterizing the campaign, has been the effort of the government, to divert the attention of the issues which were voted upon in the general election of 1934—rather than to meet the issues which confront the people to-day. The records of governments of to-day are the real test of interest the electors of East Hastings, so much so does the record of a government of the day, which now threatens to hold office for two years more, independent of public sentiment.

Review of Gov't. Record

A review of the record of the present government, will be found a record of conspicuous for its unfulfilled promises, as it is, for its unauthorized expenditures. Before dealing with the boulevard of broken pledges, as we now find ourselves across the trail of this reckless government—may I discuss with you, the election of East Hastings, legislation, which today stands on the Statute Books of this province, without due regard to the wishes of the people as a whole.

I refer more particularly to the Amendment to the Assessment Act passed by the present government, which gives a mandate from the electors. Not only has a mandate for this legislation been secured from the people of this province, but had a free discussion been given to it, even the members of the Ontario legislature themselves, would never have passed this Act.

The recent Amendment to the Assessment Act, is the most objectionable piece of legislation, ever introduced into the statute books of Ontario.

Clumsily drafted, because it confuses even the Minister of Municipal affairs, and has given rise to legal interpretations as there are lawyers in the city of Toronto.

Unfair, because it discriminates on the Public or Common School system of education, and without the authority of the electors—who, independent of class, race, or creed, are the ultimate supporters of the school system.

Dangerous, because it involves the very security upon which minority rights are based—when it changes the very principle upon which these minority rights were established.

Racial Prejudices Kindled

Not only is the principle of this legislation wrong, but the underhanded methods of its introduction into the realm of politics—warning the conscientious and ever-thinking citizen of this province—irrespective of their religion or their politics. For almost a quarter of a century, the same latent racial and religious differences and kindled racial prejudices among our pioneer forefathers, have been sown for a unfair purpose.

The pages of history show that after twenty years of bitter controversy, Separate Schools were established in Ontario, as they commonly known as the settlement of 1863—a settlement confirmed without a majority of the elected representatives of Upper Canada. These rights were later confirmed by the Act of Confederation.

Notwithstanding the fact, that Ontario has never voted in favour of Separate Schools,—yet, for over seventy years the great majority of Public School supporters, have loyally respected the terms of the Act of Settlement.

This Act, which provided for Separate Schools in Ontario, also provided the right of those Separate Schools so established, to share in the funds annually granted from the composite of 1863. As example of such grants, I refer to the Grant Schools in existence at that time:

Grand Trunk Railway; Northern Railway; Great Western Railway; Consumers Gas Company; Toronto Railway Company.

Thus we see that the very principle which the Hepburn Government has recently thrown into politics in Ontario, was settled by our fathers—in 1863—when the establishment and maintenance of Separate Schools was provided, for those who wished to exercise these privileges beyond the Common Schools system. Our forefathers point out that one of the important principles of the British constitution, at that time was the optional privileges provided. Thoughtful Canadians claimed that the right of religious liberty is as much a part of the genius of British law as civil liberty. Therefore, it is of vital importance that no believer: of one religious faith, should contribute by taxation to support the teachings of another religion.

Violates Fundamental Principle.

The Hepburn government amendment to the Assessment Act violates this fundamental principle, when it accords a large number of public schools doing business in Ontario, to divide their taxes between public and separate schools in accordance with the individual assessment of the religious loyalty in which they may be located.

Has this legislation a company owned entirely by public school supporters, as in the case of Canadian Canners of the company, comes under Section 33(b) of this Act—may find themselves in the position, where their company will go towards the support of Roman Catholic separate schools;—the amount being determined by the ratio, the individual public school supporters bear to the individual separate school supporters.

The Honourable Mr. Hepburn has not only violated the principle, but the fact this Act may or may not have on the public school system of this province. In the House of Commons Mr. Hepburn as the man who introduced this legislation, by amendment through the legislature of this province—now to the people of Ontario for endorsation, has made no reference to education on the statutes without adequate consideration of its effects.

Examples Cited.

However, again I find that the statement of the Honourable Premier that the province is to be congratulated with true facts and in this connection I would cite the case of Corunna Township, Lambton County. In this particular township the ratio of Roman Catholic separate school supporters to individual public school supporters is 38 per cent. Two contributing factors in this township are levied outside of Ontario—one of which is a Roman Catholic separate school supporters, have an assessment of two million seven hundred and forty thousand dollars. Under this present set thirty-six per cent of this assessment or over one million hundred and sixty thousand dollars would be diverted to a school, not only supporting the common or public schools—will now be diverted towards the Roman Catholic separate schools notwithstanding the fact one of the contributing factors is supported by public school supporters.

Legislation of this character, one case of individuals to support the religious teachings of another class, is, I claim, unfair, unjust, and vicious, strikes a blow at religious liberty in this province.

Star Editorial Quoted

This departs entirely from the principle which Separate Schools were first established. In an editorial appearing in the issue of Toronto Daily Star of April 9th, 1936, when it stated editorially:—

"The Star has always held this paper (The Toronto Star) considers that a system of taxation giving to a sound principle in proposing, for certain companies, a division of taxes between Public and Separate Schools. But the amendment is not of that character at the principle. The introduction of this new basis of taxation would be a step in the departure from that of the Acts of 1863 and 1867, and sets up an entirely new basis, and would open a fact—on which the taxes of some Public School supporters may be divided."

Reference of the effect upon the Public or Common School system, and the additional burden that will be imposed upon the real estate taxation upon the Public or Common School supporters, and the province—we propose immediately after the next general election to repeal this amendment to the Assessment Act, placed on the Statute Books of Ontario, without a mandate, by the Hepburn administration.

Despite these who disregard the mandate of the people of Ontario, and I still believe the silent voice of fundamentalism, will be more powerful than even the laws that are based upon them.

I believe sufficiently warm the minority of this province that if these amendments cannot be repealed, they be easily changed, as to grant concessions without a mandate from the electors. These are the principles from the electors of this province which, I claim, should not be violated, but can be rescinded by legislative action.

As a party, we will repeal this legislation immediately, so as to give fair play to the majority, and in so doing also safeguard the rights of the minority. In a democratic state no government has the right to say can be secure without the support of the majority. That, the majority—Conservative party—which I have the honour to lead proposes to re-establish.

Hydro Administration Reviewed.

Without speaking in too technical a manner, I would like to review the administration of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, since the advent of the Hepburn government.

At the first session of the present government, in 1934, there was but one statute books of this province, repudiating the contractual obligations of the Hydro Electric Power Commission. At the time that outright repudiation was committed by statute, members of the present executive council in Ontario charged, that in effect, these contracts were "iniquitous, illegal, executed under duress—and bordering on near criminality." These unwarranted and unfounded charges, I claim cannot be substantiated by fact.

While it is true that the Hydro Electric Power Commission show that the engineering department of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, and their calculations upon the annual increasing demand for power, proved exceeded by the government of that day, power be purchased in the early years of operation, need of 11.4 per cent. per annum. The contracts entered into provided for an annual increase of only 5.5 per cent. or 2.7 per cent. under the engineering department of the Hydro Electric Power Commission. Notwithstanding this conservative estimate of power, there developed between the years 1930 and 1934 a surplus of power, then developed between the years 1930 and 1934 a surplus of power, then developed between the years 1930 and 1934 a surplus of power, then

THE GAS PLANT OFFER

We understand that A. K. Walters representing the Alden-Aurora Gas Company of Buffalo, N.Y., has made a cash offer of $80,000 for the Belleville gas plant and that the special gas committee has reported favorably for the acceptance of the offer.

It is to be taken for granted that every member of the city council is desirous of reaching a decision on this question that will commend itself to the ratepayers generally and at the same time be of such nature that it will be mutually advantageous to the purchasers and the city as well.

When this question was debated last Thursday evening there seemed to be unanimity of opinion in favor of selling the plant if an offer was sufficiently attractive and the members of council seemed to be about equally divided for the acceptance and rejection of the offer.

Without going into the pros and cons of the question it is quite generally agreed that the gas plant when operated by the city in the past developed nothing but headaches for the civic purse and was a constant source of worry and responsibility to those engaged with its operation.

The Ontario Intelligencer has asked about twenty-five representative citizens their opinions on the question of selling and the replies are nearly one hundred per cent in favor of selling.

With the experience the city has had in the past with this utility it would seem to the Ontario Intelligencer the part of wisdom for the city council to consider this matter favorably unless they know where they can get a better offer from a substantial source, providing of course that the city is adequately protected in the guarantees for proper service and other business-like considerations.

DOGS JOIN POLICE FORCE

Police officers in the outlying districts of the city of Philadelphia are to be given assistance by dogs. The mayor has instructed the superintendent of police to purchase eight such animals, rightly commenting that if a patrolman who was murdered in a lonely suburb on a night patrol had had such a companion he might have been warned and his life saved.

The record of police dogs is good if they are well handled. German shepherd dogs are used for many purposes in Germany and on the Continent. As a result they have been called 'police dog' which however is true only of shepherd dogs which are trained for police duties.

A writer says on that simply to train a group of dogs for police work and then to allow any of a number of patrolment to take any of several dogs out for duty is to court failure. There must be proper co-ordination between human and canine policemen and the view is held that there is no reason why in this new world the same successful results could not be achieved as in the old. The dog has been sensed and will intensify the effectiveness of the police patrols. The courage of the dog and his tracking gifts are well known.

NATIONAL PARKS

Canada's national parks eighteen in number contain a total of 12,059 square miles.

This is the enjoyable area which is at the disposal of Canadians and their visitors.

There has just appeared the annual report of the Commissioner of National Parks, showing 771,794 visitors in the first year 1935-1936 as compared with 710,778 for the fiscal year 1934-1935. Total registrations show twenty per cent of visitors are from the United States. This is an indication of growth of interest in the national parks system.

Camping grounds remain a popular figure with motor tourists.

During the year the fire hazard was at no time unduly high. Aerial patrols were used during the season.

Conservation of wild life continues to occupy the attention of the service in the National parks. Reports show that most species are continuing to maintain their number. While the situation with regard to predatory animals is well in hand, though cougars and coyotes are causing damage to wild life. Appropriate measures were taken to deal with the situation.

Appropriations totalled $4,021,798.93 for the fiscal year 1935-1936. In this is included work on a relief basis for single homeless men.

Tourists showed a tendency to remain for longer periods in the parks, and auto bungalow camps were much in demand along with public camp grounds.

The report is illustrated with scenes of interest concerning the National Parks.

The National Parks Service continued the work of restoring and marking historic sites and the commemoration of leading persons and events connected with the early history of Canada. The Service is advised on this phase of its work by the Historic Sites and Monuments Boards of Canada. In preservation progress was marked at the Fortress of Louisbourg, N.S., in connection with the historic site, so well known in Canadian history.

CARIBBEAN LURE

A vision haunts me night and day
Through scanty sun and solemn snow,—
My Carib island far away
In dawns that allamanda glow.
And every wind that murmuring swells
Brings music of pomegranate bells
And pipes that stephanotis blow.

I know my island waits for me
Where warm the tides of azure run,
Gowned in her glimmering greenery;
And I shall strive till life be done
To feel upon my breast again
The silver surf of her thin
The golden scrape of sun.

BELLEVILLE IS PROUD OF ITS HISTORY, of its leading citizens who contributed to the history of Belleville and Canada. Many have passed on to join the Great Majority Yonder. Few memorials exist of the builders of Belleville except in the minds and memories of those who came after, which is perhaps as it should be—only the memory of what they did.

Belleville gave a Premier to Canada, Rt. Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, and gave Sir Gilbert Parker to literature and the Mother of Parliaments. His red on the hill close to the waters of Quinte. The only memorial Belleville boasts of these two noted men are in the cemetery—one who occupied the highest office in Canada at a moment in Canada's history and acquitted himself in with honor and credit to his country. The other sat in the British Parliament and painted pen pictures of Canada which live long and attracted much valuable and world wide attention to Canada. Thousands motorists fro mthe United States pass through Belleville every summer and those who know not why there is nothing to tell the stranger within our gates that here lived two such worthy men as those mentioned who meant so much to Canada and the world. Leading newspapers of the Dominion have also expressed wonder that this should be so.

UNITED STATES MARINES ARE THE COCKY LOT. Why they actually claim that one marine can lick ten soldiers with one hand and with both hands can lick ten soldiers and fifteen sailors. Hence it is inexplicable that a youth from North Carolina in New York City Thanksgiving Day should remark to four joyous marines on shore leave that he could lick the quartette single handed. They were all put together in the hospital and realized that he might live again with care he was heard to remark something that sounded like "Gosh durn I musta taken in too much territory."

Opinions on Proposed Sale of the Gas Plant

The question: "ARE YOU IN FAVOR OF THE SALE OF THE GAS PLANT?" was submitted to a number of citizens over the week by an Intelligencer reporter. Answers were the following:

L. E. McLean, Manager American Hardware Company:

"By all means, sell it. It's no asset to the city, and perhaps never will be. That plant doesn't compete with the Hydro with rates as they are at present. There's not enough gas sold in Belleville to make it pay."

W. E. Rowe, General Manager, Stovers-Warner Alemite:

"Sell it, but sell it conditionally, and have a rider to the effect that the bill of sale that if at any time the plant refuses to function that the city be permitted to buy it back at a nominal price. If the plant is sold and the repairs are made as agreed upon, which will include the laying of new mains and so forth, then many of our unemployed would be absorbed in the work. If the plant refuses to meet competitive prices from, say the Hydro, then the city should also be protected by a clause in the sale."

Mackenzie Robertson:

"For the present I'd rather not comment upon the matter. It looks rather presumptuous for one of us who have not studied the thing to come out and give a hard and fast opinion. I haven't considered the question at present to give an intelligent answer."

Walter Jeffries:

"It's worth while to sell it. But if it is sold, then it should be sold by tender and have the sale well advertised beforehand."

Herbert Diamond:

"Probably sell it. But make the sale one by tender. Put advertisements in all the leading papers, and let them then know enough so it will be well advertised when it comes to bidding on it."

Three degrees below zero this morning at 9 a.m. and a stiff breeze blowing. Everyone should certainly sufficient to make people realize that winter is here.

By the way, has anyone seen an alderman candidate about town? It's about time they were coming out into the open.

During the forenoon of considerable anchor ice and a rather heavy downfall of snow the water of the river became blocked last night and in consequence the water in the river rose to an unusual height. While no particular damage was done some cellars in dwellings near the lower bridge were flooded and some cellars on the west side of Front Street also contained considerable water. Should such weather continue for a day or two, the danger from the flood, is not away, but if it should turn cold there is every likelihood of trouble. This is unusual for this time of the year.

DELIBERATIONS IN CRISIS MAY BE DRAWN OUT

Final Choice in Decision Lie With King Edward VIII

NO SIGN OF CLASH

Supporters of King Crowd Around Downing Street

By GEORGE HAMILTON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 7—(CP Cable)—Immediately after question hour in the House of Commons this afternoon Prime Minister Baldwin will make a statement on the constitutional crisis between the King and the cabinet.

But present indications are that he is not likely to lift the veil more than slightly on the great drama of Fort Belvedere. For the King is still to make the final choice between remmodation of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, whom he desires to marry, or marriage to her and abdication.

All the implications of abdication already have been studied. A draft deed of abdication, it is stated, long since has been prepared for execution. consequential to abdication has been considered. But the final choice lies with the King himself. It is reported in the commons expressed a desire for time to consider.

Pressure Very Strong

Pressure of opinion in favor of renunciation is very strong. The morning Post declares the situation if the King makes a painful sacrifice, renounces all thoughts of a marriage which people so much dislike, he will be rewarded by the love and loyalty of his people.

"He will gain the confidence of the world esteem by what has happened, would be raised immediately in prestige, influence and popularity. The King would be enshrined in the hearts of his people, secure for all time in an illustrious place in the story of the English throne. Surely to contrast the consequences of the only two possible courses it itself sufficient to decide between them."

Give King Time

Pressure no less strong is being exerted on the other side. "Give the King time" is the oft-repeated plea. With time it is believed the King is more likely to change his mind than under the present pressure. In any event, the American-born divorcee cannot under English law marry anybody until her decree nisi is made absolute. That in the normal course of events will not be until April.

The Daily Herald, Labor, puts the issue this way: "Time and free questions and two alone which have not been answered are necessary. Is a marriage, which would cause great pain to vast numbers of people throughout the commonwealth and would set an example certain to have public consequences a purely private matter or is it a public matter on which the cabinet, so long as it remains the servants of Parliament, may legitimately advise the King? Deep and genuine sympathy with the King in his dilemma cannot change the fact, that it is a public matter.

If it is a public matter is the King bound to take the advice of his Ministers? Unless the most vital of all constitutional principles—the practice which makes the constitution democratic—is to be suspended, he is so bound."

Prominent members of the Labor party have let it be known that the fundamental principles of responsible government in the reign of the King definitely rejecting the advice of his ministers has not existed. Mr. Baldwin declared that if it does and the cabinet yields it will mean the end of government dent in the event of a Labor government.

Might Be Drawn Out

The House of Commons was called to meet at 2.45 p.m. (9.45 a.m. E.S.T.).

The attitude of the Cabinet after a prolonged session yesterday at the Prime Minister's official residence at No. 10 Downing Street indicated negotiations rising from the present impasse might be drawn out considerably.

At Fort Belvedere, King Edward conferred with his close advisers, Mr. Baldwin remained in complete seclusion at a villa in Chimes, France.

Supporters of the King crowded Downing Street approaches to Baldwin Palace and surged through Gold Street Square to demonstrate their approval of their King.

As the Prime Minister prepared to present a statement after a query in the Commons the crowds swelled in front of the residence.

Knots of people so clogged the dead-end street that police considered it necessary to disband again if the crowd should become disorderly.

Police had ordered the street cleared last night when the crowd heckled the ministers leaving a meeting, but after a time it again flashed a sign—"We Want Our Edward"—in front of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Baldwin Visits Queen

During the day Mr. Baldwin visited Queen Mary at Marlborough House.

Later in the day as she drove through the streets the crowds shouted their approval of her.

The Prime Minister's message to the Cabinet during the week-end deliberations was W. T. Monckton, Attorney-General of the Duchy of Cornwall.

Monckton, the King's legal adviser, consulted with the Cabinet.

The man who may be England's next King, the Duke of York, spent a quiet week-end at his country lodge in Windsor Great Park.

The Duke of Kent spent two hours at the royal lodge in conference with his brother.

The most heartening indication that the crisis would not be hurried came from a high government spokesman.

"There is no foundation," he said, "to any suggestion that the Government has been trying to force the King to take a decision over the week-end without having time to consider his position.

"No advice with threat of resignation on the part of the Government in this matter it has been stated.

"The situation never has reached the stage when there has been a clash between Government and King."

"Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

"I saw Mr. Downing a few days ago," remarked Jonathan, "I meant to tell you, Millie's having downstairs, she'll finish there. Then, perhaps Normal School. That relieves her but it seemed best. Not that young Dexter would ever bother her again. He's through with her. I might make a very bad joke and say washed up.... but——

"That wretched boy," said Rose, eating her figs in a firm line, "I wish you'd never come back here!"

After a moment she added, "I don't think for a moment that I'll be called upon for loitering next term. In fact Mr. Martin told me so. He didn't say anything specific but he acted very much as if I weren't. Had been unsatisfactory. Myself and Christopher I suppose. If any extra work is needed. If they get anyone to replace me. Larry improves very much," she said again, "I don't see how I can pass him."

"Well, don't," he told her easily. "You have the rankest way of disposing of things!" she said laughing. "It isn't as cut-and-dried as that. We'll be given our orders in a veiled way. We'll be told to pass him—or know the reason why."

"But that's absurd!" said Jonathan, somewhat irritated.

"Yes, isn't it? But like a lot of absurd things, it's true.... Look at that red bird. Whistling. Who called them 'Red soldiers?'"

Goldenrod waved, tall and yellow, beside the dark or pale purple of the small wild asters. Rose said....."It's all over in a single season .... I wouldn't live away from here for all the Sutton mines ....".

"Hay fever," murmured Jonathan absently, and they stared looked at one another and laughed.

CHAPTER XXXIII

Jonathan said, "I'm so glad you came with me this morning."

"Are you——"

Jonathan looked to left and right. On the far side of the road, a truck with wheel tracks ran through a wilderness of weeds and trees. He pulled the car over sharply. He stopped, he turned the switch. The speaking part of the morning was about them, the call of birds, the sound of insects, the faint rustle of leaves.

"Rose...."

He didn't have to say more. She was generous, she was in love, she would not keep him in suspense by waiting. She spoke his name, as he had spoken hers and gave herself to his arms. She laughed with mouth frankly and happily for his kiss. He said, after a while,

"I don't know that it's happened!"

"That's a flattering remark." She thought, I do....I think, bless her, Sally made it happen. But that was one thing he must never know, that she had listened, that she had heard.

"I think I've been in love with you ever since you walked into your uncle's office that day a year ago."

"I know I've been in love with you since then," she replied, with as much composure as was compatible under the circumstances.

He said, "I haven't very much to offer——"

"You couldn't offer me more, Jon...."

"Then you'll marry me?"

"Jon, you astonish me! A proposal before breakfast....."

"Rose....darling Rose....."

"I'll marry you," she said firmly, "try and stop me."

"When....."

"Oh," said Rose....'next summer." His disappointment was indicative. "Next summer," she cried, "next summer."

"Well, dearest, I'll keep my job—for the time being....I've signed my contract. Not that there's much fun about it nowadays. Or rather there didn't use to be. There might be, now."

"I don't want you to teach after we're married," he began.

"I don't intend to," she said gaily. "I intend to be a useless, parasitic wife. Or I'll mind the door for you and answer telephone calls and give chronic patients," she promised laughing, "and I'll try to make Evelina forgive me for marrying you....."

"But, Rose, why not sooner....."

She said, more soberly, "No.... Look Jon, let's be sensible. By the end of the next year you'll have started up your practice into something really solid. Then it will take mother a while to adjust herself—and she'll live with us, won't she?"

"That's another thing," said Rose. "I don't know that she'll want to. But if I'm not teaching we can't afford to keep up two establishments." She turned a troubled face to him and he caught her to him once more and kissed her eyes and her mouth. He said, "We'll manage....."

"Yes, of course ..... Jon, I'm perishing with it. I'll faint on your hands if you don't take me back to town...."

"Or joy?" he inquired sedately.

"Of hunger," she said, laughing. On the way back he said,

"We'll tell everyone."

"Oh, no, not a formal announcement!" she begged him. "Just Mother, and Uncle Alan, of course, and a very few others. I hate this secret business. Let's have a comparatively secret about it, and then after we're married we can be married for the rest of our lives."

They had taken a long time to drive the distance to Sutton, turn to turn, and the Ballard house. It was eight o'clock as they sat together in the kitchen finishing their breakfast with Evelina clucking about them disapprovingly. The telephone rang shrilly and Jonathan got up to answer it. Rose heard his astonished exclamation, Sally's name and his questions. She went into the office and closed the door. Jonathan said, "Sally, Sally, are you there?"

"Yes, Jon," said Rose, aghast.

"I know...." He did not say, he was, she saw instantly, embarrassed and uncomfortable.

"Perhaps it isn't Sally!"

"It must be," said Jonathan, 'as Sally telephoned him herself. She said it was a scoop for his paper. She said her mother would be having hysterics by now so it was no use calling her for a few hours more. She asked him to call me," added Jonathan, "and——"

Rose was silent. She stood beside him, her hand on his shoulder. She said, pleasantly, "....I hope it's a happy, Jon."

Sally's elopement created an orgy of excitement. But no one was astonished at her choice; it was merely in her manner of postulating. The Senator stumped into Jonathan's office the day after the event, settled himself in a chair. He asked, "I suppose....you were knocked all of a heap, Jon?"

"Well, rather," Jonathan assured him, he guessed.

"Wish she hadn't done it that way. Always looks—oh, you know how it looks. But you can't tell her she couldn't face a church wedding and all that nonsense. I'll miss her not coming back now. They were on to New York and had their things after Sally's mother had been sailing for a short trip abroad. The Senator, Jon, will find Kim a job going down to see them off. By the way, she sent you a message. She said, 'Tell Jon I'll Kim I was only kidding.' That may mean something to you, it doesn't to me."

The small eyes regarded him shrewdly. To his annoyance Jonathan felt himself coloring. "Yes, I guess I do," he said lamely, "It was only a little joke we had between us."

Jonathan said the Senator, who didn't, and wasn't at all satisfied. "Look here, she didn't go that way out of any—any silly idea of pique, did she? I had the notion once that you cared——"

Jonathan shook his head. He said with a laugh, "Why no, Mr. Senator, you....... Sally and I are great friends, nothing more. She—He paused, he was glad, for both, that she likes a good time," he said simply, "and Kim, Some Phil was always top man."

"I suppose so. Well, we'd settled on Phil a long time ago. He's the appointed me in some way...but perhaps now...." He paused cleared his throat, and said briskly, "but I really came to talk about you and not that crazy girl or mine, Kim. About the school position. There'll be no trouble when elections——"

Jonathan interrupted hastily, "I've been wanting to talk to you about that. I appreciate all you've done for me, and all you are willing to do. But, no, I'd rather not. Science stays."

Sutton frowned. He asked sharply, "What's the matter with you, why don't you want the job?"

"Frankly," said Jonathan, "it isn't a job. It's a sinecure. A little conference there and there, a lecture to the kids with all the bone and muscle removed, flabby platitudes remaining ....routine examinations and all that. I was originally very much interested. I'm not. I'm the neatest easy way I form. The attraction disappeared when Sally was no more. There are other men who'll be infinitely more serious. You can't make haste this way, Jon. You can't come in and overthrow the evolution of generations. You young people are always in a hurry—Well," he said abruptly, "that's that....I'll be going along now. No, don't trouble to come with me, I'll see myself out."

He walked out of the room, and Jonathan followed after him instinctively. It wasn't his refusal of the job, it was his refusal of anything that Sutton cared to offer. There goes the Sutton influence, he told himself, with a twisted grin.

Sally had gone, too. He thought; Most of that influence was Sally. With Sally in New York, in Europe, coming back to live in the Dexter house perhaps, as the conquering bride of the Manor, his backing vanished. She wouldn't be bothered now, he thought, and found himself very much relieved. They'd leave him alone at the Inn and in Sutton disapproval and Sally with indifference. Up like a rocket and down like a stick. He thought, preparing for an account book: And I've been a fool at that.....I've spent more in just bad cash than Sally's ever brought me.....Oh, a rich pal—but now and then his rich friends have a way of letting their bills run as far as that goes...He'd ask Sally, now and then, about the possibility of resigning from the country club. For himself, no. But he had done considerable charity work in Sutton, he had given his all up socially and that ran into more money. He closed the ledger with a snap. It had been the Inn's last year and he'd been as dazzled by it as Sutton as a kid in front of a bakery window. But this was over now. He had his work and Rose, and the Sutton pals could go to hell and all he cared. Not that he wasn't grateful.....for her? Then that's ungrateful.....not for her? Then that's not really. But he liked Sally. He thought uncomfortably: If I hear her into trouble.....

Well, what else could he do? Perhaps inadvertently he'd helped to precipitate things, but after all he had been in the cards that she'd marry Dexter.....that poor devil.

Life went on smoothly. Their immediate friends knew of their engagement to him. He'd become one of them now, sitting around the fire with Sam and Rose, with Rose pouring the rag, interested in the town. He'd done his job for three years and Christopher. That the election went against him was to be expected. He'd little time for regrets, and when He'd shaken his hand and said, "Not that I don't hate your going, Jon, you've done a world. If it had to be anyone....don't worry about Kim, I'll look after her," it was with a habit, that's all, even a good one.

Mrs. Ward was resigned. She had even come from Sutton to see the adjustment hadn't been hard to make. They'd spent a quiet, cozy winter that when Rose married, her mother would have her own small apartment in the city, or with them. The house was to be Doctor Ballard's wedding present to Rose. He will save you rent, Jonathan, you lucky beggar.....and save me too. It must be Rose's, Mrs. Ward knew, would have been Rose's eventually, anyway.

An apartment could be managed easily with a little expenditure, a good room and bath. Rose would do her own, even a tiny electric kitchen in case she wished to entertain, or to stay away from the family table. "Jon will demand Rose nearly all the time," thought Mrs. Rose. And Evelina, informed of the state of affairs, said gloomily, "I'm sure I hope it's all for the best, Mrs. Ward. And Evelina, informed of the state of affairs, said gloomily, "I'm sure I hope it's all for the best, Mrs. Ward, but I'm afraid I'll be no help here! "At present," said Rose, laughing, "I'm young and healthy and accomplished. I'll manage their washing."

Chapter XXXIV

The young Dexters returned to town in December. Rose and Jonathan knew their faces, their voices, was unchanged, wisecracking, dark, handsome, and Sally was like a yellow flame, talking too much, laughing too loudly, very excited about travel and people and being a bride. She was tremendously friendly toward them both, she'd brought some ionique-shell combs for Rose, and a gold and alligator case for Jonathan. But somehow she was no longer Sally Sutton, she was Mrs. Phil Dexter.

Larry was at the parties. He avoided them both. He drank too much and had to be taken up to bed during the evening. It was an unfortunate accident.

Rose looked after his undignified exit with darkening eyes. She was troubled about Larry. She had kept this from Jonathan. She knew what Jonathan would say, and he was right. But she had no proof.....no actual proof. He was a disturbance in not her class alone but all his classes. He was a leader of the most undesirable element in the school. Worse than that, most of the younger boys made a hero of him. He broke training deliberately, and he remained on the football team, playing an erratic and reckless game, spectacular with victory.

There was a new club among the older boys, and Rose knew it. It was purely and simply a gambling club. She knew when the gambler was lucky, he had no actual evidence. She couldn't ask the other boys to "squeal" even if they would.

The mid-term examinations came and went, after they were over Rose went to see Mr. Martin in his office. She shut the door and she looked up in some astonishment. "I had to see you."

"Well?" he asked tiredly. He knew that she was to be married in the late close of school. It annoyed him. Why any woman with a good position should forfeit marriage. He was a bachelor and gloried in it.

"It's about Larry Dexter."

"Well, what about him?"

"I'm thinking him," she said.

"Thinking....I but——"

"Yes, I know." She looked at him as she stood there by the desk, at his disapproving face, and there was in expression of amazement. "Yes, his paper was quite correct. He is expelled. I know. He knew all the answers. He couldn't help but know them. He helped him with Om. oh, no doubt in his head for the most part. But certain questions disappeared from my room. I had left them, naturally in my desk, as I had not before. They were returned however."

Martin's face lighted. He said, "Rose, you are making a very serious accusation. You do not mind? You have no proof that it was Dexter."

"I have some very clear fingerprints."

He looked at her in horror. "But" he said, "this isn't a police station or a detective story——"

"I appreciate that," said Rose, "but the fact remains. I shall prove Larry Dexter. And moreover, I believe he should be expelled. For cheating. For gambling. For undermining discipline in the classes, for gambling——"

Martin's face was white, He said, "You don't know what you're doing——"

"Oh, yes," said Rose, "I know, well enough——"

He ordered after a silence, "Send for Larry Dexter. Then there will not be a word of this——"

"You can't silence me," said Rose. "You have to prefer charges if you contemplate that. What charges can you prefer? I know you don't do something about Larry Dexter. I shall. I'll go to the school meeting. I'll have a good deal of influence. Enough to push this thing through."

He said, shocked at her, "If you do....you'll be sorry ..!"

Rose walked away from the desk, then turned. She said, right, and I won't be sorry." She turned at the door and looked at him. She said, "It's time that this school was under a more competent rule than the present Dexter administration," she said, "and that a Dexter found himself in difficulties. I shall see this way."

The door closed after her. Martin picked up the telephone. Presently he was connected with the Dexter home. He was stout out on his forehead despite the snow lying deep on the ground outside. He said, "Senator Sutton ....? This is Martin speaking. Could I see you for a moment on urgent business?"

Hanging up after a satisfactory answer, he wiped his forehead. He said to himself, "I'll be sick. I'll be sick, then must go. the boy or Rose will be sick. I'll be sick. I'll be the boy."

Rose was telling her troubles to no one, not even to Jonathan. She had discovered that while young Dexter Senior was also a bully and anger, once aroused he was difficult to handle. She had a scene with him storming at Martin in his office, and shuddered. No, this was her affair and she would see it through.

Her next step of course would be to go over Martin's stubborness and see Rogers, the superintendent, which she would do, dreaded, especially headed in sort, "feminine hysterics" by way of another she would get action, she determined. She spoke tentatively to Mrs. Lucy Anderson, the school nurse with whom she had been friendly since their childhood. Lucy was of the school, yet she was sufficiently detached. Lucy listened, then frowning. Eventually she said soberly, "You can't beat 'em, Rose, there's no use running your head against a stone wall. That's what they are—to get quit and keep on lowering his marks. After all you'll be leaving at the end of the school year. And I don't for heaven's sake, tell me it's a matter principle of the thing.....I'll scream if you do."

Rose said, after a moment, "That's all very well. And it is the principle of the thing. It's a long time from now till school ends. I can do a lot of damage before then. And besides ....." She sighed, shrugged her shoulders....."I can see how Martin's kingdom come" she said, "and it won't do any good. I know."

"Well, it's your own funeral.....Personally I don't know what I'd do in your shoes. I haven't the courage, I suppose," Lucy told her.

Regarding the superintendent as his den was almost literally that, for Mr. Rogers had the finest Van Dyke in the north country and gave in the fond care one would bestow upon a beloved child. He was not overcome with delight to see Rose, and indeed it took her some time to reach him, as he appeared reluctant to look up from the pipe he was quite unable to make appointments.

Finally she went in his house one evening after supper and was welcomed there by his wife, a pleasant plump little person who drew her within and informed her husband that her entire day was nothing for Rogers to do but receive her in singularly modest library, well decorated with all the ancestral mahogany and hot-over furniture which had been accumulating for the last thirty years.

It was evident he had been there and had already seen his superintendent. Rogers was pleasant enough, but his manner was the tactful tolerant attitude of an experienced man dealing with the whims and crotchets of frail femininity. He agreed with her that Larry Dexter's marks had not been of the highest, and that Larry was perhaps a "little wild." "But," he added, significantly, "a boy of his age at his fingers exactly together, leaning back in his chair and regarding Rose through half-shut lids, "must make allowances for youth." I am sure you will not be too harsh. Miss Ward. I will have Mr. Martin speak to the boy. A little closer application to his work—and I am convinced he will work will be brought up to standard. I appreciate your deep interest in the school and your zeal, but I think you will forgive me, you are very young and——

HYDRO ACT

October 31. In the eight months of the present fiscal year, which saw the Henry government had piled up an overdraft of $65,000,000 and was in the control of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, Premier Hepburn said, he had the purchase of the bill was the result of an offer made by Sir Adam Beck, Flavelle, C. L. Burton and others to buy the channels from the Federal and to improve stock in Ontario, to fund road construction work.

The premier told the rural voters most farmers would benefit by the amendments to the Assessment Act allocating a measure of corporation taxes to the separate schools. A reduction in grants paid these schools would lighten the general burden of taxation, but he said no grants to urban separate schools have been forthcoming because taxes would not maintain them.

"Most of the propaganda against this change emanates from the financial interests and from the power barons who are out to beat this government at all costs," he said, "but the people will elect you adversely, give it a trial for a year.

"The most nefarious obstacle ever hurled in the path of legislated behind closed doors," said the Premier, "was the long duration of the power contracts which were declared void and void in his government's legislation.

Bill to Save Hydro Claim

"I am confident the bill to save hydro, that it what I did. It was not repudiation of contracts but their power plants. What they have had got to be the right to public the public of Ontario," he declared. "I'm going to call an early session of the legislature to put through this legislation, I don't care, what the decision of the privy council is, the power of the legislature is supreme in civil rights."

Again Premier Hepburn charged Mr. Howard, Toronto, "who incorporated in Nassau to evade taxation," is the master mind of the Conservative campaign.

"Highly Drew and Rowe confer with him over the telephone," he said.

Premier Hepburn said the succession duties department was investigating 220 estates.

TRENTON H. L. FORMED WITH 7 TEAMS ENTERED

O. Alyea Chosen President of One of Best Leagues in East

THREE TROPHIES

O. Leary Appointed as Coach on Intermediate "B" Squad

Trenton, Dec. 7 (Special)—Officers of the Trenton and District Hockey League were chosen at a meeting in the town hall on Friday night. The following are the officers elected: President, Mr. O. Alyea; Honorary President, Mr. Harry M. Moore; Vice President, Mr. Morrow of Brighton; Secretary, Mr. S. Norrington; Treasurer, Mr. Burleigh; Publicity Manager, Elmer R. Bonter.

Already seven teams have been entered into the league and the entries will be taken until December 15th. The teams and managers entered are: Brighton, Mr. Morrow; Benedict and Proctor, R. Schrooder; R.C.A.F., F. O. Williams; Consumers' Gas Co., J. Kerr; Carrying Place, W. Latour; Hinde and Dauch, E. O'Malley; Canadian Order of Foresters, T. Thompson. After the O.H.A. grouping the team managers will draw up the schedule.

The league will operate under the O.H.A. rules with a few classes added and rules regarding protests, etc., will be the same as the T. and D.H.L., were governed by last season. Players must remit their certificates to team managers before the opening contest. A balance of $28.00 from last year's league was voted to the treasury. A. Norrington, secretary of the league was given the power to choose referees with the approval of the league president and a ruling was passed to the effect, that referees be paid for services rendered.

Three Trophies

Three trophies, the Courier Advocate trophy, the Collin's trophy and the Dominion Coaching Association trophy are up for competition. The Dominion Combing Mills trophy was presented by the holder Mr. George LaFrash. His Imperial team of 1933 captured the honors. Previously the old Quinte Sun aggregation held it for two seasons in succession. The league expressed their thanks to the donor and from now on it will be up for annual competition. Mr. O'Leary well known in the local sporting circles as a baseball player and a team manager was appointed coach of Trenton's Intermediate "B" hockey squad. Coach Leary has been connected with the ice sport ever since he was able to look over the boards and, an organization under his guidance should go places.

Gossip at the hockey meeting on Friday night had it that Belleville are talking about entering the Trenton and District Hockey league. The locals would be glad to have another entry from an out of town place for there are still three teams lacking to make the league a ten team circuit, same as it was last year.

FOUR TEAMS IN STIRLING LOOP

Joseph Wilson, President of Last Year is Re-elected

Stirling—(Special)—At a meeting held in the Stirling Agricultural office on Saturday evening with three of last year's Central Hastings Hockey teams represented it was definitely decided, that the activities of the organization as a league would be carried forward, and an enthusiastic group of supporters of the league assisted in dealing with much of the usual pre-season business to be dealt with. Mr. Jos. Wilson, who last year very capably officiated as President of the league, was again elected to that office. It was the wish of the entire gathering that all officers of last year be re-elected this year and the officers to direct the working of the league will be as follows—

Hon. Presidents—Hon. J. A. Faulkner, M.P.P.; Norris Peterson, M.P.; Mr. Chas Cameron M.P.; Mr. F. N. McKee and the member elect of East Hastings.

President—Mr. Jos. Wilson of Stirling.

Sec.-Treas.—Dan Cook of West Huntingdon. The executive Committee is to be made up of the manager of each contesting team with the schedule in privacy. Special reference was made with sadness to the passing of the late James Hill, who had been an ardent supporter of the league and the secretary was instructed to extend the sympathies of the governing body to Mrs. Hill.

"If present plans are carried out four teams will be represented in the league this year, Glenn Ross; West Huntingdon; Bethel and Foxboro. Bethel was the only team not represented at the meeting but communications through long distance telephone verified their willingness to compete. A few minor discussions followed and the meeting adjourned until next Saturday, when all teams are expected to be present and the matter of drafting a schedule and assigning players will be dealt with, all players lists to be approved by the executive.

"LIGHTS OUT" FOR ONE AMATEUR MITT-SLINGER

When the amateur mitt-slingers get together they don't fool, as witness this bit of action from the All-American sectional boxing final in New York. Carmine Fatta of the Roman Sporting Club whaled his way to a championship in the 126-pound class clinching the argument by knocking Charlie Forenza through the ropes and out. There wasn't any argument on this one.

Barney had things well in hand all the way, scoring a unanimous decision and registering both knockdowns that the scraps provided. The bout went full 15 rounds, with the customers getting better than an average show.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Both the Belleville and Trenton hockey clubs are up in arms regarding the O.H.A. grouping, that was afforded them last Friday night. "Why we can't compete against teams like the R.C.A.F. and the Peterborough clubs. It would be only a matter of officiating the games and we cannot see our way clear to enter teams in this proposed group," Manager Eddie Thomas, of the Redmen and Manager Tommy Cain of the Trenton Club both emphatically stated to us over the week end. Both said they might be interested in a compromise, if they were given a "B" rating and they would not seriously object to playing an inter-locking schedule, all games to count in the standing with the "Fliers" and Peterboro, those two clubs to retain their "A" ratings, however.

"The O.H.A. knows perfectly well we lost three of our best year's team and have not been able to replace them. How then do they expect us to play in an "A" group this year, after being placed in a "B" class last year and even then we were classified in the second round?" asked Skipper Thomas of us Saturday. Naturally we could give him a simple reason. Belleville should be included in an "A" group, more especially after the Redmen had been rubbed out by Whitby, who in turn were given another "B" classification this year. Manager Thomas intimated he would entertain the suggestion of playing an inter-locking schedule, providing Belleville and Trenton were given a "B" rating, however.

"We haven't even got a team yet. We are all through with the broken down old timers and are going to give the young players of our Town League a chance to play with our intermediate club and thereby expect to encourage the kids and give them something to play harder for," explained Tom Cain, mentor of the Trenton Club, Mr. Cain added he and his henchmen were not the least bit interested in competing against the "Fliers" team, as they felt the "Fliers" were much too fast for their green and untried team of proposed young players. Mr. Cain was also against including Peterboro in a group with Trenton, but later intimated he might be inclined to enter a team into the proposed inter-locking proposition, providing his club was afforded a "B" rating, however.

If the O.H.A. fuck, that the B. C. A. F. and Peterboro are of interested in "A" calibre, as many fans think doubt but what they are, then the proposed inter-locking schedule, with all games to count will not in any way interfere with the present grouping. The idea would be to have Trenton and Belleville given a "B" classification, while the R.C.A.F. and Peterborough would be class "A". All four clubs would play home and home games at most, but at the termination of the regular schedule the club that was leading in its respective classification, would continue into the O.H.A. play-downs in that particular grouping. If Belleville and Trenton should happen to be tied in the number of games won and lost then a postschedule playoff for group honors could easily be arranged. By this system the fans of Trenton and Belleville would be afforded a better brand of hockey and see more fence throughout the regular playing season, all of which would hold good by Peterboro as well. Of course the entire matter will have to be thoroughly thrashed out, when the O.H.A. executive convenes with Mr. Barrows for the drafting of the playing schedule in the near future, however.

Harry Sonshine, flying wing of Queen's senior inter-collegiate football team, may not have been selected for the "all-Eastern Canada" squad, but he was awarded the Johnny Evans trophy, annually awarded to the most valuable player to his team during the season. Sonshine, who graduates in the spring, is considered one of the best secondary players in senior football circles. The Johnny Evans trophy has been awarded at Queen's, and is highly prized by all players, for the last 10 or 12 years.

"The greatest football game ever," is the consensus of opinion of those who saw the Sarnia Imperials win the Eastern Canadian title by whaning over the Ottawa Rough Riders 26 to 20. The gameness of the Rough Riders throughout the entire 60 minutes, is what thrilled the fans, although the Imperials proved they had what it takes, when after being tied, they continued to launch a terrific offensive, that proved prolific and saw the hungry-for-titles "Tunnel Town" aggregation score victories 24 to 20, but only after one of the hottest and most courageous fought grid games of modern times.

The "on again off again Regina Rough Riders" are on again today and announced they would come east, minus their five imports, just to see how good these Imperials are. So, unless there are future changes the O.R.U. final will be played in Sarnia on Saturday next between the Regina Rough Riders, winners of Western Canada, and Sarnia Imperials, Eastern champions.

While on the subject of football here's one is fathom out. Washington Invited Pittsburg to come pete in the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena on New Year's day. The invitation was accepted, naturally. On Saturday Notre Dame battled Southern California to a 13-13 draw. But, during past season's play Pittsburg defeated Notre Dame and Washington defeated Southern California and here's the question—after Saturday's the game of the two vanquished squad, which team will play the Rose Bowl game, Pitt or Washington?

The Toronto Westminsters defeated Lindsay 4 to 0 on Saturday to win the intermediate O.R.F.U. semi-final in straight games. The score at Lindsay one week ago was 3-2 for Westsides, giving the Toronto squad the round 13 to 2.

Les Canadiens, Maroons and Rangers gained ground in the N.H.L. over the week end. The Maroons showed too much power and stability for the Leafs to win 3 to 2, while down in Montreal a hectic games was in progress, The Canadiens scored two goals against the Bruins in the first period Saturday night, then the Boston team came back to score three in the middle canto, but the Canadiens rose to the occasion and bagged two more to win a hectic game. Incidentally, that famous team of old Joliat and Morenz was responsible for the winning goal, Joliat scoring. Last night, despite warnings from Major McLaughlin to "win or else" the Chicago Blackhawks were trounced by the Rangers 2 to 1, while the Americans kept up their clinic pace by playing the Red Wings 3 3 all tie in the Madison Square Gardens. This leaves Toronto, Boston and Chicago losing ground over the week end.

St. Michael's College defeated the Peterborough Collegiate seniors, C.O.D.S.A. champions 7 to 2 in a sudden death game played in the Little's City Saturday. St. Mikes qualified to meet Windsor in the inter-scholastic section of the O.R.F.U. junior play-downs by eliminating the Petes.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—How government engineers "freze" a landslide was described today in a report on Grand Coulee Dam operations made to Interior Secretary Ickes.

By clapping a giant artificial ice pack on a 200,000 cubic yard slide of earth, moving at two feet an hour, the report said, the engineers were able to arrest the movement long enough to pour the concrete in the cut excavation of the Grand Coulee.

Two second-hand refrigeration machines with a total capacity of more than 90 tons a day were brought into play when a clay bank threatened to slide into the excavation. About six miles of pipe was driven onto the sliding mass. Brine was forced through the pipes and the earth frozen.

Stoney Creek, Ont., Dec. 7 (CP)—Starlings in this district have been prying chimney with red wing blackbirds during the past year or so, according to nature students, and this winter the birds have gone south together. While in other seasons large numbers of starlings remained in the winter. This year they have almost completely disappeared.

Eastern Canada's all-star rugby team for 1936 manages to supply a berth for at least one performer for each of the Big Four clubs and both Sarnia and Balmy Beach from the O.R.F.U. The Montreal's defeated Indian brigade and Hamilton and Toronto are both well represented. The fighting Ottawa aggregation and Sarnia finalists, for the championship of the east each find paces. The complete squad is shown here in this layout. The position of flying wing was awarded to Ormond Beach, No. 1, of Sarnia. "Buck" Welch of Hamilton Tigers, No. 11! DAILY SHORT STORY

DOLLS MISCONDUCT

By HARRY G. BLAKE

Arthur Dorman was striding up and down his hotel room with both hands in his hair, when his wife's lawyer came in. With Mr. Fishott came a pretty, blond, young woman with a cynical expression.

The lawyer nodded in approval at sight of Arthur's pacing-like figure. "All set, sh?" he inquired. "Fine! This is the young fellow that is to be the correspondent." He introduced them, "Miss Roper, Mr. Dorman."

"How are you?" Miss Roper asked, nodding with professional geniality.

"Rotten!" Arthur said.

"How long, here?" Mr. Fishott said, in alarm. "You can't back out now. You got to go through with it." He added, unmeaningly: "Maybe you'd like to have your wife go out to Reno—spend lots of money—establishing a legal residence?"

Arthur stopped his striding to turn belligerently on the lawyer, then thought better of it. "O.K." he said shortly. "But get it over with!"

"Sure, sure," the lawyer said soothingly. "I know this is tough on you, Dorman. But in this state it's the law that misconduct has to be proved to get a divorce. Now you've got everything ready up here, Mrs. Dorman and the two witnesses are waiting in the lobby. We'll give you fifteen minutes to get ready—then we'll come up." He went out.

Miss Roper took her overnight bag and went into the bathroom. When she came out she was wearing a pair of pale blue sleeping pajamas. As Arthur watched, she walked about the room spreading her abbreviated clothes about in conspicuous places. "A gal traveling can't be careful in some of these cheap hotels," she said, in a quivering voice, of hated unfitness in strynos and especially in women.

"Sure," Miss Roper said. "It's evidence. Better give me some of your suits so I can throw them around, too."

"Nothing doing," she said briskly. He began pacing again.

Miss Roper took off her dancing slippers and got into bed. She lay on her back with her hands under her head and looked at him gooey naturedly.

"Hi," she asked. "Which one of you is getting this divorce? When I saw your wife in the lobby, I thought it was you, because she looked as if she was going to have a fit of the vapors. But you don't look so shy yourself."

"I don't know," Arthur said. He went over to the window and stood there. What had started this whole mixup? Had he lost his temper? Was that he felt as if the whole world had been stood on its head by an earthquake. He had tried to put things up with Berry, but she wouldn't listen. Her heart seemed to have become a lump of ice so far as he was concerned.

A knock on the door. Mrs. Beryl Dorman, Mr. Max Fishott, and two clerks from the lawyer's office who were to act as witnesses, entered the room. They stood there getting as the little comedy they were staging to get around the law. All except Beryl and Arthur. Fishott looked so haughty and impatient that he knew she was slung with shame at the sordidness of the thing.

"Well, I guess that's all," Mr. Fishott said after a moment. He stood aside to let Beryl pass out first. Before she turned to the door she lifted her eyes. She and Arthur looked at one another. Both flushed vividly and went.

"Well, that's that!" he thought hopelessly. He went back to the window.

"Got a cigarette, big boy?" Miss Roper asked.

He had forgotten her, and somehow it infuriated him to see her lying there tranquilly in his bed. "Will you get out?" he asked through his teeth.

When she had gone he sat down on the end of the bed. He found that she had imparted some highpowered perfume to the pillow and tried to throw it through the wall. Then he got up and resumed his tramping to and fro.

Suddenly there was a knock on the door. He went to it prepared to obey the thought that immediately flashed into his head. It was Berry.

She looked at him, and stood startled for a moment, then stopped. "Oh, it's you," he said.

The face had an expression he had never seen before. It was the sort of expression that goes with a knife or a revolver. He involuntarily drew back, but at the same time he felt a thrill at the thought that her loveliness wasn't his any longer. She pushed past him and her eyes flashed to the bed. Like a small destroyer heading for a full speed for the scene of battle, she disappeared into the adjoining bathroom. Arthur stood up with her when she was peering behind the shower curtain. Her expression of fury giving way to one of thought, she wandered back into the bedroom. He followed open-mouthed. She bent swiftly and looked under the bed. Then turned and said: "Where is that woman?"

It didn't make sense to him for several seconds. Then he took her by the shoulders and shook her. "Why —you're jealous!" he cried joyfully. "You're jealous, Berry!"

She said, "Oh Arthur!" and burst into tears.

"So you love me after all!" he said triumphantly.

"Oh, no!" she said, against his chest. "I only wanted to save you from that cheap hussy. But when I saw at a glance that she was no good."

He remembered that you can't argue with a woman and kissed her instead.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As Old Timer saw the hideous tableau revealed for a moment to his horrified gaze, the she-devil seized Kali Bwana by the hair and forced back her head. Then the long knife flashed in the light of the cooking fires that had been prepared for the cannibal feast.

The white man burst through the gates and ran toward the ghastly scene. He was unarmed except for a pocket knife, but his actions were dictated by love rather than reason. And now, as the sacrificial knife flew toward its victim, a shout issued from his lips.

To the astonished pygmies it sounded like the war cry of attacking natives. At the same instant a mysterious arrow passed through the heart of Wiala, and the knife dropped from her dead hand. Old Timer, no more than the pygmies, knew whence that arrow had come.

For a moment the small warriors stood in stupid astonishment, but the white man realized that their inactivity would be brief when they discovered they had a lone and unarmed opponent to deal with. Then he would join Kali Bwana as a prisoner—marked for death!

Old Lady Tells Secret of Her Vigor

The writer of the following letter once suffered from rheumatism, sciatica and depression. Then one day a vigorous old lady told her the secret of good health. And now that former sufferer writes to tell others how she obtained relief through Kruschen:—

"Kruschen was recommended to me by an old lady of seventy-two who can dance the Highland Fling. Thanks to Kruschen, which she has used for thirty years. She told me to take Kruschen daily to stay and retain a full bodily health, which I suffered nearly every morning on wakening. I was also troubled with rheumatism in both shoulders. Kruschen turned the trick. The headache disappeared and so did the rheumatism. I have continued taking Kruschen and intend to keep it up."—(Mrs.) P.A.W.

Kruschen is a combination of mineral salts which aids the stimulation of your liver, kidneys and digestive tract to healthy, regular activity. Just a quarter of a teaspoonful first thing each morning in a cup of hot water helps to purify the blood-stream and thus helps to keep the blood-stream pure.

I was able to reach into my pocket and pull out $14.00 in bills, but he snatched took the remaining change, some 90 cents. I recognized him, when he turned to run away," related the old man.

"This man is three previous convicted of theft," interrupted Mr. Donnan.

"Although you did not get much money, I do not like the idea of your stealing from old men. Three to nine months in the Reformatory may teach you a lesson," concluded His Worship.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by the Canadian Press Service.

Montreal, Dec. 7.

Some fairly wide movements were noted in the local market last week, although in the final analysis the net for the whole list was very small, with the "newsprints" touching new highs and the Western issues making a bid for market attention moving up appreciably on good demand. Speculative quarters are advising a discriminatory selection of specific issues from time to time as ordinary developments in the natural phase of a bull market.

As newcomers over the new curbmarket for automobiles is being formed the stocks acted heavily. These issues it is felt, have been discounted to a considerable extent already on an experiment that is, as yet, far from popular. Commercial men, even the major Canadian oil companies are to sound financial purchases are to sound accountancy dividends with prospects, in view of expanding automobile use and improved business conditions very promising.

...Where is the deepest oil well in the British Empire? Much discussion is heard about this subject these days. Many of our readers will be surprised to know that on statistical and geological authority the statement is made that the Arca, well of the Royalite Oil Company is now drilling below 8100 feet. From an authoritative source, Financial Service learns that a Calgary publisher is expected to be blown in by Arca any day now. Drilling might go to 8500 feet.

THIS FARMER KNOWS ALL THE ANSWERS

Further evidence of the intense interest being taken in the Eastern Ontario Live Stock Show which is the riding was brought to light on Saturday.

A representative of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, sent here to get information relative to his department, called at the home of a farmer a few miles from the city. Producing a list of names the Ottawan asked the farmer if he were acquainted with the owners. Gazing at his questioner with looks bordering on the suspicious the farmer exclaimed, "Say, are you a Grit or a Tory?"

"What," that Grit got to do with this," asked the surprised question of the man looking for information regarding certain cows.

"Young man, I'm questioning!" asked the farmer, "No," responded the representative, "because I'm a Tory, confound the farmer and you are a Tory, it won't be of any use to me to ask you so-and-so, and so-and-so, for they are a couple of hide-bound Grits."

WALL STREET

By VICTOR KUBANK

(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—The stock market had plenty of good industrial news to cheer it on today but failed to work up an appetite except for an assortment of specialties, principally in the motor division. The Weakening of prices in both the London and Paris stock exchanges further attention to complicated Europeat matters and the Hoover-Young row, this week, exhibited a wavier attitude toward the buying side.

Down the line of leaders among Canadian stocks while International Nickel and Canadian Pacific were narrow. On the curb, Lake Shore was unchanged. Dominion Government bonds were quiet. Canadian dollars yielded 1-32 of a cent at 100.19¾ cents.

Shares managing to push ahead included Standard Sugar Common and Preferred, Trans Gulf Producing, B. International Alcohol, Paramount, Warner Bros., Loews, Dome Mines, Standard Oil of N. J., International Paper and Power, International Hydro-Electric, Texas Corp., Westinghouse and Goodyear.

ROYAL DRAMA MAY REACH CLIMAX TOMORROW

Thousands Swept into Sea and Houses Demolished as River Overflows

Baldwin May be Able To Announce Decision To Commons Wednesday

Prime Minister Answers Royal Summons to Fort Belvedere For Conference With His Majesty

KING MAY SOON REACH DECISION

Duke of Kent Participates With Duke of York in Tonight's Momentous Meeting at The King's Country Home

London, Dec. 8—(CP Cable)—The great drama of the King's choice approaches a climax.

The next 24 hours, it is believed among members of parliament, will bring his final decision as to whether or not he will marry Mrs. Ernest Simpson and abdicate the throne.

Prime Minister Baldwin may be in a position to make an announcement in the House of Commons at 3.45 p.m. (10:45 a.m. E.S.T. tomorrow.

London, Dec. 8—(CP)—Prime Minister Baldwin reached Fort Belvedere this evening in answer to a royal summons presumably to receive the final decision of King Edward VIII on renunciation of either his throne or Wallis Warfield Simpson.

The Premier hastened over the icy roads from London in an hour and 16 minutes to enter the gates of the royal residence in the gathering darkness, while suspense hung heavy over London, England and the Empire.

It generally was believed the decision, even if given tonight at Fort Belvedere, would be withheld from the public until Baldwin has an opportunity to communicate it to Commons.

If the answer is abdication, the King might give the tip-off by quick departure from the country.

King Edward's youngest brother, the Duke of Kent, was believed to have participated in tonight's crucial meeting. He drove alone to Fort Belvedere this morning. There also were reports that the motor car of the Duke of York, the heir-presumptive, had been seen entering a side entrance of the estate.

People Hopeful King Will Remain on Throne

Generally, in view of Mrs. Simpson's statement of her willingness to sacrifice the King rather than hurt the sovereign or the throne, the British public was hopeful its monarch had decided the crown comes first.

But there was certainty; only breathless waiting.

Those who expected the King to give the Prime Minister his final word tonight pointed out that every day's delay was costing thousands of pounds. The vast amount of business based on a coronation next May was at a standstill.

These persons said the King would be as anxious as any of his subjects to return Great Britain to normal. Unless he has made up his mind, they asserted, there could be but little reason for another conference with Baldwin.

Duke of York Present

With him were advisers to both the King and the Duke of York, their presumptive. The advisers had visited the Prime Minister at No. 10 Downing Street and summoned him at 4 p.m. to the royal country residence.

Forty minutes later, the Premier reached Fort Belvedere. His car sped through the gates in the gathering darkness.

The Prime Minister, instead of going to parliament, had awaited Walter T. Monckton, the King's legal adviser, and Sir Eric Mieville, the Duke of York's secretary.

They reached the official residence at 4 p.m., Monckton coming from Fort Belvedere. A few minutes later they departed, Monckton and Baldwin travelling in one car and Sir Eric following in another.

While they were inside No. 10 Downing Street, several minor officials hurried out carrying brief cases and loaded them in the cars. Both machines headed toward Whitehall, which is on the route to Fort Belvedere, the King's country residence.

Conference May be Decisive

At Fort Belvedere, the King was reported closeted with his brothers, the heir-presumptive Duke of York and Duke of Kent, youngest of the four brothers, possibly in a decisive conference. Baldwin, it was established, was en route there with Monckton.

Earlier, a chartered airliner which airdrome officials said carried two home office officials and a physician took off from Croydon for Cannes, Mrs. Simpson's French haven, it reached Le Bourget and later was reported at Lyon, still headed toward Cannes, but containing only the pilot.

In Commons, speaking from Baldwin, Home Secretary Sir John Simon declined to add to the Prime Ministers statement of yesterday, in which Baldwin said the King had not yet decided between Mrs. Simpson and his crown.

DUCHY OFFICIALS CONFER WITH KING AT FT. BELVEDERE

Sir Edward Peacock And Walter Monckton In Conference

HISTORY OF CORNWALL

British Crowds Cheer And Demonstrate For The King

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 8—(CP Cable)—First societies, although relieved by Mrs. Wallis Simpson's dramatic statement, issued last night at Cannes, renouncing her friendship with the King as "still not alleged. The whole commonwealth is awaiting a decisive answer from the King.

Through a large part of the night lights shining in Fort Belvedere indicated a late conference. The morning Walter Monckton, Attorney-General of the Duchy of Cornwall, and Sir Edward Peacock, Receiver-General of the Duchy of Cornwall, left Fort Belvedere in royal car. Sir Edward formerly was a master at Upper Canada College, Toronto. He is a director of the Bank of England.

The two officials drove between ranks of buses and motor trucks which lined the way. For a few moments the road was jammed up and was thrown over the icy roads.

Extensive Absent Financial Arrangements

Repeated consultations with high officials of the Duchy of Cornwall and agents of rumors, that financial arrangements are under consideration. From the Duchy of Lancaster the King receives around £90,000 annually. From the Duchy of Cornwall the revenue amounts to £119,000 annually. What would happen to these revenues should the King marry and abdicate is a matter of live speculation.

The Duchy of Cornwall was created by Edward III in 1337.

The Black Prince was the first Duke, being the eldest of a royal charter, which has the force of an act of parliament, the title lands of the Duke of Cornwall pass to the eldest son of the King, the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall revert to the sovereign.

Revenues From Cornwall

It was under this provision that Edward VIII continues to receive revenues from the Duchy of Cornwall what after he ascended the throne. As Prince of Wales they were his by right or birth.

Should the King abdicate a situation would be created for which there is no precedent. It is assumed that parliament would have to make provision by special legislation.

Everywhere, however, there is earnest hope that abdication may be averted.

'Stand by the King' Chalk on Walls

London, Dec. 8 (AP)—"Stand by the King"—a message chalked on walls and sidewalks and shouted through loud speakers, formed the Fascist theme in Britain's crisis today.

The activities have been carried on, officially or unofficially, since Sir Oswald Mosley addressed his blackshirts last Friday, urging that they support the sovereign in his desire to marry Wallis Simpson.

Officials of the British Union of Fascists said today the public had given their propaganda a "spontaneous reception."

MRS. W. SIMPSON IS STILL AT VILLA

Her Renunciation Message Is Surprise in England

Cannes, France, Dec. 8 (AP)—Wallis Warfield Simpson, friends close to her said today, is determined to fight for a Morganatic marriage with King Edward VIII, despite her offer to give him up.

Mrs. Simpson's friends say she still hoped the King would triumph in his determination to marry her and keep his throne.

They expressed the "strong belief" that Mrs. Simpson's statement was dictated from quarters close to the King in London and said they both revealed a determination in the telephone talks that preceded the signing of the statement to "fight to the bitter end" for a Morganatic marriage.

A spokesman at the villa where Mrs. Simpson is staying declared, however, there is no intention for such "belief." He declared the statement was "purely spontaneous."

The possibility was expressed that Mrs. Simpson would soon leave Cannes perhaps for Italy, where rich Fascist police would assure her greater privacy.

French Surete National detectives on guard outside the Villa Lou Viel also said she would possibly leave Cannes.

Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting to the King, who is here with Mrs. Simpson, departs.

RUMOR HINTS AT ABDICATION

Havas Agency Says King if Abdicating Would be Earl of Chester

London, Dec. 8 (CP)—Havas News Agency said tonight Queen Mary's grandson, King Edward will abdicate in a few hours and fly to Canada along with him remaining in his household and his luggage.

The report said the airplane which left Croydon airport for Cannes, France, contained the king's luggage and crew of the royal personal servants. There was nothing to confirm these reports.

Havas said he would assume the title of Earl of Chester if and when he abdicated.

Monied Interests Scored by Premier in Fighting Address As Campaign Nears Its Close

Asks Electors to Give Assessment Act a Fair Trial

HALL IS CROWDED

Record of Government Defined at Meeting at Ivanhoe

Flanked by the most impressive array of Liberal stalwarts since his address on the Throne Speech, Right Hastings in support of the party candidate Dr. H. A. Hoyes, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn launched a final appeal to the electors of the West Hastings section of the riding last night at the Town Hall in Ivanhoe in which he stressed the importance of the electors using reason and sincere thought before casting their vote on Wednesday at the polls.

The crowded hall gave the Premier one of the ovations a county seldom comes a few minutes after eight o'clock as he entered the hall accompanied by Dr. W. D. Smith, M.P.P., Dr. Martin-Simeon, W. A. Fraser, M.P., Northumberland, and Wishart Campbell, Toronto radio announcer. Shortly after the Premier started his address, the Premier interrupted him to announce the fact that several distinguished guests had entered the hall, including Tom Lambton East, William Guthrie, M.P.P., Lambton West, Hugh Plaskett, M.P., Toronto and said Mr. Hepburn: "One of Canada's outstanding citizens, Lionel Conacher, of the Montreal Maroons." The guests received a splendid ovation from the audience.

Address of The Hour

A sally of laughter and applause greeted the Premier's announcement.

KING ASKED TO CHOOSE BETWEEN THRONE AND SWEETHEART

While a tired and haggard monarch fought his lonely fight at a country home in Berkshire and a beautiful woman sought sanctuary from publicity's glare in a French villa, the throne of the world's greatest empire hung in the balance. King Edward, opposed by the British government over his desire to marry his American sweetheart, Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, opposed by his own family and by the church he nominally heads, was reported ready to yield his throne rather than his love for the American beauty. Crowds cheered the monarch in London and all England watched anxiously the struggle, many feeling that it would be better to keep the King at any cost rather than see him abdicate. His Majesty is shown at LEFT in his most recent picture taken at Armistice Day. CENTRE is the throne in the throne room of Buckingham palace, London, and at the RIGHT, Mrs. Simpson.

NORWEGIAN SHIP REPORTED BOMBED

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 8 (AP) — The Norwegian foreign office was informed today the 1,196-ton Norwegian steamer Gulnes had been bombed by insurgent Spanish airplanes while entering Seville harbor, and that one seaman had been killed.

The ship-owner said the vessel was carrying a cargo of ore from Oporto to Seville to collect a cargo of ore. She never has carried contraband, he added.

The foreign office is conducting a rigorous investigation.

PUNCH HAS WORD IN ROYAL CRISIS

London, Dec. 8 (CP)—Under the caption "Hesitation", the humorous weekly Punch in its main cartoon today depicts the King, wearing the ribbon of the Order of the Garter and his royal robes, pondering, halfturned towards the ancient coronation chair in Westminster Abbey.

Letters pour into newspaper offices from private correspondents on the situation. The more responsible newspapers decline to publish them which do appear reveal in many instances an entire failure to grasp the problem as revealed in the Prime Minister Baldwin.

One correspondent writes: "As a child of 13 I sincerely hope that our beloved king will marry the lady of his choice."

Vote of Members Recorded Shows Majority of 10 to 4.

BY-LAWS PASSED

Six Questions in All to be Voted on at Municipal Elections

After prominent men in the business life of this city had advised the Belleville Gas Company that a "fair offer" of $80,000 had been received from H. A. Waller of Buffalo, N.Y., for the Belleville Gas Plant, the members at their regular meeting on Monday evening passed the recommendation authorizing sale submitted by the special gas committee at a special meeting on Thursday night last by a vote of 10 to 4. Those favoring the recommendation, that the sale be made were Mayor Hill, Aldermen Bateman, Jennings, Safe, Baragar, Domenico Rashing, Barton, Armstrong and Lewis, while those opposed were Aldermen Thompson, Wells, Arnold and Clapp. Under the headings of motions the council, however, submitted the whole question to the ratepayers at the next municipal election by passing the motion. "That the City Solicitor be authorized to prepare an agreement of sale and the necessary by-law to authorize the same by the assent of the electors covering the sale of the Gas Plant to Mr. H. A. Waller for the purchase of the Belleville Gas System and that the by-law granting a three per cent assessment of $30,000 for 19 years on said Gas System ad for submission to council soon as approved and executed by purchaser."

Many By-Laws Passed

The Council also presented a number of by-laws containing questions, which will be submitted to the ratepayers for their ratification or refusal at the next Municipal election. By RAY P. CRONIN
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Manila, Dec. 8 (AP)—The peaceful farming valley of Cagayan was a devastated graveyard of untold dead today.

Flood waters of the mighty Cagayan River, largest in the Philippines, swept thousands to their death, official Philippine army advices said, and left other thousands starving.

Authorities, marshalling the communication, city relief agencies, expressed fear the full extent of what they termed "the greatest disaster the Philippines has ever suffered," would never be known.

Population of entire barrios — hamlets, clusters of native huts — were wiped out. The river, swelling by Luzon Island's heaviest rainfall, swept down the populous valley at 4 a.m. last Friday, trapping most of its victims as they slept.

POPE IS ADVISED TO CONTINUE REST

Hope to Leave Bed And Resume Duties Ahead by Child Weather

Vatican City, Dec. 8 (AP)—Sudden chill weather dashed the hopes of Pope Pius XI to leave his bed today, but reports of his cold routine of active duty.

Bulletin continued improvement in the Holy Father's condition, Vatican officials said, but was considered unwise for him to risk exposure.

His Holiness, recovering from a paralysis of the legs, was particularly disappointed because it was the day of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception with its customary Mass.

His discomfort was caused somewhat when a private mass was held for him in the sick room. Mass and his royal robes, the Pope's private secretary, conducted the ritual present Pope the Holy Father and Communion.

After a noon visit Dr. Amleto Micheli, the Pope's physician, greatly satisfied with his patient's progress and expressed the hope the Holy Father might be able to leave his bed on Thursday if his improvement continues at the present rate.

City and District News

CITY MARKET IS ALMOST DESERTED

The city market was practically deserted for the mid-week market today. One lone vendor of farm produce, a lady bravely clad in cold wintry blasts that howled across the square, but found customers as scarce as fellow-vendors. Two loads of coal wood, cut into stove lengths, were also displayed for sale. The pre-Christmas market is expected to be more in evidence on Saturday when a large offering of fowl will doubtless welcome potential purchasers.

ADJOURNED INQUEST ON TRUDEAU DEATH

The adjourned inquest to inquire into the death of forty-year-old Morris Trudeau, who died in Belleville hospital on Nov. 30th last from injuries received by a truck driven by a motor vehicle at Tweed, will be resumed this evening at 7.30 p.m. in Police Court before Coroner F. G. Wallbridge and his jury. There are a number of witnesses to be examined by Crown Attorney R. G. Donnan, K.C.

QUIETNESS PREVAILS IN POLICE CIRCLES

Activities proved none too brisk in and around local police circles during the past week-end, a decided betting necessary in the city. A local motorist was hailed by police while driving his automobile on Front Street with three other passengers in the car at a speed of twenty miles per hour, contrary to the Highway Traffic Laws. The name and address of the offender was taken and charges will be preferred against him. Eleven transients wended their way to the police station last night and requested warm accommodations for the night. Motorcycle Policeman Earle Perdue reported no major accidents on local or adjacent highways, despite the ice and slippery condition of the highways.

Rotarians devoted the Monday meeting to a discussion of Boys' Work with Rev. Bert Howard, Principal of Albert College, as guest speaker, introduced by Harry Ackerman. Rev. Fourth Term

This is the fourth year in succession that Mr. H. Cory has been chosen as Mayor of Trenton, 1933-1934-1935-1936, and on each and last year he defeated Councillor R. J. Whitley and yesterday Councillor J. Henry LaFleur. Councillor Mayor Cory and J. Henry LaFleur thanked their supporters in the large gathering in the town hall following the final results. Mr. LaFleur said he wasn't a bit sore or sorry he was defeated and hoped the Mayor and Council would work together during the next year and if he could help in any way he would be willing to do so, and concluded with saying Henry LaFleur is true towards municipal affairs next year as I did this, I will try again. Mayor Cory in a kindly and cultured, that since the election campaign started he was the best he was for the mayor because he knew the people, who he has never so faithfully would not let him down, and promised he would service the municipality during 1937 the same as he had in the previous years. The relief man will be taken care of and I will see that none of them starve, the Mayor said. And ratepayers, the load you are carrying is not going to be any heavier.

Chairman of the meeting Mr. J. Potts introduced the speakers.

Mayor Cory in a kindly and cultured, that since the election campaign started he was the best he was for the mayor because he knew the people, who he has never so faithfully would not let him down, and promised he would service the municipality during 1937 the same as he had in the previous years. The relief man will be taken care of and I will see that none of them starve, the Mayor said. And ratepayers, the load you are carrying is not going to be any heavier.

Stage Latest Election Scenes As Voting Time Draws Near

East Hastings By-election Goes Down in History For Interest

The stage is all set. Apart from a few finishing touches which will be added tonight, the scene is ready for one of the most bitterly contested political battles in the history of the Province have withdrawn to the safety of the ringside and left the spotlight for publicity to glare upon the "Two Harolds" as they climb into the ring tomorrow in a fight to the finish to decide the party championship of the riding of East Hastings. For the first time in the history of this oblong riding extending some ninety miles south from the Bay of Quinte, the whole glare of publicity will be focused upon it, the eyes of the province will be turned toward it as the political gladiators abet fight and counterfeit logas and forge to the fight which will mark this riding as one of the testing grounds for the policies of the present administration.

Campaign is Intense

The campaign has been fought intensely by the factions of both parties from start to finish. The great political parties of the province have thrown all their resources into the fray with the realization that the contest will probably an expression of opinion of the people of the province respecting the present government. Hours of political eloquence for and against the government have been hurled into the fray. Snowbound roads in the northern parts of the riding have been traversed by cars of political stalwarts. Tiny halls which reverberated to the strains of important than the annual chicken supper which is the signal for certain tones of political speakers outlining or criticising governmental policies. Miles and miles of roads have been travelled by members of both parties. The winding, treacherous curves of the highways in the northern part of the riding have thrown the cars of political aspirants floundering through snowdrifts, at times lost, and unable to find their destination.

Riding is Mecca

The riding has been the mecca for the newspapermen from all province. Tens of thousands of words have flickered over telegraph wires nightly, and thousands more pounded out on typewriters. Hotels and boarding houses have done a land office business. In fact, one hotel proprietor is reported as saying that he hoped the campaign would last another month.

Newspaper advertising took a decided boost. County and city papers carried ads of the opposing activities of the warring factions.

Electors Keenly Interested

And the intense interest shown in the campaign has not been confined to the party leaders and stalwarts alone. Throughout the length and breadth of the riding momentous question of the day has been given secondary consideration by the electorate. Old and staid women, veterans of many a political campaign, youngsters just out of, or in their teens have been given a fine insight in the workings of political machinery. In the small town and villages, the farmhouses and private homes of villagers and country residents, the grocery store meeting places at the "Four Corners" in various parts of the riding have been but one topic during the past three weeks. The qualities of leaders and candidates as well as the important political questions of the day have been subjected to the keenest scrutiny. Before have the electors of a riding in this province shown such keen interest in the outcome of a political battle as has been shown in East Hastings.

Just Before the Battle

Today, the day before the electors go to the polls, a tense undercurrent is sensed. With both sides symphonies of victory, and reriing on their campaign laurels with leaders awaiting to put the finishing touches on the campaign in the final meetings which are being held in the riding, the electors of the riding are awaiting with tense expectancy for polling day when the results of guesses are rife as to the actual outcome. The campaign has extended over the past two weeks is missing and groups of both parties are holding meetings throughout the townships in now tones. Today East Hastings and the Province are sitting back awaiting with almost baited breath the final result of one of the most important by-elections ever held in the Province of Ontario.

ALD. JENNINGS GLAD IT'S OVER

Chairman of Special Gas Committee Instrumental in Sale of Plant

Alderman Jennings, chairman of the special committee on gas and the city council saw the fruits of months of labor bear fruit when the members ratified the recommendation of the committee. "that the gas plant be sold for $90,000," Mr. H. A. Walter of Buffalo, N.Y." Alderman Jennings has given much of his time to investigation of the plant under the Ontario Municipal Committee and has guided the destinies of the plant since it was taken over by the City. The committee man has contacted all the gas experts of this province and some in the United States as to the possibility of buying the plant and Mr. Walter came through with a legitimate bid, which has been accepted and will be consummated by a sale as soon as the agreement is ratified by the electors.

Whilst the question of sale was under discussion in the council last night, Alderman Jennings was always ready to produce figures and facts as he had collected them, when any question was asked. He told a representative body of citizens, who were present, that he had contacted six firms as to the purchase of the plant and when a bid was made, there was not as much spot cash offered and after all things were considered, I considered the $80,000 offer a fair one and so recommended to my committee. He also stated, that the ovens would need resitning next year and that would entail an expenditure of $5,000, this amount being taken care of by the purchaser, so in reality the city is receiving $85,000 for the plant. Alderman Jennings also stated, that expert advice had been given and although the report was not on the minutes of the Council any member could have the information if it was required.

After the Council had passed the recommendation, Alderman Jennings thanked the members for carrying it and hoped there would be no ill feeling for those who had opposed it, against him. "It was a clean discussion," said Alderman Jennings "and I am sure it was the best things to do in the interest of the ratepayers."

DENIES REFERENCE TO FRENCH PEOPLE AS DEFEATED RACE

Toronto, Oct. 7.—Dec. 8 —Col. George Drew, Chief-Lieutenant to the Hon. Earl Rowe, leader of the Conservative party in Ontario, has issued the following official statement regarding remarks made by Mitchell Hepburn, Premier of the Province, with respect to his high regard for and admiration of Canadians of French descent:

"Mr. Hepburn has basely condemned himself," stated Col. Drew. "He is quoted as having had referred to the French as a 'conquered race.' Then at Plainfield on Friday, he is reported to have attributed to the effect that I had referred to the French as a 'defeated race.' The three affidavits he produced as evidence to support his contention that I had used these words, speak for themselves.

"Harry Hawken, J. E. Bradden and Jimmie Hoskin who made the affidavits, are persons who are all boys connected with the Conservative party. This is the party of which the Premier of this Province seek to arouse French feelings against those who have always sought their good-will, and it is significant that Hepburn should think that these three boys were not prepared to swear that I had referred to the French as a 'conquered' race.

"On the other hand", continued the statement, "I have many affidavits from Liberal supporters of East Hastings who have sworn that far from using these words I would have given offence to Canadians of French descent, whose highest ideals in terms of the great race which shares with the British responsibility for the future welfare of Canada. I have an affidavit to that effect from the Rev. C. O. Besser, Anglican Minister at Plainfield, as follows:

1. That I was in the chairman at a meeting held at Plainfield on November 27 last in the interests of Dr. Harold E. Welsh, the Conservative candidate in the present election in East Hastings;

2. I heard the address of George A. Drew who spoke at the said meeting in the interests of the said Dr. Harold E. Welsh;

3. THAT he at no time in his speech referred to the French as 'conquered", nor did he use any words which could convey that impression;

4. THAT he described the historical steps by which Canada's nationhood had been established in Canada, commencing with the period which existed at the time of the capture of Quebec;

5. THAT he spoke of the French in Canada in the highest terms and referred to the way in which Canada depended on the harmonious co-operation of the two great races which were brought together at that time.

"THAT every statement in his speech referring to the association between the British and French Canadians expressed admiration for the French and the hope that by a frank discussion of our problems misunderstanding could be avoided.

"I also have affidavits to the same effect from the Hawley Gray, Reeve of Thurlow Township, and from Ellis, Forrester, Hamilton, of Madoc, all of whom were on the platform that night and without a few feet of me during my speech. I have here many other affidavits from men and women of the highest standing in the community, whose experience and outlook on life can rather strikingly with that of the three minors who did wait some time before they cast their first vote.

"No one has been more insistent than I have that the welfare of Canada demands wholehearted cooperation and understanding between Canadians of French and British descent. I have endeavored to shoulder with French Canadians and their leaders. I was in the line in Northern France and heard the heavy thunder of the Battle of Vertrelle. The French proved for all time that they will stand shoulder to shoulder.

"Many French Canadians whom I met in those days are still among my dearest friends. Mr Hepburn was not then so concerned about the welfare of the French."

GAS PLANT SALE

nicipal Board of Education and a grant of $1,300 a year to the band will be submitted. The questions in all with the additional gas purchase will be submitted and the questions will be as follows:

(1)—"Are you in favour of providing by means of taxation for establishment and maintenance of a fund consisting thereto $1,000 annually for the support and aid of a band of music and for making grants and other grants from such funds to any band or to the members thereof?".

(2)—"Are you in favour of the formation of a Public Utility Commission under the provisions of the Public Utilities Act in which would be vested the control and management of all Utilities owned and or operated by the Corporation of the City of Belleville?

(3)—"Are you in favour of an application being made to the Legislature to pass an act reducing the number of members of the Council to six Aldermen and a Mayor?"

(4)—"Are you in favour of an application being made to the Legislature to pass an act empowering the Council to appoint and employ a City Manager, having such authority to manage and control generally the administration affairs of the Corporation of the City of Belleville and to perform such duties as the Council from time to time may define?"

(5)—"Are you in favour of the formation of a Municipal Board of Education?"

Can't Drive Over Hose

There was also passed a by-law to authorize the holding of the Municipal elections and appointing of the Deputy Returning Officers and the Poll Clerks. A by-law to make it an offence to drive over fire hose, while firemen are fighting a fire in the city was passed and the penalty was set at $10 for each offence upon conviction.

Before the Council went into their regular session, Mayor Hill called upon any, who wished to speak to the question of sale of the gas plant and E. V. Illsley, E. W. Rowsome, W. C. Mikel and W. H. Panter. Each of these citizens spoke briefly and each expressed the opinion, that the plant should be sold. Mr. Illsley, the first speaker, believed, that the only problem was not the making of the present Council but although the offer might be raised, it was an urgent necessity to dispose of the plant and an offer might not remain open the Council should not let it slip from their hands.

Mr. E. W. Rowsome, stated that he had given the gas question considerable attention during the past few years and "I know the Ontario Shore Gas Company made a small profit in January and February but I don't believe there is a man in this city who can operate this plant efficiently and I think it should be sold but in order attached to protect the consumer."

Not Municipal Enterprise Claim

W. C. Mikel, who has had considerable Municipal experience with the gas plant expressed himself quite forcibly on the Council accepting the offer made. He believed the plant should be operated by a private concern and not by the municipality but also stated, that the man making the purchase should show his strength by depositing a substantial sum to clinch through with the bargain. He was informed by Alderman Jennings, that Mr. Walker was willing to post $5,000 to bind the bargain and the speaker thought that amount would do. Then Mr. H. Panter stated, that factory as Mr. Mikel mentioned he had been intimately connected with the gas plant in previous years and he did not agree with those, who said it was a white elephant proposition. It can be made to pay but I think the Council should sell at a offer though I would have liked a price of $100,000 better", said Mr. Panter.

After this discussion, an offer was offered and after the regular business had been completed, Alderman Bush rose, who was in the chair read the recommendation of the Executive Committee, that the plant be sold for $80,000 and asked if there was any discussion before a vote was taken.

Member Opposes

Alderman Wills—"I am of the same opinion I expressed on Thursday night, that more information should be given to the Council before we commit ourselves to this sale. The net debt against the plant is $195,000 and in one year there was a net operating profit of $17,000 and for this reason, why we cannot make this same amount now. We were only getting $1,000 a year from The Ontario Shore Gas Company but we were told by the company that there would be a net operating profit of from $7,000 to $10,000 a year under the supervision of the Council. That statement was not denied on Thursday night. Why is the statement not true now. I don't think $80,000 is a fair offer if that income can be made. I am definitely opposing the sale until I can get more knowledge on the question than I have at the present time. There is no report on the minutes of the Council. Yes, we have received casual reports but nothing that can be turned to in years to come. I found upon investigation that Mr. Palmerston was on the payroll of the City at the present time."

Alderman Sale—"The indebtedness can't be avoided and if the plant should have made more money, there would not have been the indebtedness to carry. I think the plant should be privately owned and I am hearing in accord with the sale but would have liked to have seen a bigger offer."

Alderman Armstrong—"I am still of the opinion, that the City could have made as much out of the plant as did the Ontario Shore Gas Company and I object to this statement, now but this is a different problem. Here we have a cash offer of $80,000 with a fixed assessment of $20,000 for ten years and the whole matter after approval of the Council should be placed before the people for ratification. The only salvation for the progress of the plant is increased consumption and it is an established fact, that 75 per cent of the gross returns go into operating cost. Our gross returns are $35,000 and 25 per cent. of that amount is $8,350 and we can manufacture between 250,000 to 275,000 cubic feet of gas every 24 hours yet our consumption is only one third of that amount. In Hydro which we own, we have a serious competitor and as long as we allowed the Shore Gas Company to ride on the shoulders of the taxpayers the company was willing to do it. To get increased consumption this Council will have to make a large outlay and the question is one is, are we going to take out of the public purse to extend a Utility that is directly working against Hydro. In view of all these facts I am in accord with the sale."

Stand to Lose in Time

Alderman Barlow—"I have had very little to say on this question and I have been convinced all along that the city should get rid of the plant as early if they keep supervision of the plant. The Council has the authority to sell the plant but not to fix the assessment but I think we should pass the recommendation and then put the whole matter up to the ratepayers for their consideration. I have talked to a large number of taxpayers since Thursday night last and all are of the opinion, we should accept the offer before the Council. The price is a little below what we should get for the plant but I understand that $5,000 will have to be spent soon and therefore we are getting $85,000 for the plant".

Mr. W. E. Rowsome—"I understand we have been told that can be put up for $20,000 which will supply all the needs of the City."

Alderman Clapp—"If a water gas plant can be put in for that amount why is this man paying $80,000. We were told that the profits would be between $7,000 and $10,000 and why can't the city operate the plant and make that amount. I am going to oppose the sale but if it passed the whole question of sale and assessment should be left to ratepayers for their decision."

Alderman Jennings—"We have always spoken of the profits as gross and not net."

Alderman Wills—"The profit is the difference between the gross receipts and the actual expenditures."

Alderman Cushing—"We are ready for the vote."

Committee Complimented

Alderman Barlow—"I don't think that I have ever heard what the definite profit will be but only that the City could show more profit than the Ontario Shore Gas Company, I think the committee has done splendid work and from the report we received from a municipality that does not wish to be disclosed I am convinced that the deal is all right and I will vote to sell the plant."

Alderman Lewis—"This is an open and shut case. We might get $5,000 more for the plant and lose the $80,000 offer. I don't think the plant is worth what we think it is and I think the committee has given a true statement of the conditions of the plant. I am surprised at Alderman Wills, who has defended the finances of the City so admirably during the year to advise having an expert opinion on the worth of the plant. We spent $20,000 once for expert advice. The offer received is fair, I believe the Company will increase the mains and also enlarge them, which will give some clip-work, the company will pay in about $1,500 in taxes each year, and I am of the opinion that the Company making the offer is financially sound."

Mayor Hill—"I have heard a lot about net profit but I have yet to find the member of the Committee, who has made such a report to the Council. In 1929, the profit was given as $17,000 but the Government report says we were $1,400 in the hole. Here we have an offer and I for one Council accepts it."

Not Enough Information

Alderman Arnott—"We were to get $500 a month from the Ontario Shore Gas Company and when the city took the plant over, I was of the opinion the City was going to make more than under the Company agreement. I don't think there is enough information laid on the table to vote intelligently on the question and I am going to oppose the recommendation but I will not have any quarrel with those who support it. I think the consumer should be protected for under the agreement made the purchaser can run away if he sees fit."

Alderman Domenico—"The sale looks good to me after I have studied the matter, although I would have opposed the sale had the vote been taken on Thursday night last."

At this point the vote was taken and carried by a majority of 10 to 4.

A recommendation that parallel parking be allowed only on the east side of Front Street from the Upper Bridge to Dundas Street during the months of December, January and February and introduced by Alderman Cliff Saragar but met defeat by a substantial majority. Alderman Saragar speaking for the motion thought that many minor and major accidents would be avoided if this was done and traffic would move faster under this arrangement.

An amendment to the fire pumper by-law, which was passed in January, 1936, was passed, allowing the pumper to be taken not more than sixteen miles from Belleville but only when the chairman of fire and the mayor had given their consent. Alderman Barlow also introduced another recommendation that firemen, who had under fire power service would be allowed ten days holidays with pay and those with over three years be allowed 14 days. The recommendation was passed. Alderman Barlow informed the council that the amendment was only complying with the statutory law of the Province.

J. R. Legate, superintendent at the Canada Cement Company at Point Anne forwarded a cheque for $25.00 to be used by the Firemen's Christmas Fund for the assistance that was given the Company on Friday last. The cheque was received with thanks.

Tickets to the "Y" were remitted for $538.90 and also to the Arena, but children will be allowed free skating from 2 to 6 on Wednesdays and from 9 to 11.30 a. m. on Saturdays, the same as last year.

FASCIST GUNS BLAST MADRID

Fear Renewed Attack on Capital is Contemplated

Madrid, Dec. 7.—(AP)— Fascist artillery blasted a path through the capital's suburbs today in what Socialists commanders feared was the preliminary to renewed efforts to storm the city.

Insurgent batteries crumpled block of bomb-riddled apartments with a heavy barrage in the Arguelles sector, hardest hit by yesterday's fascist air raids.

The steady pounding of shells in the devastated neighborhood, defence officers believed, portended an attack by the Fascists through Madrid's outskirts from that direction.

Others expected an insurgent drive from the northeast, until now a comparatively quiet sector, after 32 tri-motored bombers rained explosives in the vicinity of Guadalajara.

"HAVE 7,000 PLANES, 100,000 PILOTS"

Corps Commander Khripin, of the Re darmy aviation section, warned Nazi Germany today that Russia has seven thousand aeroplanes and 100,000 pilots ready if the Nazis feel that they wish to put into action their threat against the Ukraine. ABOVE, some of the soldiers of the Soviets are shown in a mass manoeuvre of landing behind enemy lines with parachutes. They have developed the most air-minded army of all the great nations with parachutes widely used.

BY-ELECTION

The most intense and intensive election in the history of the riding of East Hastings is ending Tuesday night sees the final appeal and Wednesday the die is cast as to the political complexion of the seat in the Ontario Legislature.

The first by-election of the Hepburn Government and the first opportunity of voting since the Hon. Earl Rowe, M.P., was elected Conservative Leader in Ontario, the campaign in the riding naturally brought in such a plentitude of speakers and resulted in a constant bombardment on the issues by the two political parties. Scarcely a hamlet, settlement, has been passed by in this predominantly rural riding in the choice of places of meetings. From far north to the south boundary the political batteries have been constantly firing night after night.

East Hastings as a riding is one of the most extensive in the province, twenty miles or so wide and over ninety miles long bringing its area up to nearly two thousand square miles.

The issue is now in the hands of the electors. At eighty-four polls the votes are to be registered, scattered over sixteen municipalities. There has been an advance poll in Thurlow.

ANIMALS IN WINTER

"Our Dumb Animals," published by the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, contains in its December issue a poem "Christmas Eve" by Judy van der Peer, which strikes a responsive chord in the hearts of those who think of animals in cold and desolate months of the year. Taking an old tradition about the Birth at Bethlehem, the poetess makes a plea for animal life at this time that they may have a share also of Yuletide enjoyments and the happiness of the season. The verses read:

CHRISTMAS EVE

'At midnight when it's Christmas Eve,
When shining stars are frosty bright,
They say the cattle all kneel down
In memory of a Holy Night.

'I do not know if this be true,
But if the patient creatures pray
I can understand it, too,
I can know the words they say.

"Oh, God, look down on us tonight
With pity in Thine eyes,
If Thou hast time we beg of Thee,
Hear our anguished cries.

"Not always are we cared for well,
Many and cruel the stripes we bear;
Many of us hungry, cold,
Many are dying everywhere.

"Soften the hearts of men for us,
For we have served man well,
And often the sorrows that we know
Are more than words can tell."

Under the cold and frosty stars,
Thinks of the cattle kneeling,
While children sing of joyous things,
And Christmas bells are pealing.

SCIENCE AND SOCIETY

"It is to the engineer that we must look for guidance," remarked Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, in his discussion of perplexed times before the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education. If our problems are not all technological, at least they demand the kind of analysis that we associate with science. It was, therefore, good to learn from others who addressed the society that the technical schools are aware of their new responsibilities, and that their curricula now include courses in the history of civilization, economics, psychology and the humanities. As a result, the engineering student of today should go out into the world realizing that the bridge or the central station system that he designs is not only a technical convenience but another extension of an artificial environment.

But there was also force in the objection raised by an engineer who reproved the intechnical for their ignorance of science and technology. It is clearly not enough for scientists and engineers with the conviction that they are builders of a civilization. Lawyers, artists, business men must be made aware of what Millikan, Einstein, Compton, the others mean in their lives. At least they should understand the rudiments of science, know something of its methods and ideals, grasp the meaning of the new discoveries made in the laboratories of the physicists, geneticists and biochemists, and realize that science is in the throes of an upheaval which will have consequences as profound as those that followed the publication of Galileo's and Newton's works. So a new outlook is demanded not only from engineers but from legislators, public officials, statesmen, heads of huge industrial enterprises. Here we go to the very roots of education. We need eclectic teachers who will reveal the cultural aspects of science and technology to the students who take the arts courses.

Back we must go, then, to the days of the Greeks and Romans, when a man of the world knew the science of his time, as well as history, philosophy, poetry. To be sure, the science was simple enough, but to build upon it a philosophy that would relate life to the universe was a task that taxed all the resources of the intellect. Much of that ancient spirit survived well into the eighteenth century. Franklin, for example, called himself a "natural philosopher" meaning that he and others like him were probing into the secrets of nature and molding a philosophy of life. We must teach science in this sense. That done, advanced thinkers will find it easier to present their proposals and society will move on with less friction and internal resistance.—New York Times.

NOVEMBER LEAVES

The beech tree rustles golden leaves until
The early dark ascends the pathless hill....
That shining form was Helen's, though her bed
Will be where the anonymous snow is spread;

Through silver ash Queen Catharine swings her car
Into the white steppes of the rising star.
The earth her ground foot touched has something bright
Upon it like the memory of light.

At the final gorge of dark, a hemlock stands
Reading the sky with strange, uplifted hands.
So Sappho stood and read the murmuring sea,
And in her voice was immortality.

ARE OLD FASHIONED WINTERS COMING BACK? By old fashioned winters we mean plenty of snow but not too much plenty for sleigh riding, tobogganing, skiing, snowshoeing, and all that kind, of thing—cold, bright, sparkling nights with everything crackling and a bright moon shining, the nights we love best to remember, mostly connected with outdoor skating, snowshoeing, or sleighing parties in the days when sleighs fitted with straw, and the horses stepping out in time with the music and laughter filling the air Certainly we are getting more snow, but can we ever recapture the thrills of the healthy outdoor fun of Canadian winters when Dad was a gay young blade with IT enough to cause many a maidenly heart to flutter In interesting to note what in this reminiscent mood that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company is running special excursion trains to the Laurentians for ski parties. Fourteen inches of snow is reported on the ski trails. Trains leave Montreal Saturday and Sunday for the Laurentians and are well patronized. In the United States week-end excursion trains for various sports have long been popular, and Manhattanites are whisked away up in the Adirondacks for skating and ski-ing and we presume Cocktail Parties which seem to be a sidekick to sport as practised by the "Four Hundred."

MANY MEN WHO ATTAINED PROMINENCE IN LIFE AND LETTERS served an apprenticeship at the printing trade. Sir Mackenzie Bowell took great pride in relating his experiences as a "dirty" little "Printer's Devil", the butt of all printer jokesters and the perpetrator of more jokes of his own making than could be counted. Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, sub, was pictured on the Front Page of the United States press recently in his shirt sleeves in the composing room of one of his two newspapers, making up the last page and placing the last "stick" of type there. "Making up" is really a fine art, says the New York Times, which mentions the election-night rush when the editor and "make-up" must work as one man. The Times notes that General Robert E. Lee as President of Washington College included in his recommendations the establishment of press scholarships, not exceeding fifty, for young men intending to make practical printing and journalism their business in life. At that time Dr. Freeman notes in his "Life of Lee" most of the country weeklies and journals were owned and operated by practical printers who were also the editors. Often the editorials were written at the case," not even penned, but put into type as they were composed by the editor in front of his type case with his stick in hand. And we might add, moments the Times, some of those editorials put together in the days and nights of an earlier century when the two men were one, turned out to be classics, or perhaps had a great bearing on public issues."

Debate Position of Church Leader If King Persists in Unpopular Marriage

By HARRY LEVIN

Central Press Canadian Correspondent

New York, Dec. 8—Should the present crisis between King Edward and his ministers be settled and His Majesty continue with his plan to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson, will silver-haired, 73 year old Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, archbishop of Canterbury, primate of the Church of England and Metropolitan, perform the ceremony?

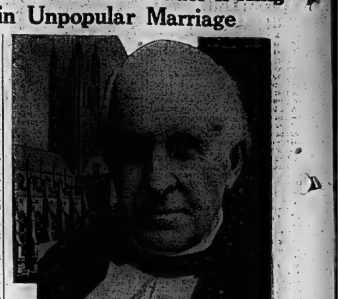
Ceremonially and traditionally, the archbishop of Canterbury must officiate at both Edward's coronation and his marriage. Whether their conflicting attitudes will permit such activities is a question that no one perhaps knows except themselves.

The archbishop is very independent-minded, and there have been rumors that he has disapproved of such a union.

The archbishop, who does not agree with others' opinions on many subjects, has an interesting background, as has the high clerical office which he fills.

Four centuries ago King Henry VIII expelled the Catholic Church, divided his ecclesiastical realm into two diocese, the archbishopric of York for the north of England; the archbishopric of Canterbury, containing London, the capital, became the more important.

And down the centuries, always his grace, the archbishop of Canterbury, has officiated at all state occasions, such as the births, marriages, coronations and deaths of Britain's monarchs.



Archbishop Lang is an astute diplomat, well versed in the art of behind-the-scenes strategy. A sagacious, energetic, acid-tongued churchman, the archbishop has been certain of his own destiny since 26, when, on the eve of his ordination, he refused instead he suddenly turned to take up holy orders, a career for which he had seen in London's notorious east end.

Dr. Lang's Great Moment

Given a pulpit in Leeds, northern England's industrial area, Dr. Lang remained three years, then went to Oxford university to become an instructor. His great moment came when, transferred to the famous shipping town of Portsea, directly across from the Isle of Wight, where Queen Victoria vacationed in summer, the young clergyman's Sunday sermons earned him praise from the queen.

When Queen Victoria suggested he dismiss two of his curates from his bachelor residence and marry instead, witty Dr. Lang rejoined, "Your Majesty, I can always dismiss a curate, but never a wife."

Small wonder that his charm soon was recognized. When the office of Bishop of Stepney was vacant, Dr. Lang, at 37, was appointed. When a few months later, he spurned an offer to become archbishop of Montreal, gossips said the young churchman had his eyes on the archbishopric of York, England's second highest Protestant post. They were correct. And as 44, aided by his friends—Queen Victoria's son, King Edward VII, and Prime Minister Asquith—Lang received the coveted York post.

Ascends to Archbishopric

His ascension to the archbishopric of Canterbury came a few years later, partly by accident. His predecessor, the 80 year old, gentle Dr. Davidson twice rebuffed by parliament over the publication of the English prayerbook, resigned. It was the first resignation from the Canterbury post in the history of the church, and within a fortnight Dr. Lang became the new archbishop.

At a bishops' conference in his residence several years ago, he said, "Speaking for myself, I believe we have almost ignored the fact that there has been a revolution in the customs of married life. I believe that some form of birth control should be permitted."

A bitter enemy of Nazi persecution of the Jews, the archbishop now has moderated his tone. He has demanded, indeed, that the world recognize that Germany has a new and, perhaps, permanent set of rulers.

Close to King George

A bosom friend of the late King George, Canterbury held the hand of the dying monarch, and it was he who informed Edward, standing by, that he was the new king. Of the latter, the archbishop once spoke praisingly, "The Prince of Wales has brought to all classes and to all parts of the world, that personal touch which moves the whole empire."

The archbishop is considered, nevertheless, to be a leader among the British conservatives, who believe King Edward is "too liberal" in his views and actions.

What the archbishop thinks now may be inferred, say London observers, by his absence from a recent royal party at which Mrs. Simpson was an honored guest. Pillar of the church, steadfast friend and comforter of Queen Mary, the king's mother, Cosmo Cantuarius so far has been stiffly silent concerning Edward's supposed plans, even during the most fevered crisis England has seen in many a generation.

ment regarding Mr. Plaxton, in which he described him as being the Adonis of the Town of Oeomaus and one of the idols of Agnes Macphail's fancy. Quoted.

The Premier spoke in glowing terms of Mr. Hall and Mr. Whitesell. Campbell, "refused to volunteered to come down to Belleville and help me in my last campaign. He has been at great length." Mr. Hepburn said. "And I appreciate very much what he has done for me."

"I am not going to follow the campaign tactics of our opponents" said the Premier in the coming by-elections. "I am not my opponents individually. They have been going up and down the province saying in no uncertain terms — just what they think of me, but I am not going to do that for it would be an insult to you people."

"There is nothing of the hypocrite about me continued the Premier "I stand or fall by my record, naked straightforward."

Charging the Opposition with indecline leaving the campaign which were personal, the speaker said "the noted George Drew" had charged the French as being a "defeated race" in a statement which was not any racial hatred than any other" carried the Premier "and I object also to anyone who can do more harm. How attempted to do so by that statement I cannot see. Mr. Drew's statement had been made not as a meeting held the other night, people brought effluenza of the throat." The statement he been made, Drew also charged unfairly that "Hepburn is one of the public expenses" continued Mr. Hepburn, "and he says that a detail to this, but the toys at the prize table, who write the story recall the fact that I was not the most if you know I had been troubled with a bad throat and went south at my own expense, and furthermore I have the distinction of being the only Premier of Ontario who travelled at his own expense."

Mr. Hepburn also referred to the fire loss in the Northern Ontario woods we so heavy because the majority of the rangers were employed so stupid that they couldn't walk two miles in the bush without getting lost. I investigated this question and found that there was a greater majority of the fire-fighters were Tories, and those were the men who were lost in the woods. What I should have done was to reserves Mr. Hepburn axe and wield it again."

Mislead Story

The Premier ridiculed the story spread by the Tories and the Liberal Opposition to the effect, that the $15,000 paid for the now famous Duncan Marshall bull, was taken out of public funds. "Last year" said the Premier, "a group of Peterborough interests donated funds to enable Mr. Marshall to Scotland to purchase as grand champion bull, and proved it to the Province of Ontario as a gift. Now the Tories are trying to make you believe, that we paid for the bull from public funds to the Rex charges, that the Province became a party to a deal to the amount of $15,000 a day, the Premier stated, the latest in the succession of a certain statement from the Provincial Auditor, that the debt has actually been reduced by one million dollars. "If such were the case" he said, "we would be not borrowingmoney. And that is what we are not doing. We are going ahead."

"Mr. Rowe has questioned the veracity of my statements" he said claimed, that I bowdsat the official. I defend any statements able institution in Hastings the sum for five hundred dollars if he can show that I have returned soldiers of the province. These men are one hundred percent disability and as such become a charge of the province. They are held in high esteem. Regarding the statement made by Rowe, that we have reduced grants to the National Institute for the Blind this also is incorrect', declared the Premier, "we have given them their $50,000 grant this year just the same as we did the year before, and if Mr. Rowe will look that up he will find that I am speaking the truth."

Defending the measure which wiped out the Entrance Examination Fees for school children. Mr. Hepburn said "this was one of the first acts to wipe out this nefarious tax. And then Mr. Rowe says we took money out of the parents' pockets to the tune of one and one-half millions of dollars in school grants. I happen to know the situation regarding school grants better than Mr. Rowe. They were held back for a while. It is true, but I promised the people of Ontario that we would balance the budget, and I was determined to do it. I am glad these venins was equal to our expenses for the last three years."

No Authority For Statement

Turning to the Highways question, the Premier stated that "Henry had no authority to say that the government would assume the cost of the road construction." What Mr. Henry should have said is that he would introduce legislation to that effect. Which he has done as the minute we assumed office. When we took over 16,000 men working on the highways. It is impossible for any municipality to undertake a highway construction program of this magnitude" continued the Premier, "it is simply impossible. You cannot buy your gravel with your own money it took office and found we had a large funded debt, a huge overexpenditure that we had to meet, and a deficit in the Province of Ontario of $4,000,000 and no grant. We have also had to stretch the payments over a period of three years. Last year the Province of Ontario paid her first instalment and the year after next that will have paid her last because as far as the Government is concerned, not one cent will be charged back to the counties nor will it be in the future.

"I was surprised to hear the Tory speakers accusing us of that," said the speaker, "for know I until the Premier

The 3-Minute VapoRub Massage

Massage VapoRub briskly on the throat, chest and back (forward and below the shoulder blades). Then spread it thick over the chest and cover with warmed cloth.

It takes no time at all—does so much—this 3-Minute VapoRub Massage!

Almost before you finish rubbing, VapoRub starts to bring relief two ways at once—two distinct ways:

1: Through the Skin: VapoRub is also direct-applied the skin like a poultice or plaster.

2: Medicated Vapors. At the same time, its medicinal vapors, released by body heat, are breathed in for hours—about 10 times a minute—direct to the irritated air-passages. This combined poultice-and-vapor action hastens bringing-comfort-to irritation—helps loosen congestion.

While the thick patient relaxes into comfortable sleep, VapoRub keeps on working. Often, by morning, the worst of the cold is over.

Avoids Risk of Stomach Upsets

This safe, external treatment cannot possibly upset stomach, liver or stunt internal "clocking" in as apt to do. It can be used as often as needed, even on the youngest child.

Coronation Uncertainty Disturbs Fabric Trade

Manchester, Dec. 8 — (CP Cable)—Uncertainty regarding the coronation is having repercussions in many part of England.

In that Staffordshire district known as the Potteries, all work has been suspended on such wares as mugs and plates bearing royal portraits, including 25,000 mugs intended for Leeds schoolers.

Vitamin B Means Health for Quins

The Dionne Quintuplets are miracles of modern science. For this reason the entire world is interested in everything these five wonderful babies do, every incident in their lives, every decision made for them by the Ontario Government. No wonder that, when the staff of scientists experts who care for them chose oatmeal as the Quins' cereal, it became of nation-wide interest. For any oatmeal picked at the cereal for those irresistible little darlings becomes of the remarkable richness in Vitamin B. The importance of Vitamin B has been proven by medical authorities and food editors of leading publications. It is essential for healthy childhood. It is Nature's best defense against nervousness, constipation and poor appetite due to lack of that vitamin in the diet.

Therefore, oatmeal is full of body-building minerals, muscle-building protein, and energy-making carbohydrates. So the Quins are building health by eating Quaker Oats.

MRS. W. SIMPSON

Mrs. Simpson will remain at Villa Lou Vici until after the Christmas holidays.

It is said that "she has no present intention of going any other place."

Daily Press Conference at Cannes

With Mrs. Simpson's permission, Lord Brownlow will hold a daily press conference hereafter at the gates of the Villa.

It was at these gates that he said today:

"Mrs. Simpson is in, excellent health and it hasn't been necessary for her to see a physician."

Thus he denied rumors that the American divorcee's health had broken under the strain of the crisis.

The secretary which marked the first day's stay of the American visitor had virtually vanished. Even the guards failed more freely—if somewhat hesitantly about Mrs. Simpson' sexact movements.

Mrs. Simpson's Offer.

Yesterday's announcement of Mrs. Simpson's willingness to forego her love for King Edward came as a startling climax to her sudden departure from England.

Friends said her decision was taken only after she had telephone calls to the king at his Belvedere estate, where she was his guest until she decided her absence might ease the situation.

Lord Brownlow, repeatedly emphasizing that the statement was signed by the divorcee, made known decision in a Cannes hotel room to a group of reporters.

"Mrs. Simpson," he read from the document, "throughout the last few weeks has manfully wished to avoid any action or proposal which would hurt or damage His Majesty or the throne.

"Today her attitude is unchanged, and she is willing, if such action would solve the problem, to withdraw forthwith from a situation that has been rendered both unhappy and intolerable."

Lord Brownlow asserted Mrs. Simpson "does not propose so much as to remain for five or six weeks."

As he finished talking to reporters, Mrs. Simpson appeared at a window of the villa, but retired quickly when she saw the cameras below.

Lord Brownlow said she had taken a short stroll in the garden during the morning—the first time she had left the villa.

"You can easily realize Mrs. Simpson's position," said her spokesman.

"Yes, realize there is a tremendous interest and we want to appease the appetite of the press, but there isn't anything more I can tell you now."

He said he had not heard reports that a plane, with three passengers, had left London for Cannes.

"Nobody is expected here from London," he said.

Rome, Dec. 8 (AP)—Italian police attempted today to confirm reports Mrs. Wallis Simpson was contemplating a visit in Rome at the villa of Lord and Lady Charles Beresley.

Lord Berkeley, however, told the police officers he knew nothing of the reports nor any plans of the American woman to visit his home.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Nine Days a Queen" and "Love Letters of a Star"

Starting tomorrow the Capitol brings the best motion picture of the year, rated 4 stars in Liberty magazine.

A bride of a few days — looking happily into the future, anticipating a life in the seclusion of the country, away from the intrigue of the royal court—and then a messenger from London! The King is dead—long live the Queen—Queen Jane.

For nine days Lady Jane Grey, who did not want to be queen, ruled, and then came the imprisonment, and one of the greatest crimes of history.

The story of Lady Jane Grey, filled as it is with beauty and pathos, is told in "Nine Days a Queen," starring Cedric Hardwicke and Nova Pilbeam and featuring John Mills, Desmond Tester and Sybil Thorndike at the Capitol Theatre, starting tomorrow.

"Nine Days a Queen" opens with the death of Henry VIII. The story carries on from where his distinguished predecessor. "The Private Life of Henry VIII." left off. Henry's death brings his son Edward, a boy in his teens, to the throne of England.

The young king becomes the center of countless plots perpetrated by the scheming minister. Harassed, frail and suffering from a hereditary heart ailment, the young monarch succumbs to a heart attack after a short and turbulent reign.

Before his death conspirators have succeeded in aligning the King's cousin, Jane Grey, as heir there fourth in the life of succession, to follow Edward on the throne. Warwick has also forced her into marriage with his son, Lord Guilford. The marriage, however, is more welcome than the crown which she wears, alas, too briefly a time, for Mary Tudor, whose late activities won her the title of Bloody Mary, stages a successful campaign for her rights.

"Nine Days a Queen" is the first directorial undertaking of Robert Stevenson, and his work has been hailed as masterly.

Added Attraction

"Love Letters of a Star," which will open at the Capitol theatre as his No. 2 on the same program presents Rin-Tin-Tin in a mystery drama filled with tense situations, gripping thrills up to a surprise climax. The film, based on a Cosmopolitan Magazine novel by the master of detective fiction, Rufus King, relates the adventures which befall a wealthy family, whose daughter is driven to suicide by a blackmailer.

The scoundrel meets his death before the police investigation can point suspicion toward the family. They are followed by a man who calls the police. Attempting to board their yacht, they are hunted down by a detective who discovers the real criminal on the vessel. The method of trapping him and making him reveal his wrongdoing is one of the most striking ever filmed for the screen. The story of the killer is not known until the end of the picture.

A bright vein of comedy provides contrast for the drama. The principal parts are portrayed by Henry Hunter, Polly Rowles and C. Henry Gordon. The romantic interest is presented in the love affair between the characters played by Polly Rowles and Walter Gay.

If you like mystery, suspence, love with dramas, with enough romance and humor to make the story human, then be sure to see "Love Letters of a Star."

Ends Today

Ending today the Capitol presents a smashing double bill show with last complete show at 9.20. For mystery and thrills, "The Accusing Finger" and real old time fun, he laughs Olsen and Johnson in "Country Gentlemen."

AT THE REGENT

"A Woman Rebels" and "Mister Cinderella"

Again Katharine Hepburn comes to the screen in a "different" role and, as in the past when announcement has been made for a picture for the young star, the interest of picturegoers is keenly aroused. Naturally, there is always a good deal of speculation as to what she could do next inasmuch as she has established for herself a variety of characterizations. It has been the wise judgement on the part of her producers, RKO Radio, that has prevened her from being typed and as a result has increased her fan enthusiasm because her parts cannot be anticipated.

In "A Woman Rebels," Miss Hepburn plays Pamela, a warm, vital English girl eager for life and expression against the will of her straight-laced father whose precise and unwitting tyranny lead her into many tragic situations. An unfortunate romance changing the course of her life, and for years the sacrifices the protection of the Dowager Duchess of Stroke, a succeeding British diplomat, played by her co-star, Herbert Marshall.

Featured in support of the two stars are Elizabeth Allan, Donald Grisp, David Manners and Doris Dudley.

"Mister Cinderella," Funny

Cinderella in all of the mythical magic and glory of her entrancing fairy tales, would perhaps be sorely perplexed to match the present day adventures and modern conventions of "Mister Cinderella," the second feature comedy attraction on the Regent program. He is presented as realistically and elaborately in a series of pathetic romantic and comical situations that the spectator will regret this new Hal Roach opus is the most lavish and fast-moving comedy of the season.

Jack Haley, in the stellar role of "Joe Jenkins" who, down with a society complex, scores his greatest triumph in stages successes in "Good Nev" and "Follow Thru." Sympathetic sighs and uproarious laughs follow the entry into high society to a Back Bay drawing room with his immortal pantter. The fun increases when the transportation magnate's daughter takes him to his fairly godfather.... a Boston playboy of wealth whose clothes and manners he aped.

Left alone in a maze of yachts, speed boats and ultra-fashionable surroundings, Jack Haley was never more wistful and naive as he proceeds to solve big business and win his princess charming.

"Mister Cinderella" marks a new era for the elaborate and beautiful productions being given feature comedy and the cast represents outstanding celebrities in the realm of comedy. Lovely Betty Furness, Arthur Treacher and Raymond Wal-

Major League Nabobs on Eve Of Biggest Era of Trading in Baseball's History, Dean to Go

'Dizzy' is Bait Used by Cards to Commence Big Trading Deals

DEAN TO GIANTS?

World's Champion Yankees Stand Pat at Conclave in New York

(Paul McGeoch)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Dec. 8.—(AP)—Several important deals, including the much publicized transportation of the great Dizzy Dean to New York, Pittsburg or Cincinnati, were expected to pop on the big league player market today as the baseball czars met with a fifths and two counts on their intended victims.

After five days of dickering and ballyhooing their stock, in Montreal and New York, the Rickey baseball wars reported ready to fire on all fronts with trades and purchases involving a score or more of major league players. The Giants' big went so far as to send out word there would be an announcement of a deal but wouldn't give a hint as to what it would be.

This was the setup, club by club, of supply and demand:

National League

ST. LOUIS — Vice-President Branch Rickey is using all his salesmanship to peddle Dizzy Dean, but wants plenty of cash and a whole flock in return. Cincinnati and Pittsburgh seems out of the running with the Giants and Pirates running neck and neck for the great right hander.

Giants Need Infielder

NEW YORK — The Giants have made a deal, possibly with the Phillies for Lou Chiozza and Dolph Camilli for cash and Hank Leiber. They need a third baseman and another pitcher.

CHICAGO — Most have more pounds; Want Leiber and would give up third baseman Stanley Hack and maybe a pitcher, Burlet they don't want. Dean and that they won't trade; Outfielder Frank Demaree.

CINCINNATI—Need a pitcher and an outfielder who can hit. Ready to shoot the works on their Vets but keen to hold on to the youngsters.

PITTSBURGH — Need a catcher badly and not after Dean. Willing to trade almost anyone on the club to get new faces.

BROOKLYN — Burleigh Grimes believes he has repaired his infield with the acquisitions of Woodie English and Cookie Lavagetto from the Cubs and Pirates but wants outfield strength.

PHILADELPHIA — No meeting would be complete without a Phillie deal. They need players but they need money worse.

BOSTON—Everyone is a bit afraid of dealing with shrewd Bob Quinn, who has Wally Berger on the block—if he can get what he wants. That's plenty.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

NEW YORK—No one could come close to the Yankees last season so Manager Joe McCarthy asks: "What have we got to gain with a deal? Joe would like a pitcher but would like to buy him with cash.

Tigers Want Pitcher

DETROIT—The Tigers need a good pitcher and have been offered Wesley Ferrell, by the Red Sox, Buck Newsome by the Senators and John Whitehead by the White Sox. But every club wants Pitcher Eldon Auker and outfielder Gerald Walker. Cochrane wants to peddle one of his four left fielders.

CHICAGO—White Sox want Pitcher Jack Knott from St. Louis or Hurlers Oral Hildebrand or Thornton Lee from Cleveland. Also like the Yanks' Outfielder Myril Bob Johnson of the Athletics.

SCHICK DRY SHAVER

$16.50

Angus McFee JEWELERS SINCE 1880

Willing to give up Infielder Tony Piet and Pitcher Jon Whitehead.

WASHINGTON—After a good pitcher like Auker and a catcher like Rollie Hemsley of the Browns or Frank Pytlak of Cleveland. Ready to trade Buck Newsome. "Give us a good pitcher and a catcher," says Manager Cronin, "and we'll win the pennant in '37."

BOSTON—Not after Pinky Higgins of Philadelphia for third base in exchange for Bill Werber and cash. Would trade Pitcher Wesley Ferrell for what have you.

Indians Offer Vosmik

CLEVELAND — The Indians are eager to do some business deal with Joe Vosmik leading the moving day procession. Trying to swing a deal with the Browns with Vosmik and Bill Knickerbocker as bait.

ST. LOUIS — For some reason Rogers Hornsby is anxious to get rid of Hemsley and Flea Clifton. Wants infielders.

PHILADELPHIA — For the first time in memory of man, Connie Mack isn't interested in money. He's ready to trade but says he must have players, not cash, but the club owners can't believe him.

Both major leagues opened their sessions today but no startling news was expected. All clubs were worried about the security tax as affecting ball players who come and go after a month's work. The lively trail was up for discussion with club executives to solve the problem of raising the seams slightly on the ball so pitchers could get a better grip.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

Dr. James A. Naismith, University of Kansas, who devised the modern game of basketball back in 1891, was recently asked to clip the fundamental principles that underly the cage game. Dr. Naismith condensed the original rules, that still are in effect for the greater part, as follows: (1) that the player in possession of the ball must not make progress, while it is in his possession, (2) the goal is horizontal and above the heads of the players, (3) roughness is eliminated as far as possible by making it a non-contact game, (4) the ball belongs to the player at any time, that he can get it without making personal contact. These four rules are fundamental to the game and very necessary. It is rather interesting to note that 13 of the original 13 rules are still in full force and virtue. Basketball is one of the most popular indoor sports in the United States where, it is estimated, that over a million persons attend the game annually. Slowly the game is gaining in prominence locally and sport fans are desiring a real fast thrilling sport should avail themselves of the double header each Wednesday night at the Armouries.

That a seasoned young fellow, yes like a lot of others in this town should find set what's really going on when he is "retired" is severely," said S. E. "Sandy" Barrows when we encountered him at the O.H.A. regarding the grueling that was afforded the Belleville Intermediate "A" Hockey Clubs yesterday. "I did explain to the executive in the City of United Belleville and Trenton into an "A" league with Peterborough and the R.C.A.F., but seems kind of a grueling had to be arranged for the time being, so that's why we decided to give Belleville and Trenton a try. Unfortunately with the other two in the group having to travel so far to be able to compete in one group, however, and all games are to count in the final standings, the O.H.A. executive decide is completed, the club standing the highest, R.C.A.F. or Peterborough will advance in the O.H.A. intermediate "A" group, with the club standing better between Belleville and Trenton will automatically advance into the group "B" down. But, remember, all scheduled games in the so-called interlocking schedule must count as official games and must be played, however," explained Mr. Barrows much to our satisfaction and we believe to the satisfaction of the grand majority.

The Peterborough sport debunker, who always assumes that "I'm from Missouri" attitude, is of the opinion our comments registering objections relative to the elevating of the Redmen to an "A" classification owing to the loss of last year's players, reminds us of the "apple sauce" he says. There is no sye-wash or camouflage whatsoever about our statements, they're all too true, we're sorry to admit. He can rest assured neither Belleville nor Trenton are of an "A" rating, but are willing to co-operate and assist the "Fliers" and the Peterborough group, that is the Belleville and Trenton clubs are going great guns elsewhere. Take the Trenton brothers for example, of course there are other reasons for instance Belleville, unfortunately is not only gifted with much sport interested industries as the General Motors, Quaker Oats, Canada Cement Co., Packing Company and other factories as is the case in Oshawa and Peterboro. Right out at the present moment we know of two industries shutdown, may migrate to the Lit'lock City before spring. Simply because they can procure employees cheaper they say. Of course these are not the only reasons for the constant drain of overall in hockey and baseball in Belleville, by any means, but they will serve the purpose to enlighten Manager Peterborough as to one of the minor conditions, apart is confronted with in this city.

Owing to the inability of some of the players to get away from work, the local Redmen will meet their scheduled Kingston City League game with Masonic last evening. Manager Eddie Thomas was unable to partner together a team sufficiently able to provide adequate competition and after defaulting the game notified the Kingston City League hockey masters, that Belleville would withdraw from the loop. The R.C.A.F. "Fliers" will finish out their part of the schedule however.

Thomas K. Nicholson, well-known Kingston horseman, passed away at his home over the week end. Mr. Nicholson was formerly owner of Directum Murphy, which raced on Belleville tracks, and Baron Ontario, Harold Nicholson, Kingston hockey players, is a surviving son.

Harry Moore, Belleville and sports commentator of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, came out of temporary retirement to again get behind the Trenton Town League and, give it his much-needed support. Harry warns the league executive regarding the acceptance of out-side entries, fearing packed teams. "If Belleville is accepted, through the Yacht Club application, it should be stipulated that no O.H.A. players be permitted to play with that club," he says. For Mr. Moore's information we can assure him, that Manager "Doke" Smith has no O.H.A. players on his roster nor would he consider breaking up his last year's team to include them. Incidentally the Belleville Yacht Club's senior official application into the Trenton loop, we understand. The "Sailors" have a fair city team and should make good competition for the Trenton fans.

When the local Redmen defaulted to Masonic last night, the latter getting two points for a win, it elevated the Masonic's scoring to position ahead of the R.C.A.F. "Fliers" and the big game of the Kingston City League schedule is slated for Friday night when the "Fliers" meet the Masonic at the club that was defeated. The present standing of the league is:

	W.	L.	Pts
Masonic	3	0	6
R.C.A.F.	2	0	4
Garrison	1	2	2
Prescott	0	3	0
Napanee	0	2	0

Many big baseball deals are expected to break within the ranks of the big leagues within the next 24 hours, Tourists of baseball's big league baseball clubs are talking deals and the big league baseball czars are on the great Dizzy Dean. Both the Giants and the Pirates are angling for "The Great One."

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 8.—(AP)—Baseball men are scattered all over town. . . . Friends of Judge Landis say he'll not resign as he will not come up for re-election when his contract expires in five years. . . . And it's a safe bet the baseball baronet will not name a successor. . . . The judge looks better than he has in five years, but he gets pretty well fed up with this baseball business at times.

The Giants will announce a deal for a third catcher today. . . . Then Jimmy Dykes of the White Sox spied Joe McCarthy, in the Commodore lobby, he said: "If I had that guy's ball club I'd go home."

James J. Braddock wants that Joe Louis right (and the $300,000 guarantee that goes with it) because he believes a match with Max Schaeling will not draw peanuts. . . . If you want to know what that anti-Nazi boycott did to Schmeling just ask Mike Jacobs. . . . Mike is in Cleveland to look over arrangements for Louis' fight with Eddie Simms Monday night. . . . Manly Herberg, well known Broadway fight manager, has taken over Eddie Mader. Real side heavy, and is gunning for Leroy Haynes and Bob Pastor. . . . New York Baseball writers re-elected James Parnell Dawson of the Times and Garry Schumacher of the Evening Journal President and Secretary by acclamation. . . . Chef Stubbs is putting in the winter writing a book on baseball.

IF BALDWIN RESIGNS COULD ONE OF THESE CARRY ON?

Clement Attlee — Sir Archibald Sinclair — Winston Churchill

Should Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin resign in the crisis over King Edward's possible marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, one of these three British political leaders probably would take over the government. Winston Churchill, believed most likely to be the one, King Edward would select to head a new government is an independent, a Conservative considered too erratic for the Tories; Clement Attlee is the leader of the Laborite opposition to Baldwin, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, is the Liberal chieftain, whose party has all but disappeared. Both Attlee and Sinclair, however, are said to have told Baldwin they agree with him in the constitutional crisis and would refuse to form a new cabinet should he resign. As the Conservatives, under Baldwin's leadership, have a large majority in parliament, they could vote lack of confidence in any succeeding prime minister, force his resignation and a dissolution of parliament and thus bring about a general election. — Central Press.

CHURCHILL READY TO FORM NEW CABINET

Mighty warrior of Britain's political battleground, Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill is reported ready to form new government should the Baldwin cabinet resign in the face of King Edward's determination to marry his American friend. The brilliant Churchill considers it absolutely imperative that the King be kept upon the throne. Formation of a Churchill-led cabinet in the face of Baldwin's resignation would in all likelihood force a general election with the main issue the King's right to marry whom he chooses. —Central Press Canadian Photo

LONDON CROWDS CHEER KING AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

BRITISH PRESS BACKING COMPROMISE PLAN

LINK WITH CABINET

Close personal friend of King Edward and secretary of war in the Baldwin cabinet, Alfred Duff-Cooper (Above) was almost the lone hope among government members to effect a compromise between King and parliament that would prevent Baldwin's resignation or the King's abdication.

Swinging to the view a solution must be found whereby King Edward may marry Mrs. Simpson and still remain on the throne are the great majority of England's newspapers. Lord Beaverbrook (TOP LEFT) with his large chain of newspapers, including the Daily Express and the Evening Standard, and Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail and News-Chronicle have swung their weight behind this compromise plan. At the right a portion of the front page of the News Chronicle, received via radio, shows the stories which announced to a startled London the impending deadlock. Aimed to halt the spread of Communist doctrines, Soviet Russia charges bitterly that the pact is in reality a military alliance. "Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

"You mean," interrupted Rose, "that I am young and that Mr. Dexter, and more especially his friend, Senator Sutton, are very influential."

"I wouldn't put it quite like that" breathed the pleasant superintendent in silky tones. "Of course we feel that it has been rather a feeding in our scholastic cup that Mr. Dexter brought his son here from Riverport and placed him in one of our schools."

Rose was exasperated past all caution. She got to her feet and looked down at the gentleman. "He was expelled from his last preparatory school, Mr., Rogers," she reminded him.

"Quite," agreed Rogers, unmoved and unmoving. "Mr. Dexter spoke to both boys and myself at length about that. A mere boyish prank. Of course many of these fashionable preparatory schools pride their students entirely too much freedom, remove them very far from the steadying influence of their families. It is bound to go to their heads—"

He indicated that the interview was over. Rose left the office in a breathlessly cold night. She had done all that she could for Larry and young Mr. Dexter, she had seen his parents and had had a long interview in the school and so young Mr. Dexter would go merrily on his way and graduate with his class in June. That was that. She had been told to lay off Larry Dexter and that she would finish out her school year, and be rewarded. When the contracts came through she would not sign, as she was going to resign. Perhaps it would be just as well to set sleeping dogs lie—

Larry would be leaving at the end of the school year. He would not, she reflected, get into college. It would take a tutoring school to drag him in by the heels. But at least he would be graduated—

Why not wash her hands of the matter? Once he left school things would quiet down, be as they had been before.

But would they be? Would not his influence linger among the boys and girls, the girls, too—she is patently impressed by him? There were boys in the Junior classes, and in the lower classes as well who were flattered and proud of being a part of Larry's special "gang." If they saw him slide through school without working for any set time, get away with the things he was doing, without reprimand or punishment, might that not influence their own conduct? Rose was young, if not their entire lives.

Rose took herself to task—was taking too much—just because a boy drinks and gambles and shirks his work, just because a boy is idle and foul-mouthed and completely good-for-nothing, that is no reason why you should imagine a group of similar boys, following in his footsteps. Nor is there any think that he's smart, and that they'd be smart boys—because he is at a new student fashion?

She reached her house, rosy, breathing fast from the pace she had set herself. Her eyes were starry with anger they were caressed to black. On the steps she paused to look up at the sky...it crackled with Northern lights.

Chapter XXXV

Jonathan was waiting when she came in.

"For heaven's sake where've you been? Be grounded, untangling the long legs and rising from a comfortable chair by the fire. "I've bored your mother to death and eaten all the doughnuts in the house. What's up? You look pretty darned severe."

He put his arms around her kissed her cold lips, her colder cheek. The lips warmed under his. Rose, clinging herself, laughed. She loosed her toque on the table and flung her heavy coat on a chair. She said, "I'm mad!"

"Why?"

"Oh, I've just been to see John Rogers—" She stopped and sank down on the divan. She said, "Never mind that. Come over here and tell me all you have been doing."

But Jonathan's curiosity was aroused. He was standing over her, "Here, make a clean breast of it. I thought you'd been going to entertain me—I'm starved—by. What's the trouble?"

"Nothing." But she had gone too far. She'd have to satisfy him curiosity—to some extent. "It's just this—Professor Dexter's young sister. I couldn't pass him so I flunked him. Smiled, he was recalling all sorts of ructions in class and school generally. Mr. Martin ordered Lily why on earth Sally and elected to live here instead of at his own home. Rose, you're not going to be a doctor's wife who will not be able to see the sixth round bout in a crisp with equanimity. And after a while you won't look on midnight telephone calls as a sort of accolade setting me apart from other men. You'll wish my patients were in Timbuctoo. But Lord, Rose, if it were made too easy for me we wouldn't like it! It wouldn't be life and it wouldn't be marriage!"

"Yes," she said, "you're such a comfort. Always looking on the bright side." She pushed his head down to hers and kissed him. "And now," she said severely, "will you kindly go and get me a cup of tea? I'm starved."

Rose stayed an hour or so. Just before they heard Jonathan's ring at the doorbell, Sally caught her hand.

"You're lucky," she whispered, horribly lucky! I hope you know it."

"I do," Rose assured her, smiling. "I wonder" she added, sitting back against the pillows and closed her eyes. Her face, pale from excitement, was pinched and white. Rose regarded her with some anxiety. "Shall I call our physician?" she asked quickly.

Sally shook her head.

"No, I'm all right. Kim wouldn't let you call anyone. You should know, but I lost my baby a few weeks ago. Been sort of run down ever since. I'm going to be myself again pretty soon. Then I'll have a mechanical greeting and a fitted bright smile which displeased Kim. Rose, looking up from a contemplation of the sleeping face of the Floridan waters, was aware that Larry had come silently through the open door. He stood just inside the room to the hall and was surveying her with open eyes.

She said, "Hello, Larry, I was waiting for you, Sally. Jonathan's up with her now."

Larry grinned. He said, "Yeah, I know. I'm not blind. I'm built the same way, you can get him another. I think Sally is for you, Rose, and I'm invalidism—Phil's gone to New York. They had a battle. You know you don't happen to like Larry Dexter graduate, he only has a few months anyway, and he is twenty years it won't make any difference to anyone, I've considered trouble—"

They were alone in the living room. Mrs. Hurd hastily slipped away almost as soon as Rose arrived. Jonathan raised an eyebrow and quirked a finger. "Stand up," he commanded.

She rose, more docile than she appeared, and he pulled her down on his knee.

He said, "I hate like thunder to have anything bother you. If you want me to, I'll ride that young man out of town on a rail, plus the usual tar and feathers."

Rose laughed helplessly. She said, "That would help matters a lot and be especially good for your practice." She put her fingers through his hair, which always irritated him, and he howled and battered it down again with the palms of his hands. "That's one habit I'll have to break you of," he threatened, and glared at her.

"Mimic!" and sentence with a preposition!" Rose told him. "Now let's forget Larry and everything. Tell me about yourself—"

"Very quiet day," he answered obediently. "Sore throat, one quinsy, one pneumonia....and oh, yes, Sally, I've been up to see her." Warmly, wrong with her?"

"Heavy cold. She'll be all right though. Phil wasn't in evidence. She said he'd gone to New York. Do you know, I think that Sally's home is even more depressing than the Sutton mansion. All it lacks is hair wreaths and a photograph of Aunt Mary's third little boy in his coffin."

Rose shuddered. "Joe, how can you!"

"Oh, I assure you I've seen such," he said cheerfully.

"Sally in bed...."

"Yes. She must feel pretty low or she'd never consent to stay there like a slight temperature, aches...the grippe, you know, cold and plenty of it. She looked as if she'd been crying but then," said Jonathan carefully, "it may have been the cold."

"I'll go see her tomorrow after church," said Rose. She stirred, announced, "I'm too heavy," and pushed from his knee to sit close beside him, her bright head against his shoulder. Presently she said slowly, "Sometimes I wish it would always be like this, just you and I, alone together. We're not saying much, just aware of one another. But it won't be. We'll be like other people. We'll have to be. Jonathan, I'm strange, we'll quarrel and become reconciled, we'll find that common, everyday life bustle, inevitably and unknowingly, will take the edge of delight." To her astonishment she was almost crying. Her sight blurred and she felt a tear trickle. She went on hastily, "But, every so often there will be a moment just like this and we'll know that being together is all that matters."

Jonathan's big hand rumpled her hair, his long fingers were drawn from her temples to her throat. He said, moved, "I ought to contradict you. I can't. I'll say no word to like other people. But I couldn't fool you, Rose, I suppose we will be.

But we'll love each other—and that's the important thing."—or life Larry to me. I've learned slowly about him since I've come to live here. But Phil won't hear a word against him—much like his mother and father. If he ends up on the gallows," remarked Sally cheerfully, "they have only themselves to blame."

"I'm sorry you're laid up," Rose began and Sally laughed hoarsely.

"Such a subtle way to change the topic," she suggested, "and hasn't it been cold lately? Although I don't believe this winter will be as severe as last." She laughed again. "You and Kim think you're really going to get away with it, as if the whole town didn't know!"

Rose said, "We've told some people.....if didn't want a formal announcement."

"You might have told me," said Sally. She widened her eyes at the other girl. "Scruples!" she asked "You didn't really believe all that nonsense last summer....? I was just having a little fun with you, that was all."

"Of course," Rose murmured.

CHAPTER XXXVI

Sally said, "I've a lot of new clothes. Over there in the cupboard. Want to see 'em? Get up and take a look. Reason known only to myself I bought them! I won't have a chance to wear them and Phil says he can't get away again for a few weeks. I don't know what's got into him, he's Father's simply delighted and I'm bored to death!"

Rose stayed an hour or so. Just before they heard Jonathan's ring at the doorbell, Sally caught her hand.

was grateful to Miss Ward for bringing this matter to their attention. At the same time the Board—he knew he spoke for the fellow members—could not help but feel that her attitude was one of misplaced zeal. She also suggested the facts. However, the Board would confer on the matter and render their decision for a later period. Such grave accusations could be ignored. But a decision which might affect the entire life of a student could not be handed down lightly. Thank you, Miss Ward.

She was dismissed. She was quite calm as she walked away from the door she had shut quietly, down the long corridor. She had committed possibly the major idiocy of her life. By half, she told herself passively it isn't—but I've a red-headed temper....She thought, if I hadn't been angry—and day, if he hadn't angered me perhaps, I would have forced myself to keep my self-control and my self-respect. But she had expected to throw a bombshell, her weapon had certainly proved a dud.

She returned home very much dejected, quite prone for a little while to feeling which comes with the inner knowledge that she has made a fool of one's self. Not that she did not believe herself right; she was convinced that she had chosen the best course. But to take your courage in your hands, and betray no important step in the interest of justice and then find yourself facing the fact that it is irresponsible child was almost too much to endure.

Jonathan would come to the house before dinner. Rose, eating no dinner to Mrs. Ward's perturbation, wondered what she would say to him. She could wait until he came. She couldn't, she thought, bear to go through the conversation. Her mother's gentle fussing and anxious inquiries. "What in the world is the matter with you, Rose? Are you ill?.....What's for dinner.....Are you ill.....? You look terribly overtired with Jonathan, have you?"

"I'm perfectly all right," she said, almost angrily. "No, we haven't quarrelled, where did you get such a crazy idea?" Mrs. Ward could accept trouble as a cat does cream. She followed Rose into the living room, watched her pick up a book and fling it down again, watched her pace restlessly to the fire, watched her finger objects on the mantel, watched her pick up a vase and permit it to slide through her fingers and shatter on the hearth.

"I must say," commented Mrs. Ward, "that you're not acting very normal to me." She left the room, annoyed, to return with a dustpan and broom and when Rose, remorseful, went to her assistance, pushed her away. "I'm perfectly capable, no—I you make me nervous — you'll cut yourself or cut yourself or something."

DAILY SHORT STORY

SOAPY O'SHAY

By Howard Marschener

By HOWARD MARSCHENER.

Soapy O'Shay, known along the Wide road in the Wilderness for his bony frame and goggle-eyed appearance, was standing on the curb-stone, the thickest part of the pleasure-seeking evening crowd. It was said that Soapy liked to be in jams; in fact, he had an unusual aversion to them—and Soapy had to be on Broadway that night on an errand of business. And Soapy was a busy boy. It wasn't what it used to be.

"No, sir," Soapy admitted, thinking of shoes better old days. He spotted a yellow-suited example of human prosperity walking toward him, and Soapy carefully judged the man with his goggle eyes. The Bright Light of the Bronx turned his head, revealing what the Madison Square Garden doorman's cauliflower ear, so Soapy got out of his way. He wanted no trouble with a middleweight pug. The tin ear whirled past, and, a hero-worshipper at heart, Soapy managed to watch those broad shoulders disappear through the crowd.

Suddenly, Soapy felt a hard tug on his arm, jerking him halfway around.

"Say, I haven't—" Soapy began stiffly, as he always did on certain unfortunate occasions. He stopped when he saw that a huge bulk of a man was addressing him.

"Say, Buddy," the Hulk whined, "I'm just in from Texas, an' I wanta know where I can meet some of these pretty gals?"

Soapy's eyes narrowed, and he wondered to which racket this beer-er belonged.

"I always where you can meet people around here," Soapy admitted, trying to get away in haste.

"Oh, that's all right," the Bruiser said airily, lowering his voice. "I gotta thousand bucks wit me." He fished in his vest pocket, pulled something out, covered it by his hand, cupped hand. Then, to Soapy, he cautiously revealed what looked like a million dollars.

Soapy's eyes popped when he saw a twenty pinned on one of the bills. The size of the roll entranced him; dimed his feet to the pavement.

"Well, I dunno," Soapy admitted thoughtfully, taking a deep drag on his cigarette. "You might try Grandma's Pavilion across the street."

"Hey, yu gotta match?" Soapy's wave coming too self. Soapy looked at the recent arrival, what assembly had cut his cigarette. The fat, slocky man dressed in typical Broadway purple, had the proof fered light, and held it to his own cigarette.

"Do you know where I can meet some of these pretty gals?" the tall Hulk asked the Broadwayite.

Soapy got suspicious.

"They're working together. It's a racket," he admonished himself. Soapy wondered if they had him in what the year for something.

"Sure, Big Boy," said the brilliant example of what not to wear. "I know a place where we can go together. An'—I got some dough." Now Soapy knew it was a racket. Any two people on Broadway ever discuss the state of their finances with a perfect stranger, unless it is for a comparison all around. Being a stranger, Soapy didn't say anything.

"Okay, we'll go together," the Hulk said. He looked at Soapy O'Shay. "How about makin' it a threesome?"

"Naw, I'm broke," Soapy served.

The Brute and the City Slicker began prevailing on Soapy to change his mind. Soapy noticed that each spoke in turn, each brought up convincing arguments. It was so obvious!

"Sorry," Soapy said sorrowfully, "I gotta wife and kid; otherwise I'd go with you in a minute. I'm sorta broke."

The "sorta" did it. The other two began exerting their strongest persuasions.

"Forget the wife," suggested the Texan.

Soapy shrugged his shoulders, and with the proper force, began waving his arms as he spoke. "I can't do that," he said, tapping the Hulk's chest.

"Aw, come on," Broadway's self-confessed darling urged.

Soapy turned to him. "I'd like to, but I guess I just can't—no-o-o-o-o."

Some one had pushed Soapy against the kick-set one's chest. The little guy recovered his balance and glared at a tall man running in the general direction of Central Park.

"How much dough you got with you?" Broadway demanded.

"Oh, only about half a buck," Soapy lied.

Broadway smirked, and the Hulk took the cue.

"Well, I gotta be breezin'," he said, 'Comin' with me, Mac?"

"Sure," the Broadwayite said. "So long," he flung over his shoulder at Soapy.

Soapy eased his slight form to the right by a sidewalk newsstand, and then walked rapidly in the opposite direction from the other two. He entered half-lite Forty-fifth street, and swung into a semi-dark alley.

Reaching up his coat sleeve, Soapy pulled out the Hulk's roll. As he suspected, there were about 10 dollar-size pieces of paper, folded under the double sawbuck. The change in turn, he stopped on.

From his left outer pocket, Soapy extracted the Broadwayite's billfold. This contained some small numbers which Soapy also pocketed.

Soapy chuckled. "Twoulda been a shame to let them two go round with all that money on 'em."

STIRLING

Stirling—At the annual meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association held recently at the home of Mrs. W. J. Scott which was attended by about fifty members and friends. Sacred Musical Service

The second sacred musical hour to be held at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church took place on Sunday evening with a large number of the members and friends of the congregation in attendance. The singing of old favorite hymns beautifully illustrated by lantern slides proved much secured for the occasion was an unusual feature.

Artistically painted slides accompanying the words of each verse were presented in a most unique fashion through the kindness of Mrs. James Ward who operated the machine and the manner in which each picture blended with the others along with the cleverly arranged system of shading was very effective. Mrs. R. H. William presided at the organ which was augmented by the use of the piano by G. Pitman, A. T. G. L., presiding. An illustrated duet sung by Mrs. Chas. Fargey and Mrs. Roy Eggleton as pictures of a most appropriate type illustrating each phrase of the song was very much enjoyed.

A Sacred solo offered by Rev. J. A. Kotfend was also beautifully illustrated.

A special feature of the service was violin solos given by Mr. Carmen Osborne well known violinist of Belleville who offered "Work Of Old Refrain" by Fritz Kreisler and "Cavalleria Rusticana" by Mascagni both these numbers were given in a most excellent manner and greatly enjoyed. A mixed quartette featuring Mrs. Chas. Fargey, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Eggleton and Arthur Duncan sang a solo very effectively. Mrs. J. A. Kotfend presided at the piano during the solo work of Mr. Kotfend and Mr. Osborne. These services, unique in every sense of the word, are creating a great deal of interest throughout the district.

DUCHY OFFICIALS

"Home then, sir," say The Morning Post, "who spurs as if the King had only to marry the woman of his choice to bring her happily over after. Has the Prince in the abdicating hour had the long years to come? Would there never be leaders of the Empire in the great position surrendered to the great opportunities rejected, to the great trust betrayed? Surely there is a great love he sufficient to guard against misgivings."

Where, when the years had brought abdication or death with the work of noble years to fill the empty hours, where would such an exile from the throne, from his native land, from remembrance hide his forehead and his eyes?"

Attack of Mrs. Simpson

In Cannes today, however, friends of Mrs. Simpson said she would be glad if the unpleasantness of marriage with the King, despite her wealth.

Only the King, an authoritative source said, could end the present situation precipitated when he told Prime Minister Baldwin he was determined to marry the woman he loves. Baldwin in a statement yesterday in the House of Commons said the King had told him some weeks ago of his intention.

Speculation up to dramatic developments spot-lighted by Mrs. Simpson's offer to withdraw from here and the Prime Minister's statement that the cabinet was prepared to bow to the King's decision, a spokesman said:

"The King must choose either to give up Mrs. Simpson now or ultimately to abdicate in order to make her his wife.

"The cabinet and parliament in the Dominions have solidly backed the Prime Minister and against the suggestion that the King take that he make Mrs. Simpson his morganatic wife.

"The only other alternative—marriage with Mrs. Simpson accorded full rights as Queen Consort of England—has been put out of the question from the beginning of these hideous days."

The King's youngest brother, the Duke of Kent, left for his Belvedere shortly after noon, driving his own car. It was reported the Duke of Kent and his accomplice, also was present.

Flag of Duchy Symbol

The flag of the Duchy of Cornwall flew over Fort Belvedere, but authorities said the flag was significance, since it had been there constantly since the King ordered the royal standard to remain at all times at Buckingham Palace.

The Cornwall flag at Belvedere merely signified the King's constant testimony that his public and state life is separate from his private life as an English squire.

In London Sir Edward R. Ellis, leader of His Majesty's Opposition in the House of Commons, presided at a private meeting of the Parliamentary Labor Party to give the members an opportunity to make a full discussion of the constitutional position of the King and the government.

The Labor Party, it was disclosed, is confident the present government, although Attlee has not yet made a public expression.

Mrs. Simpson's name was the sole subject of comment in the press.

Reconciliation Praised

"The message can mean only one thing," said The Express editorially. "Mrs. Simpson is making a renunciation. It must be hoped that her words will have the desired effect on the King. We can only respect."

The News-Chronicle declared of Mrs. Simpson: "What she can do she can do."

The Herald said there were few who were not glad to see that even "the marriage which the King declares is inconsistent with the position he holds" is not ruled out.

Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail, which has campaigned for unity of the English parliament and the parliaments overseas would pass the Monday morning papers but it will be offered them, said today:

"The effect of the intervention of the Dominion governments cannot yet be judged. The King, whose mental anguish in seeking a solution to his difficulties must have aroused the deep sympathy of all his subjects, will doubtless give full weight to this statement as a new factor when arriving at his decision."

Other press comments either saw Mrs. Simpson's withdrawal as a petition or ignored it outright, still appealing to the King to put his duty to the Empire before personal considerations.

The Express said editorially: "The only conflict at present is within the King's own breast."

The Daily Mirror declared said: "There are circumstances in the present proposal which make the very people of romance and gravely offend the deepest susceptibilities of men and women throughout the world. The King and to the Crown is one of the strongest lines of their loyalty."

Demonstrations in Favor of King

Meanwhile demonstrations in favor of the King continued throughout the city. Several persons were arrested for carrying placards bearing the painting "Stand by the King" on house walls and sidewalks. They were lectured and released.

The same inscriptions were found painted on roads between Weymouth and Bournemouth and the same words were the cry of crowds along Pall Mall, Whitehall and Downing Street last night.

The Duke's ministers were called to meet again tomorrow with the hope hitherto expressed that the King may then have reached a decision.

Mrs. Simpson's Message Surprise

In the highest quarters today, it was denied categorically that any statement of Mrs. Simpson's willingness to give up the King had been sponsored in London and dictated from here last night.

Authoritative sources said her voluntary announcement surprised the King's own circle of advisers. They emphasized that she was not in her own initiative and that it constituted a formal announcement of a verbal message from the King.

Mrs. Simpson's message was the first she left Baldwin.

Reconciliation Called Dignified

The whole Empire will rejoice if he decides on personal renunciation and devotion to duty. The crown is a terrible burden to shatterproof as well. The Empire will rise to Baldwin and the Archbishop. But more confident than ever."

The Evening News said events of the last 24 hours had proved more helpful than anyone dared to hope. Reconciliation had been triumphantly sisted willingness to give up the King, if need be. The News said it is "clear, dignified and magnificent."

The situation has been brought manifestly nearer to solution," said The News. "Let no one imagine that there was any abandonment to make, or that it means no sacrifice. The message was sent seconds through its cost wording, and demands the respect which it will be universally accorded."

"The final word remains, no less, with King Edward and those can remain little doubt but that it will soon be said."

CAGAYAN VALLEY

They were carried screaming to safety. The water-inundated flood covered more than 100 miles of high, lofty tobacco and corn lands northeast of Manila.

Fifty-four villages were known to be inundated in the part of the area, most populous rural section of Luzon Island, had not been heard from.

The provincial military commander, Lieut. Col. Jose Segundo, by way thrice-daily and debris strewn areas for the first word. He said it was the greatest flood in the history of the valley.

He reported that almost all of the valley, fifty miles wide and like-wise from Aparri to the mountains was yet to be heard from.

Houses full of people, animals and trees were swept before the raging flood and the sea.

Twenty bodies were recovered in the village of Cagayan.

Homes Swept Away

Officials of Cagayan reported it was impossible to get into Cagayan Valley, north of that city.

Hundreds of homes swept away and thousands of people were missing, they said.

They begged for emergency supplies of food, vaccines against cholera and dysentery.

Governor Leon Cabarroguis of Nueva Vizcaya province, Cagayan, reported that the municipal president of Pinapagan reported barrios of that province flooded.

"Water is over the top of houses," he said. "Many houses have fallen, houses and whole families were washed away. Seventy-five persons are missing from Pinapagan alone."

The Government Typhoon Relief Board met in emergency session in Manila. Major General Basilio J. Valdes and Dr. Jose Fernandez, director of the Bureau of Health, were appointed to make an aerial survey of the flooded region.

Customs officials prepared to rush relief supplies, including relief workers, food and clothing. Relief planes were ordered to carry light supplies to the inundated areas.

The Philippine Red Cross also prepared to rush relief.

Dr. Jose General Valdes and Dr. Hernando were appointed to make a close whatever rice and building materials were necessary to solve immediate problems of food and shelter.

SNOW ON BAY ICE PREVENTS ICE BOATING

Winter played a return engagement for a few hours last evening sending temperatures plunging again to below zero level. Lowest temperature last night was marked at one below. Ice continues to form more heavily on the bay, creeks and ponds and the first of the season's hockey games was played on the outdoor rinks. Though ice boats have also been prepared, as open surface on the bay has so far prohibited their use.

In Merry Mood

Huntingdon Township Liberals are to hold a banquet and dance at Ivanhoe. For the Premier of the province was heralded as the first visit on the eve of the election. They stood up and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" to the hall. And the Premier entering their mood indulged in the humor for which he is famous. The crowd laughed at his sallies. Especially, as Mr. Hepburn unfolded yarns from his stock of humor. But the Chairman was distinctly nervous.

"We will now hear from Colin Campbell is not here yet. Dr. Premier arose and whispered. "Colin Campbell is not here yet." Dr. Smith will speak." "But the Chairman was not accustomed to have the Premier of Ontario whisper in his ear.

"Mr. Campbell is not here," announced the Chairman, "we will now hear from the Premier." No, no, "Dr. Smith", whispered the Premier, in a loud whisper. But Dr. Smith arose from his seat and advanced to the front of the platform said, as the crowd howled its approval, "Introducing ladies and gentlemen, the Premier of Ontario."

MYSTERY PLANE AT MARIGNANE

Is Believed to Have Carried Mrs. Simpson's Solicitor

Marseille, Dec. 7.—(AP)—A British trans-Channel airliner from London reached Marignane airport today and said there was no sign of Mrs. Wallis Simpson's solicitor—rushed by taxi to Marseille.

Airport employes, who said the plane bore the name "Golden Eagle, Barron and Doctor Kirkwood," reported the plane had not left Mrs. Simpson in staying, by road or rail.

Officials from London said it was believed Theodore Goddard, Mrs. Simpson's solicitor, and his clerk, Sidney Barron, and a Dr. Douglas Kirkwood were in the plane. The reports of the plane's progress en route to Marignane from Le Bourget airport, London, indicated that the plane at Paris, but it was established that it did not stop so far as the airport near here.

They leaped from the chartered airliner and took a taxi without word of their destination.

The plane was left at Marignane for the night.

WORKMEN REMOVE ICE FROM STREET GUTTERS

Clearing the streets from the accumulation of snow and ice piled in an effort to facilitate Christmas shopping, a force of eighteen men equipped with picks and shovels were engaged in chipping gutters and ice removal from the downtown section of the city today. The men began freeing the week-end that has left the streets impassable. Pictures of the department of public works this week to be a fairly high figure.

LAND BENEFITS BY FALL OF SNOW

"Land conditions through this central district are generally good," commended Mr. Wm. Michael, Dominion Seed Inspector of the local office today.

The early snowfall we have had has helped, and there hasn't been enough alternate thawing and freezing to do any damage. The cold weather and presence of snow should well for the clover and our crop next year."

Baldwin May be Able To Announce Decision

Some informed observers believed the plane flight undoubtedly was connected with the situation.

Despite the airdrome identification, it was reported late today that one of the plane's passengers was a member of the firm of Theodore Goddard and Co., Mrs. Simpson's solicitors. The others were said to be a "Doctor Kirkwood and a Mister Barron."

Under present arrangements the divorce of Mrs. Simpson will become final on April 27. It could be made final earlier.

Other, and earlier reports, said two home office officials and a physician occupied the plane. Apparently the passengers left the ship at Le Bourget, France.

In Paris the Queen Mary was described after noon visit to an exhibition of replicas of British and European crown jewels and other royal regalia at the Leicester Square gallery. The opening then was postponed.

It was announced the cabinet expected to hold its regular meeting tomorrow at 11 a.m.

With the Croydon "mystery plane" staying for the night at Marignane, in Marseille, reports reached London that its passengers had proceeded by automobile to Cannes.

The pilot, it was believed, will proceed to Cannes to await instructions.

ROBIN REPORTED SEEN ON BLEECKER AVE.

Visitors of springtime greeted the unbelieving eyes of Mr. William Ferron, 276 Bleecker avenue, this morning in the form of a bluing, red robin which was observed feeding unconcernedly in the back yard of his home with a small flock of sparrows. In spite of the near zero weather, the bird reportedly appeared cheery and chipper.

Forces of Recovery in Ascendant Says Banker

BANK OF MONTREAL ANNUAL MEETING

Sir Charles Gordon Optimistic on Canada's Economic Outlook But Warns Against Policies That Would Bring Credit of Country Into Dispute

W. A. Bog, General Manager, Discusses Commercial Loan Situation — Explains Growing Tendency of Loans and Necessity for Increased Investment in Government Securities

Strong expressions of confidence in the outlook in Canada were the keynote of the proceedings at the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Montreal, held at the head office of the Bank in Montreal on December 7. The meeting was also informed that the bank is in an extremely strong position, and that deposits had been further protected by another substantial addition to the reserve account.

Sir Charles Gordon, G.B.E., president, in his address, opened as the five fundamental features outstanding in Canada's economic life during the past year:

The recovery in agriculture, the extraordinary activity in mining, the all-time record in newsprint production, the gratifying increase in the tourist trade, and the striking expansion in our export trade. He made particular reference also to the uplift in trade which has been given to the whole West by the best wheat price level in years, remarking that the value of this year's crop alone was estimated at $197,000,000 as compared with $156,000,000 last year, and saying that an added factor in the uplift was an export demand which was largely responsible for depressing cloud that had overshadowed the trade in the form of a large carry-over from previous years.

A New Major Development.

In the mining industry, he said, Canada was witnessing a development that was undoubtedly another major movement in the history of her development. It had been estimated, he said, that in the last more than $200,000,000 annually was being spent in circulation by the mining industry, of which in excess of $150,000,000 went to payrolls of mining companies and upwards of $75,000,000 for supplies and equipment. This did not take into account dividends and many capital expenditures, nor did it include taxes paid to governments or by industries as pay-ments for transportation service, which, naturally, benefited by the mines. He added that a recent survey which the Bank had made augmented that of the Dominion Bureau of Mines that of mining, with its collateral and industrial activities, contributor to the federal income tax.

He dwelt at some length on the measures which the Dominion government had taken, on the recommendation of the National Employment Commission, for providing employment in the building trades and the co-operation which the banks were giving in the Dominion Government Plan, saying a broad policy of the nature proposed by the government have considerable effect in putting to work men whom the depression had hit more severely than almost any other type of Canadian citizen. Balanced budgets, he said, were the

The change which had recently come over business and other conditions, he said, was reflected in the state of the government finances. "When we entered 1936," he remarked, "that during the past six years these deficits have averaged over $300,000 per year, it is gratifying to note that at last there is in sight a balanced budget—the first step to finance minister and the cornerstone of any programme for restoring the business confidence and the free functioning of private enterprise."

The Railway Situation.

Referring to the legislation alleviating the management of the Canadian National Railways, Sir Charles said that the government had given the new directors would take it as their duty to accomplish every effort to reduce the recurring annual deficit of the system. To some extent this might possibly be done by the exercise of internal economy and to some extent by measures of further co-operation with the Canadian Pacific Railway, which, presumably, would be ready to assist in every legitimate fashion.

Forces of Recovery in Ascendant.

He had a word of warning regarding provincial legislation, which, in addition to debts, saying in respect to talk of repudiation that he could not see how this line of thought could be pursued without the credit of the whole Dominion coming into disrepute. He also expressed the hope that the time for the stock market would not lead to a recurrence of the disastrous experiences that preceded the depression, from which we were now emerging.

"But I would not wish to close my remarks on a discouraging note," he said. "While, as I have intimated, in Canada we have many bullish factors carrying implied threats to our future well-being and while we should all be deeply conscious of the foreign developments affecting the general situation, we must be proud of you, from our own observation—that the forces of recovery are quite major in the ascendant. A wide variety of factors is combining to give full play to the forces of recovery and among these factors is the growing confidence which is the world shortcute to better times and that the fundamentals of sound economics have not be the basis of economic progress. We still have problems to face but, as regards the immediate future, I stand squarely on the opposite side of the fence from the pessimist. I believe that, with the experience gained in the past few years, we in Canada will be able to work our way toward better things."

Bank's Position Extremely Strong.

Presenting the 119th annual balance-sheet, General Manager W. A. Bog, on behalf of himself and Jackson Dodds, assistant general manager, drew attention to the fact that the total assets of the bank had increased to $450,000,000, a total which had been accumulated from profits earned in the past seven years and premiums on new stock issued. This total, he said, was held as a protection for the bank's depositors. "That is to say," he remarked, "the protection afforded depositors by the bank has not only 100 per cent. in conservatively valued assets but with over $40,000,000 in addition to meet any losses representing $86,000,000 of capital and $39,000,00 in reserve account."

Savings Accounts Particularly Valued.

Mr. Bog expressed regret that in the bank had become necessary to reduce to 1¼ per cent. per annum the rate of interest paid on savings deposits, which, however, was still at a rate which compared favorably with rates paid on savings deposits in other countries and the low level of commercial loans that had compelled the bank to take this action.

"The two greatest depositaries for the savings of Canadians," he said, "are the banks and the Government Savings Bank. The great part of the banks' functioning is depositors and policy-holders is in the form of demand deposits, because of the savings of Canadians, built up on habitually with small and confidential over the course of years to secure a measure of security in old age or in case of sickness, dependence after death is and always has been the fundamental principle of the savings and should also be that of all governments. Deposits are not in any instances, these savings are not large and a loss of only a small portion of the principal would be felt by many cases to bring want and anxiety.

"Any policy which would tend to weaken the sanctity of contracts is much deprecated as, in addition to harming those who are forced to bear losses, such a policy would strike at the very roots of our economic order, for when there is lack of confidence, a disturbance in commerce activity takes place, bringing unemployment in its train."

Paying tribute to the loyal cooperation of the staff, he said the success which the bank's service might be attributed in part to service to employment and an assured income on investments. These factors, from a national standpoint, made a contribution to the employment situation in Canada during the past year, the work our way toward better things."

Two Babes Perish As 3-Year Brother Pokes Out Isinglass

OPINION IS HELD KING EDWARD WILL ABDICATE

Fourteen Killed as Dutch Airliner Crashes Near Croydon Airport

Belief General in London Baldwin Will Announce Royal Decision Thursday

If King Edward Abdicates Duke of York Will be Proclaimed, Probably as King George Sixth

REGENCY STORY IS GIVEN DENIAL

Prime Minister Baldwin Questioned in House Today Says He May be Able to Make Statement on King's Decision on Thursday

London, Dec. 9—(AP)—Prime Minister Baldwin called the Cabinet into a sudden, unexpected session tonight to discuss late developments in the constitutional crisis.

London, Dec. 9—(CP Cable)—Feeling was general in London late today that Prime Minister Baldwin tomorrow will announce the abdication of the King.

The feeling developed after Baldwin had told the House of Commons he could make no statement regarding the King's decision between Abdication and marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The Prime Minister said he hoped to make a statement tomorrow.

If the King abdicates, said usually well-informed sources, the Duke of York immediately will be proclaimed King. These sources said he would probably take the title George VI. Choice of the title, however, would lie with the new King himself.

Rumors that a regency might be established were authoritatively denied.

Answering a question by Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor Opposition, Baldwin said he was unable to reveal the secret of the King's Fiancee.

"I regret I am not in a position to add anything today."

Hope For Statement Tomorrow

"But I hope to make a statement tomorrow," he said.

There were few supplementary questions. But they indicated growing anxiety all over the country for the decision. Attlee mentioned this anxiety.

"No one realizes it more than I do," said Baldwin.

Frederick Bellenger, Labor, said business was inconvenienced by the situation. He asked if Baldwin would "kindly suggest to His Majesty the necessity" of arriving at an early decision.

"I can assure the honorable gentleman that the necessity of an early decision has not escaped me," said Baldwin.

Baldwin to Confer Again?

Now presumably Baldwin must go again to Fort Belvedere before the final decision is reached. He spent much of the day in conference with two high advisers of this King, Walter T. Monckton and the Canadian-born Sir Edward Peacock, respectively Attorney-General and Receiver-General of the Duchy of Cornwall.

Political factions within the country chafed at the delay.

Observers thought it noteworthy that Winston Churchill did not expose himself today to new attacks in parliament.

Members shouted him down in the House Monday when he attempted to secure from Baldwin assurance that no irrevocable step would be taken before the House was informed.

After the Prime Minister had returned to Downing Street, an army dispatch rider called there and left, 20 minutes later, for Fort Belvedere.

The Commons proceeded to take up other business after Baldwin had made his answer to Bellinger.

'Will Resist Any Attempt Hustle King from Throne'

British Public Firm Says, Fascist Chief Sir Oswald Mosley

VOTE OF PEOPLE

London, Dec. 9 (AP)—The British people will resist any attempt to "hustle King Edward off the throne," Sir Oswald Mosley, leader of the British Union of Fascists, said at a luncheon today.

"Before there is any question of the king's abdication, this issue must be submitted to a vote in this country and, if necessary, to a vote of the dominions also.

"We will not see the king forced to abdicate by a junta of politicians. I conceive ourselves bound in honor to support the position which the king has adopted."

Women Drive to Fort, Message Asks King to Broadcast at Christmas

London, Dec. 9 (AP) — Three middle-aged women drove up to the gates of Fort Belvedere today and one of them handed the guard a letter.

"I've driven from London to give this letter to the king," she said.

"In it, we've asked His Majesty to relieve the suspense of the nation and broadcast to us at Christmas, as his father did."

The guard promised solemnly to deliver the message.

Many Newspapers Comment Upon Constitutional Crisis in Present Issue

London, Dec. 9—(CP Cable)—The Evening Standard tonight denounced persons who it said were attempting to force an immediate decision by the King as to whether he will marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson or renounce her and remain on the throne.

Many newspapers throughout the country, in addition to those in London, commented on the constitutional crisis arising out of the issue.

The Standard said "opponents of the marriage plan are trying to force an immediate decision by means of coercive propaganda. Since it is clear that the King will take no action contrary to the advice considered the constitutional one to force his hand is as unnecessary as it is unfair and unwise."

Still Sees Sign of Hope

The Evening News said "Constant consultations between King Edward, his brothers and his advisers have resulted so far in no definite announcement. The situation remains unchanged in this respect. That is not to say hope does not exist for a happy end to the crisis."

PREMIER HEPBURN RESTS IN TORONTO

Scheduled Meeting of Cabinet to Discuss Power Action Postponed

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—Tired from two weeks of campaigning in the Hastings East by-election, Premier Hepburn rested today and a scheduled meeting of the Ontario Executive Council was postponed.

BRIDE-ELECT SHOT BY GIRL FRIEND

Fast Lansing, Mich., Dec. 9 (AP)—Miss Mary Louise Aloe, bride-elect of a wedding plans today for Miss Miss Gillmer, 22-year-old bride-elect slain, police said, by a sorority sister, who confessed obeying "an inner voice" to kill.

Miss Gillmer, a college dean's daughter, was found shot to death late yesterday in her home where she and her chum had been addressing invitations for her wedding Saturday to Capt. David S. Babcock, an R.O.T.C. instructor at the Michigan State College.

Lieut. Harold Mulbar, State Police detective, said Miss Hope Margaret, also 25, a life-long friend of Miss Gillmer, confessed verbally she fired five shots at the bride-to-be.

"I had to shoot her," Mulbar said Miss Morgan told him. "I did it on an impulse and can't explain why, but I couldn't help myself. I had my father's gun with me and I felt like killing someone."

King Gives Care

To Injured Retriever

London, Dec. 9 (AP)—King Edward, with the world waiting for his greatest decision, busied himself today with his dogs.

Seriously concerned over Labrador, a Retriever, who received a leg injury a few days ago, the Royal master of Fort Belvedere visited his kennels the first thing today.

Dissipated with his pets progress, the king put in a call for a veterinary surgeon. The latter soon arrived, bringing four Pekinese along.

The veterinary left, said advices from Fort Belvedere, the king looked relieved.

Mrs. Wallis Simpson is shown in the garden of her friends' villa at Cannes. The picture was posed when newspaper photographers were allowed in with the understanding that no questions would be asked, and was snapped at the height of the controversy in London over the King's expected answer to Baldwin. From left, reads at the height of the controversy in London over the King's expected answer to Baldwin. This picture was transmitted from Cannes to London by telephone, then flashed by radio to New York.

Text of Today's Discussion

London, Dec. 9—(AP)—The text of the discussion in the House of Commons today over King Edward's possible marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson follows:

Clement R. Attlee, Opposition Leader—May I ask the Prime Minister a question of which I have given private notice, whether he is in a position to add anything to the statement which he made to the House on Monday?

Prime Minister Baldwin—I regret I am not in a position to add anything today but I hope to make a statement tomorrow.

Attlee—While we give us good hope for the statement tomorrow because he will realize the anxiety which is continually increasing so long as this matter is not dealt with?

Baldwin—I can assure the honorable gentleman and House that no one realizes that more than I do.

Frederick Bellenger, Labor—May I ask the right honorable gentleman whether he is aware of the grave financial inconvenience that is being caused to many subjects by the delay in coming to a decision and will he kindly convey to His Majesty the necessity of—(cries of "order! order!" interrupted Bellenger and the sentence was not finished).

Duke of York Family Man, His Thoroughness is Marked

Friends Tell How 'Bertie' 'Keeps on Trying' And Succeeds

MAN OF OFFICES

London, Dec. 9 (AP)—The Duke of York, next in line for the throne of King Edward VIII, is the Hero of Windsor's "family man".

Married since 1923 to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, he has two children, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. The former, so captivated the British public that he once remarked: "My chief claim to fame seems to be that I am the father of Princess Elizabeth."

While likening King Edward VIII to his sprightly grandfather, Edward VII, London often has noted a resemblance between the sober, studious duke and George V, King George V.

Practical Golf By Hobs

Typical of the difference between the brothers was the way they went at golf.

Edward, as Prince of Wales, hired professional and never lost a chance to get pointers from golf stars including Archie Compston, Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel.

"Bertie", the duke, erected a net in the handkerchief-sized lawn back of his London home. He faithfully, and practiced strokes by the hour.

His brother had a head-start in learning to play the game—but the King of York advanced so quickly that in 1933 he defeated the then Prince of Wales in a club tournament.

In the same slow but sure way, he took up riding and shooting.

Duke of York Conquers Handicap,

"The Duke of York," Captain C. H. Drummond, his frequent host, has related, "came down to my place with two of his brothers and you can imagine my feelings when we put him on a hunter for a trial run round a field. Like the character in 'Orrocks' he sat a horse with ease.

10,0000 LETTERS REACH THE KING

London, Dec. 9 (AP)—Waiters at Fort Belvedere estimated today 10,000 letters have poured into King Edward's country home since his proposal to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson caused a constitutional crisis.

The postman, who formerly used a bicycle to deliver his mail bag at Fort Belvedere front door, has for a week discarded it for a motorcycle and side-car.

Now the motorcycle has been supplanted by a truck.

The postman and the tradesmen are forced to run the gauntlet of a hearty and vigilant guard.

Both plainclothesmen and uniformed policemen patrol the grounds and watch the roadway outside the gates.

'Delay is Perilous' Declares Bishop

Leamington, England, Dec. 9 (AP)—The Bishop of Coventry, Dr. Mervyn Haigh, told a Diocesan Conference here today that, "every hour's delay is perilous" in solving the crown crisis.

"I am convinced that before this the strain of the present uncertainty might have been eased," he said. "Time is a factor in all great decisions. Until some decision is reached, it is obviously our duty to continue in prayer that God will grant His servant —our king and governor."

The Bishop continued:

"We are all being involved in deep humiliation but in loyalty to the monarchy as an institution and in loyalty to the king, it is still our duty to believe that any final decision to which he will come or be led by events will be such as we, his subjects, will in conscience be able loyally even though regretfully to accept."

MRS. SIMPSON'S DOUBLE

Boston Dec. 9 (AP)—Boston has a double of Mrs. Wallis Simpson—and she is annoyed. Her name is Marilyn Nute, Manchester, N.H., and she works in a department store.

"Every time I go out," she protested to a reporter, "someone is sure to comment on my resemblance to Mrs. Simpson. It may have been flattering the first few times, now it's annoying."

Visibility Cut to 20 Yds. Plane Rips Roof Tops Tumbling in Blazing Mass

Only Away From Airport Four Minutes When Crash Occurs

A BLAZING WRECK

Five of Passenger List Taken From Inferno

Croydon, England, Dec. 9 (AP)—At least fourteen persons, including Juan de la Cierva, inventor of the autogyro, were killed today in a "K. L. M." (Dutch) airliner which crashed and burned near Croydon airdrome four minutes after taking off for Amsterdam.

Nineteen—fifteen passengers and a crew of four—were aboard. Five were dragged from the blazing wreckage and taken to a hospital.

Fourteen bodies were taken to a morgue at Bandon Hill Cemetery.

Two of the injured were feared to be dying.

Admiral Arvid Lindman, former Swedish Secretary of State, was another of the victims.

The plane, heading into a fog which cut visibility to little more than 20 yards, ripped the roofs off two houses in nearby Purley, severed a gas street, demolished 40 large tree and finally imbedded itself in an unoccupied house. The engine ripped from its mountings, smashed through the front wall.

No pedestrians on the street were injured.

No Documents are Signed By Mrs. Simpson, She Says

Confers With Solicitor From London on Plan to Close Her Home

RUMORS ARE DENIED

Cannes, France, Dec. 9 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson "has signed no documents," her spokesman said today after King Edward's friend had conferred for more than an hour with Theodore Goddard, her solicitor.

Speaking for Mrs. Simpson, Lord Brownlow, gentleman-in-waiting to King Edward VIII, asserted:

Mr. Goddard left, as stated last night, was for the purpose of discussing Mrs. Simpson's business affairs in London. The presence in his plane of Doctor Douglas Kirkwood was due to the fact that Mr. Goddard has been advised not to fly or take any undue effort without a medical attendant.

Fly, Kirkwood left for Marseille this morning. He has not visited the villa."

Leaving the Villa Lou Viei, Mrs. Simpson's haven from the crisis, Goddard added:

Stories Are Ridiculous.

Conservative Organizer, William G. Clysdale, Dies

Active in Party For More Than Two Decades

DIES IN BELLEVILLE

A scant 24 hours before the results of the week for the Conservative Party in the Hastings East by-election would have been known, W. G. Clysdale, for more than two decades the Provincial organizer for the Party, died in the hospital here in a diabetic coma. He had been ill only a few hours. He was 62 years old.

A native of Peterborough County and for some years a resident of Windsor, Ont., Mr. Clysdale first served with the Conservative Party as an organizer in Ontario under Sir James Whitney in 1905. After six year she resigned to take over the Provincial Post in the Immigration Department but two years later, in 1913, he resumed his work with the Party serving continually until his death. He had been a resident of Tremble since 1913.

Through victory and defeat "Bill" Clysdale was famous for his election forecasts. In 1919 his prediction of defeat for the Conservatives caused a rift between himself and Sir William Hearst, the Party leader. Hon. E. C. Drury's Farmer Government swept the polls that year.

Old Type Campaigner

Mr. Clysdale was the old-fashioned type of political campaigner —the house-to-house worker who knew all of the voters by every back concession in the province—but who took a back bench in Party deliberations.

Suffering from diabetes for 10 years he pursued his Party work undaunted, often in discomfort. His death was sudden, unexpected, and a blow to the political leaders who worked with him and against him in the world beatings' can-

LUCKY TO HAVE SCOTTISH WIFE SAYS THE DUKE

Duke of York Says He is Famous as Father of Princesses

INTEREST IN LABOR

London, Dec. 9 (AP)—The Duke of York, gravity much of a homebody, is a relative stranger to the empire.

He has led an active public life but he lacks that camaraderie and flair for the novel or spectacular that has made Edward VIII one of the world's best known men.

In his home life the duke carries on the role made popular by his father as that of "a family man".

During his father's lifetime, the duke had already established, in his London town house, Windsor's name', 145 Piccadilly, and his country house, White Lodge, Windsor, a reputation as a homebody.

The quiet and simplicity of his domestic life has been overshadowed only by the family life which formed the basis of King George's appeal to his subjects.

Lucky" To Have Scottish Wife.

Of his wife, whom King Edward often chaffingly calls "Queen Elizabeth", he has said simply: "I am a very lucky man to have a Scottish woman to share my life."

And he has counted those times happiest when they could turn from the cares of office—particularly to the country.

"It is to my country house in Windsor Great Park," he once said, "that I gladly turn when I want to find a little peace after the bustle and labors of public life."

Next to the country the globe-trotter that Edward VIII has been, the duke has found he has seen a fair share of the world.

When he was 18, in the midst of his naval career, he visited the West Indies, Canada and Newfoundland on his training cruise.

Mission To Foreign Court.

He went on his first official mission to a foreign court in the summer of 1922 when he acted as "knave"

A TIP FOR SELLERS OF CHRISTMAS TREES

A new tip for Christmas tree choppers down was given today by Jack Phillips, Sidney township resident, who points to a new development in the art of chopping.

"Elephantard chopping is all wrong", declared the Stony Town sage. "If you want a tree that won't shed its needles, no matter how long it stands in a room, some time before you cut it take a sharp axe or a knife and girdle it around the base. Then let it stand for a week or so until it dries out. You'll find it will last twice as long as ordinary trees that are artificially dried."

FEW FROZEN PIPES

Though frost has shown a steady penetration into the ground during the past week or so of cold weather, as yet no casualties to pipes or equipment has been reported by officials of the local waterworks department, except in the case of isolated instances where service pipes have been frozen in unheated homes, offices and buildings. In the majority of cases the trouble has occurred where cellar windows have been left open in near zero weather, it was stated by Manager E. T. Austin.

With the potential danger to life resulting from the ignition of such inflammable materials as Christmas decorations, cotton draperies, etc., now decorating the stores of the city, Fire Chief Wm. Lynch will make an inspection of stores with the object of seeing that a few simple precautions are taken, which may result in the prevention of loss of property and life should fire result, where crowds of people, particularly children are gathered.

Among the suggestions are offered by the Canadian Underwriters' Association, and according to the City Fire Chief should be followed by every store owner and householder in the city.

Burns Fatal To Brakeman

Was Asleep in Caboose Which is Destroyed by Fire Yesterday

Bertram S. Johnston, 44-year-old Canadian National Railway brakeman of Brockville, died in the Belleville General Hospital early last evening as the result of burns and congestion received, when the caboose in which he was sleeping caught fire in the Belleville C.N.R. railway yards early Tuesday morning. Johnston was rushed to the hospital following his release from the burning caboose, in that he had sustained superficial burns about the face and hands and also had been gassed from the fumes and flares, which ignited during the fire. Dr. E. O. Kennedy attended the injured man and stated he had died as the result of burns and congestion. An inquest looking into the death of Mr. Johnson will be held today, Chief Coroner Dr. E. O. Wallbridge stated this morning.

Believed to have ignited from an over-heated stove, the freight caboose standing on the siding in the Belleville C.N.R. freight yards caught fire early Tuesday morning. Mr. Johnson, a Brockville brakeman was asleep in the caboose at the time, it is reported. The fire had gained considerable headway before it was noticed by other railway employes in the yards, who came to the rescue, carried Mr. Johnson out and rushed him to the hospital. Later the local city department was called to assist in extinguishing the blaze. The caboose inside of the cabin was burned to a charred mass of ruins, only the outer portion holding its position on the tracks.

Belongings Burned

Conductor E.D. Rudd, of the caboose that burned, and Brakeman H. Butcher, both reside in Belleville and were at their homes at the time. The caboose arrived in Belleville earlier in the night completing a return trip to Brockville. Mr. Johnston, banking in the caboose alone and, due to the bitter cold night, is believed to have retired early and the fire started. Railway officials refused to comment on the matter, stating that regred the fire and fatality were doubtless the result of an overheated stove, as the only fire all railway caboose are bolted to the floor and are fireproof.

Both Conductor Rudd and Brakeman Butcher lost all of their clothing and personal belongings that had been left in the caboose.

Although it is stated by railway fellow-employees, railway men today were unanimous in their opinions that Johnston was asleep and had been gassed from the sulphur fumes of the fire and not burned ignited. The injured man was unconscious when removed from the caboose, suffering from a serious superficial burns, but the fumes of the sulphur inhaled are believed to have caused him to be unable to help himself, experienced railwaymen stated today.

Cause of Fire Unknown

The inquest looking into the death of Bertram Johnston, was completed at the T. C. Thompson Funeral Home, Cedar Street, by Coroner Chief Coroner Dr. E. O. Wallbridge, this morning. The coroner's jury rendered their verdict, finding Mr. Johnston, C.N.R. brakeman, came to his death at the Belleville C.N.R. railway yards, as the result of pulmonary congestion induced by the inhalation of smoke and flame in a C.N.R. caboose, situated in Belleville which caught on fire from causes unknown.

Harry Bateman, C.N.R. switchman, Belleville, told of seeing smoke rising from the caboose on the siding in the Belleville yards, about 7.15 a.m. Wednesday. "I ran over to investigate and found both doors of the caboose locked. I got no assistance, another employee came over and we broke down the door and we found the body of Mr. Johnston slumped on the floor, and against the door. The cabin was filled with smoke. I crawled in and pulled Mr. Johnston out. We put him in my car and then dispatched him to the station, from where he was taken to the hospital. I believe," stated Mr. Bateman.

"Were his clothes on fire?" asked Crown Attorney G. C. Thomson, K.C., who conducted the investigation.

"No sir, but he was burned about the face and hands and was unconscious," replied Mr. Bateman as he added the state of Johnston's body was very distinct.

"What, in your belief, was the cause of the fire?" asked Mr. Donnelly.

"I'm not certain, but believe it might have been an over-heated stove," was the reply of the railway, C.N.R. engineer, identified the body of the deceased.

Dr. E. O. Kennedy, C.N.R. physician for the Belleville terminal, told of attending the deceased. He was suffering from severe shock, burns and was unconscious when he arrived," stated Dr. Kennedy. He also stated death had been caused by congestion from the smoke fumes.

"Were the burns severe enough to cause death?" asked Mr. Donnon

"I don't believe so. The burns were second degree and minor, but heart orrhages developed," was the reply.

Mr. M. J. Duff, chief clerk of the Belleville division of the C.N.R., stated Mr. Johnston had arrived in Belleville at 11.40 p.m. on the night of the 8th instant. "It is customary for the call-of-town brakemen to occupy their cabooses during a lay-over and when awaiting a train," stated Mr. Duff when asked if Mr. Johnston was privileged to occupy the caboose.

The coroner's jury impanelled by Sergeant Arthur Booth, coroner's constable, consisted of Sam Mannings, foreman, W. S. Gerow, W. K. Stewart, W. Evans, Jas. Comber, T. D. Johnson and R. E. Arnott.

reasons never to fly. He came for that reason and he left that reason alone.

"I came to see Mrs. Simpson, for whom I acted in her recent divorce. I deemed it advisable to do so in connection with various other matters. That I am now doing. I obviously cannot say what I am doing in my connection as her solicitor."

Dr. Comyns Beckwith, at one time was a medical officer of Queen Charlotte's Hospital for Women in London, left the hospital at a hotel there, although some reports said he might fly back to London from Marseilles.

Disposal of London News.

Cannes, France, Dec. 9 (AP)—Mrs. Wallis Simpson, secluded in the village of New York friends, conferred today with her London lawyer on arrangements for closing her home in the British capital.

Dr. Douglas Kirkwood, the physician who flew with Attorney Theodore Goddard to Mrs. Simpson's seaside retreat, went to Marseille from Cannes, and one report said he was planning to fly back to London from there.

The physician, a medical officer of Queen Charlotte's Hospital for women in London, however, left his baggage at a hotel where employees said he intended to return today.

Lord Brownlow, King Edward's private secretary, declared the conference between the Anglican clergyman and her lawyer concerned only the details of terminating Mrs. Simpson's lease on her Cumberland Terrace house.

Lord Brownlow denied that the physician had been called to attend Mrs. Simpson.

Will Not Be Soon Physician.

Instead of being summoned by Mrs. Simpson, it was the physician had accompanied Goddard, who because he "is a friend of the family" is the first time he has flown, thought it advisable to bring the doctor with him.

Mrs. Simpson, said Lord Brownlow, is "in perfect health" and does not require the services of a physician and, in fact, has seen none since coming to the villa last week-end.

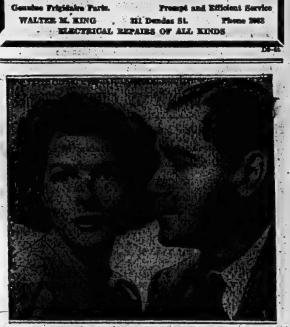
The spokesman explained that he made the statement fully aware of the "implications" surrounding the hurried trip of Dr. Kirkwood from London.

Standing at the gateway to the villa with Herman Rogers, of New York, Mrs. Simpson's host, at his side, he continued:

"I did not know Kirkwood had made the trip until Goddard told me after their arrival tonight. The doctor is not coming to the villa and neither I nor Mrs. Simpson will see him."

Will Not Return For Some Time

Lord Brownlow acknowledged that he also had talked by telephone with Goddard, whose visit he described as connected with Mrs. Simpson's desire to close her London house in Cumberland Terrace. She does not intend to return there "for some time", he said.



Neither of the three London men left Nimes their visit here, but Lord Brownlow said he understood Dr. Kirkwood would go to Monte Carlo soon.

MORRIS TRUDEAU KILLED BY CAR DRIVER UNKNOWN

Coroner's Jury Renders Verdict at Adjourned Inquest

FRACTURED SKULL

James T. Rush, Whitby, Gives Evidence at Hearing

The George Morris Trudeau, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Trudeau of Newcastle, came to his death in the Belleville General Hospital on Nov. 26th as the result of injuries received when struck by a motor vehicle, driven by an unknown person in the village of Tweed on Nov. 27, was the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury at the adjourned inquest inquiring into the death of the little Trudeau boy last evening. The inquest was held in the police court rooms before Chief Coroner Dr. F. O. Walbridge.

Identification was positively established at the preliminary inquest, R. O. Donnan, K.C., local Crown Attorney in charge of the investigation last evening, called Dr. O. H. Stobbs as the first witness. Dr. Stobbs stated the little lad had died from the result of a fractured skull. When was the extent of the fracture, asked Mr. Donnan.

It was extensive and extended completely around the base of the skull.

"Did you examine the boy's mouth and nostrils for blood? If so were there any injuries noticeable?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"No, sir, there were no injuries in the vicinity of the mouth," replied Dr. Stobbs in part.

Lying in Pool of Blood

Chief Clare Hayes, of Tweed, who investigated the accident after the little Trudeau boy had been struck told of proceeding to a point about 100 feet or more north of the eastern entrance to the bridge crossing the Tweed River in that village and there finding the little Trudeau lad lying in a pool of blood. "Upon my arrival I asked the little girl, who had been with the Trudeau youngboy, her name was Betty Berry, what happened and she in reply stated the witness as he related the driving conditions at the time were fairly clear and the weather was cold.

After talking to Harry McAllister, who found the lad lying on the road upon the arrival of the doctor, I went to Lasagne's garage where I had informed a car, bearing license plates of Ontario had driven up with steam escaping from the radiator. Mr. McAllister had previously informed me he had met such a car on the Tweed bridge so I immediately notified succeeding police departments to stop the driver of a car bearing license plates of Ontario, L-9646. Later the car and the driver, James T. Rush, were found in Belleville," stated Chief Hayes.

"What else did you find when you examined the car and Mr. Rush?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"I found a dent in the fender and a dings on the skirt of the right front fender," replied the witness.

"Did you find any traces of blood?" asking Mr. Donnan as he reminded the witness of the pool of blood in which little Morris was found lying.

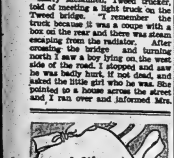
"No, sir," was the reply. Chief Hayes added, however, he had subsequently questioned Morris' playmate, little Betty Berry, who had said she had seen the car coming and shouted at Morris—"car coming, get out of road."

Harry McAllister, Tweed trucker, told of meeting a car on the road in Tweed bridge. "I remember the truck because it was a coupe with a box on the rear and there was steam escaping from the radiator. After crossing the bridge I proceeded north I saw a boy lying on the west side of the road. I stopped and saw he was badly hurt, if not dead, and asked the little girl who he was. She replied as a horse came across the street and I ran over and informed Mrs. Trudeau. When I asked the little girl (Betty Berry) what had happened she said "car going out." I then looked across the bridge to get a doctor but when I saw the same car, that I met on the bridge, I told Mr. Keitel at the garage to 'get the number of that car'," stated Mr. McAllister.

Boot Keeper Testifies

Mr. F. Keitel, garage book keeper at Lasage's garage, stated Mr. Rush drove up to their garage and got some water. "I told him his car was defective and that the little boy and he replied—'why that's impossible. I saw some children playing over by the river, but it couldn't have been I who hit him.' He showed no signs of nervousness or suspicion," stated Mr. Keitel upon questioning.

Harry, mother of Betty Berry and Mrs. Trudeau, mother of little Morris, both told of the children going out to play. "Why they went out of my sight over there or four minutes when Mr. McAllister came running to the door," stated Mrs. Trudeau.



O. A. Cameron, K.C., representing Mr. Rush, who is charged with wanton and furious driving and was the next witness, asked for the protection of the court. It was so granted.

James Rush, Whitby salesman, and whose car was seen in the vicinity of the accident, admitted he had driven by the place where the accident occurred. "I drove by there three times that afternoon, once I saw a ten or 12 year old boy playing on the ice over the river, but saw no other children," stated Mr. Rush in evidence.

"How was your car performing that day?" asking Mr. Donnan. "Perfectly until the engine commenced to come out of the radiator north of Tweed," was the reply.

"Tell the court about that," asked Mr. Donnan as he pointed towards the jury.

"Well I left Tweed and started north something after 1.30 pm. about three miles north my radiator started to steam and I thought the radiator had frozen. I turned around and drove back to Tweed on highway No. 37 but saw nothing as I approached the bridge from the north, except some trucks and men working. I got some water right and traced my steps. It was then, I think I saw a boy playing on the ice.

Hydro Commission Statement On Christmas Lighting

Belleville, Ontario, Dec. 7, 1936
Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

There has been some discussion in reference to the Christmas Decorative Lighting of Front Street and we are desirous that the electric consumers should know the facts, so we present them herewith:

1 The retail merchants have not paid directly for any part of the cost of the Decorative Lights installed by the Belleville Commission on Front St. The cost has been met entirely by the City Council and the Belleville Commission.

2 The Belleville Commission has endeavoured to co-operate with the retail merchants and has met their requests in several occasions to consider the matter. The Belleville Commission suggested that a committee of the merchants should accompany them to visit the Ontario Commission and take the matter up as the Ontario Commission set the rate. The merchants took the matter up with the Ontario Commission but not in co-operation with the Belleville Commission.

3 The Ontario Commission sent an engineer to personally investigate the Decorative Lighting in eleven of the larger municipalities and the investigation proved that in all the municipalities except one the local commissions are being reimbursed for decorative lighting. In the one municipality the power is not being paid for and the Ontario Commission advises that the condition is being rectified.

4 If the cost were to be paid by the Belleville Commission, it would not be the tax payers who paid but the electrical consumers, namely, power consumers, domestic consumers and domestic consumers.

5 The Belleville Commission is not permitted under the Power Commission Act to make contributions for ornamental or Christmas street lighting but is required to see that sufficient revenue is obtained to meet the entire cost of the installation.

6 The following paragraph is the ruling of the Ontario Commission and is taken from the Report following the investigation—"The whole matter has been submitted in detail to the Commission and their decision is that the whole cost of the installation in Belleville must be paid either by the merchants or the municipality generally, or charged to the Street Lighting Department if such arrangement is satisfactory to the municipality."

We believe it will be apparent from the above that the Belleville Commission is in no way to blame if there is no Decorative Lighting on Front Street this year.

Very truly yours,
Belleville Hydro Electric Commission
Geo. A. Mackenzie, Chairman.
M. P. Duff, Commissioner.
Harry Hill Mayor.

Radiator Steamed

When about four miles out again the radiator commenced to steam badly so I turned around and went back to Lasagne's garage and back to the garage. I saw nothing out of the way this time either. Upon by return Mr. Keitel told me I was suspected of hitting the boy on the road. I told him it couldn't have been me. Later I went over the same road several times this same some people north of the bridge on highway No. 37. I went to Madoc on business and later returned to Belleville.

"Did the escaping steam obstruct your driving view?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"No sir, not on the right hand side of the road. The wind was blowing from the west," he replied and Chief Hayes nodding his head in assent.

The coroner's jury to render the verdict of an unknown driver being responsible was composed of W. A. Woodley, N. Wilbur, J. W. Barlow, Wm Harden, L. F. Green, Thos. Harris, M. Spafford and R. Scrowen. Sergeant Harman was in charge of the jury empanelled.

Article No. II

I am writing these lines in the College Street Public Library, Toronto, where my classmate of high school days, Dr. George Locke, is chief librarian. George distinguished himself in those distant years for his good humour and marvellous proficiency in Latin. His library is very splendid in every way, and than those I frequent in Buffalo and New York, like all libraries on this continent. It is not comparable to the Congressional Library at Washington, which is in a class entirely by itself, and where I hope some day to put the finishing touches on my book, "Marriage and Divorce." On my last visit there they offered to assign me to a private room with typewriter and desk equipment; an attendant would always be available, to obtain for me any book that I might desire. I have spent so many hours in libraries that I like to work under such favorable conditions.

A FUR CAP

Thirty years ago I was in business in Winnipeg and had occasion to go to Chicago. One day as I was walking along Dearborn St., not in the safest part of the city for any person, I noticed, coming closely for comfort. We passed in opposite directions, and after a few paces I turned around to look after them. To my surprise they had turned, too, and were looking at me. Then they halted me, and soon were at my side.

"Excuse us, sir, but we wondered from your cap and fur lining that you were country you belonged?"

"I am from Winnipeg, Canada, when I left there two days ago it was forty degrees below zero."

As it had been very mild and like Spring in Chicago, these men took a parting look, and went on their way as if they had been one of the seven wonders of the world.

This little scene was re-enacted here in Toronto yesterday with slight variations. I was trudging through toyland in one of the large stores when I became aware of the fact that I was being closely watched, and followed by a larger man than myself. I, of course, pretended not to see anything except the fairyland of toys but finally he gently laid his hand upon and gently touched my arm. In broken English and unknown tongue, interpreted by gesture because he possessed ability, but also because after a performance in the "movies" I had taken dressing-room quickly, and mingled with the crowd to hear first-hand criticism concerning his plays. I have been acting similarly in Toronto for several days, and find the line of suits at street corners where papers are sold.

Two cockneys bought a paper and, standing close over the headlines, amused and instructed me. Here is how:—

"The King will fight! Didn't I tell you that, Bill; he belongs to the bull-dog type, he does. When he takes a hold of anything, they will have to gag him to make him let go or shoot him. He'll go to France, I say, Bill, I likes that there King! I wonder if he'll give him if he needed me."

One another asked: I found a man standing alone, in the middle of the sidewalk, dead to the world as he read the paper. So I availed my opportunity to interview him, but I would give the second deal I could write down exactly what this impassioned Italian said in very imperfect English.

"I see you are interested in the London Daily?" I began.

"Am I? Why my blood is full of boils. It's a downright, rotten newspaper. The Editor-in-Chief walks until his back begins to turn in. He says a woman is to love him and become his wife—he's a bachelor, I like him very much. And what do the big high class people in London and England say? No, they don't have just one wife each. And look at Solomon, a nice wise man, too, mind you, he had a hundred wives a long time ago and built a big church for them to go to and pray to. Big, fine, splendid he was wonderful.

"Then look at that Henry VIII, he didn't have so many wives as Solomon but he had plenty, you bet. And look right here in this newspaper how they have wife after wife without divorce. They take a wife such as Henry did, and the people say they have a right to give them lots of money, too. I like him a little better than I do spaghetti."

I had been interviewed like these with men, but I could never get up enough nerve to ask a stranger to whom I could never get up enough nerve to ask a stranger to whom I could never find one in the proper environment buying or reading a paper. At last, I decided to take a long street car ride to the western end of Toronto, and there I met a man "Donnie", with whom I had played school. She was a nickname—"Donnie" at school, because she persistently refused to study a well known French verb. I too received a nickname at school, but not "Donnie". Once at our Literary Society I sang, "I'm only a darkey, a man of renown, a thorn-bush, a rose in the backbone, of" and ever after I was affectionately called "Darkey".

As good luck would have it, she was home and responded to the door-bell.

"Hello Donnie!"

"Why, it's Darkey Riley in person." Meanwhile I went in and took off my hat, coat and as if I belonged there. In fact I had been there before and we were by no means strangers. But without paying any attention to my movements, she asked me:

"And what a ponderous man you have got, Jim! Just like a wise old judge, 'full of years and with ripe experience' no doubt" as she impishly looked down at me with much amusement.

"Donnie, I'm glad I have not lost your favor, Donnie, but I am here on important, even a serious mission."

"Now don't tell me that you are seeking a divorce too."

"Well not exactly, but it is something like that."

Then Donnie laughed loud and long as I had often seen her of yore in our native village, and her grey hair, clear complexion, and sparkling eyes seemed more beautiful than ever.

"You see, Donnie, I have been gathering material all over the world for five years for a book entitled, Marriage and Divorce, and something very unexpected is happening now to supply me with some of the best chapters in the book."

"Very interesting, I assure you."

"It might be said every day as a tell-book on Domestic Relations when Canada awakens to her peril."

"Quite clear; I can easily understand that too. Look over on that magazine table, you clever Riley, do you recognize anything?"

At once I recognized the blue cover of book, "Standing Before Kings."

"That book should be in every school, and to my knowledge it is in many, because it is wonderfully interesting in characters, perseverance and achievement," Donnie went on.

"Thanks a lot; I appreciate your sincerity and good judgment, and for that reason I have come for your opinion of Mrs. Ernest Simpson, the co-Editor of your beloved King."

"We are both old grandparents, who can speak to each other freely and without sentimental reserve.

In the first place Canada are born with a fair degree of natural beauty; clothes, ornaments and make-up complete her as the most powerful being in existence for good or evil.

The true woman with instincts for the home, motherhood and family, directs and controls her charms for good only. Therefore most women belong to this type.

However it must be admitted there is a Mae West type as revealed in her pictures (her real life I am told is quite similar) and which is unscrupulous, ambitious, cruel and poisonous as a rattlesnake. They use their great powers by climb from poverty step by step and marriage by marriage to fame and fortune. While feigning devotion and sincerity, they are base traitors when they have served their purpose.

The history of Beade Warfield Simpson, however, is wonderfully studied to discover to which class she belongs. Is she a type of woman she craves for the envy of all women as she grasps the greatest matrimonial prize in the world?

Women have often been the pivot on which the history of the world and another of a long series such as Helen of Troy, Katharine of Aragon (England), Josephine (France), Queen Victoria of the British Empire, Destiny and Circumstance have decreed that Canada and the United States shall in some way at some time become involved in the case. Mrs. Simpson without being aware of it, may become the storm centre. What has happened before may happen again."

Thanking Donnie for her lifted speech and went my way to Toronto, to read once again, and report progress on "Marriage and Divorce."

Decree Nisi

Many who follow the reported details of divorce trials find that the judgment of the court is a Decree Nisi, and naturally they do not understand what it means.

Nisi is a Latin word for "unless or if not." A decree nisi denotes that the judgment will take effect at a given time, usually six weeks or six months) UNLESS before that time any person shows cause why the case should not be.

On October last Mrs. Simpson was granted a Decree Nisi, which may become an absolute divorce next May, but there are many things that may happen in the meantime.

The importance of this six months' provision is apparent when it is realized that many divorces are granted on the ground of collusion. A man and wife agree to divorce, but in the interval change what each believes to be a more desirable match for money, position or, perhaps through not often, love. The husband bravely agrees to be named for divorce, and the home is planted witnesses, in compromising circumstances, and when the time for the evidence is apparently regular, and perfect, and as a result a decree nisi is granted, which in due time becomes an absolute divorce in six months. The wife, meanwhile, getting judge according to the evidence and the last last dough deep in her heart he feels that the whole thing is a concocted fabric of fraud and perjury, but there is no way of proving that it is proved worthless, he says feebly "I protest," when asked if the plaintiff's lawyer for the usual decree nisi. Judges do not as a rule give judgments in such cases unless, as it happens, there is a deep significance.

The writer leaves tomorrow for his birthplace in Halton county near Georgetown, Ontario, where he expects to discover further copy for The Ontario Intelligencer.

BEST WISHES TO ALL

ICE FISHING SEASON TO OPEN SOON

While ice thickens steadily on the bay under the continued cold weather, many fishermen in the district who have been preparing their shanties and tackle for the past week or so also made preparations at the first of the season's annual fishing trek through the ice. Many holes already chopped have shown that the depth of water under the ice fish are biting well and indications of a successful season are given.

Commercial ice men of the city who have been dependent upon artificial refrigeration and stores at Trenton to fill the demand for their customers have also made preparations to cut the first of the winter's crop. Exceedingly warm weather of the past month had stripped their ice houses to the floor level several weeks ago.

SEASON ADVANCES

Christmas draws nearer. It is little over two weeks away. Toy and present shops are looking their best. Busy days are promised ahead.

So far the trade has been encouraging and the outlook appears brighter than for years for a great participation of the public in the activities of the season.

Shoppers are urged to buy early. Of late years they have been hearkening to the advice to buy early and avoid the rush. The advice holds today with the prospect of larger trading.

Belleville merchants deserve the thanks of all-bigers for the evidences of their wholehearted interest in offering every class of merchandise which it is possible to buy. The city shops are a true cross-section of all that is best and most desirable in the world of gifts and presents.

MERE SPECTATORS

Many persons fail to derive any benefit from worship because they go to church as spectators, the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Foodick, pastor of the Riverside Church, Riverside Drive and 122d Street, New York said in his sermon:

"Many people today get little or nothing out of worship, and the reasons are not far to see. For one thing, they may come to church, but that is no sign at all that they worship. One of the most prevalent American diseases has been called spectatoritis. We go to see football games played, but do not play ourselves; to hear dramas performed, but do not share in the performance.

"To worship, surrounded by the memorials of the noble faith and devotions of the past, listening to inspiring music, and the soul's until the spiritual tide rises within and one overpasses reefs and sandbars that lower moods could not surmount, that is an inward creative experience."

The faith of which he is not a faith in personal reward and personal immortality, but in immortality and reward through the immortality of truth, justice, freedom and love for which men lives, struggles and dies, the Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, rabbi of the Free Synagogue, declared in his sermon at the services of that congregation in Carnegie Hall, New York.

"We cannot believe in a world in which there is immediate reward for the good and immediate condemnation and punishment for the evil," he said, "for if such were the case we would have a vastly different world from the present one.

The Very Rev Milo H. Gates, dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, pleaded for an unlimited Bible in his sermon at the cathedral. He said:

"You cannot drop twelve books out of the Bible—these books covering a period of many years between the Old Testament and the New Testament—any more than you can understand the history of England by cutting out the Cromwellian era, or the history of France by omitting the French Revolutin, or the history of the United States by dropping out the Civil War era.

"I plead for the restoration of these books.

"1. Because a complete Bible was the Bible of the whole church, is today the Bible of the largest number of Christians in the world.

"2. Because we need the complete Bible for the development of religious ideas and hopes.

"3. Because of the influence of these books on the arts and literature, and,

"Lastly, because in these books one finds selections of the greatest beauty and the loftiest inspiration."

The contemporary relevance of the Bible's advice, solace and inspiration was stressed by the Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray at the Church of the Transfiguration, 1 East Twenty-ninth Street.

"The Bible's place on the modern bookshelf is won for it by its varied pages of philosophy, psychology, history and excellent poetry, meeting the needs of every kind which arise in daily life," Dr. Ray continued.

"Hundreds of books are published and read these days, intended for people who need some kind of intellectual or psychological help. We need not be surprised that every one of these philosophies is based on one of the several teachers in the Bible." The prophets especially, Dr. Ray pointed out, were moral leaders and keen judges of character.

The world owes all its outward impulses to men ill at ease. The happy man inevitably confines himself within narrow bounds.—Hawthorne.

Progress is the law of life; man is not man as yet.—Browning.

Progress is a real cure for an overestimate of ourselves.—George Macdonald.

SHAKESPEARE IN THE PARK

Down the long alleys, under the green trees
They came, you hear them, lovely and light of toe,
These, in no motley that the wise eyes sees,
Those, that the listening heart alone may know,
Who within English earth have long been sleepers—
Burbage; Ben Jonson; sullen and lonely Ann;
The golden lads and girls and chimney that first brief boy's Titania; Caliban
Who drank himself to death in sixteen-two;
The child that played Sebastian to the queen;
Petruchio, who slipper'd the first shrew;
And some old Falstaff, babbling of the green.
Ah, but they crowd so close that heart would swear
Suddenly, on this twentieth-century stage,
Earlier laughters bang in the golden air,
Earlier slips are roused to a perilous rage;
Belphoebe's sitting in state at the new Rose
New wit's on fire in the kingdoms of the mind,
And over Thames all swan-enchanted flows,
Bearing against her heart the Golden Hind.

DEATH OF JOHN RINGLING, LAST OF FAMOUS RINGLING BROS., of circus fame, recalls to Old Timer that the Ringlings first brought the thrilling stunt of looping-the-loop with automobile to Belleville, and see he, there sure was standing room only, and a double row of black tobacco chewers on the top back bleacher rows. Ringling Brothers started their circus in Baraboo, Wisconsin, as young men, when they formed a travelling concert company, which grew into a wagon show, which in turn grew and grew and grew into the largest circus in the world even swallowing Barnum and Bailey, which previously had swallowed Adam Forepaugh, white elephant and all. John Ringling was buried Friday at services at the Funeral Church at Broadway and Sixty-sixth Street, New York City, and there were many notables of the entertainment world present. Dexter Fellowes, in charge of Ringling publicity for many years, was there, also several newspaper men who had been connected at various times with "the greatest show on earth". Mrs. Sophie Colliins, 87-year-old cook who prepared Mr. Ringling's meals for twenty-five years was present, and from Sarasota, Florida, winter home of the Ringling Circus, came Mr. and Mrs. Haxen J. Cook, Rev. Howard R. Gold, of the Trinity Lutheran Church in New Rochelle, who knew the Ringling Brothers when they had headquarters in Baraboo, Wisconsin, officiated at the funeral services and said "He was a kind man. He was considerate of his associates and they loved him dearly and were loyal to him. He was generous in his gifts. The business of the circus was lifted to a high ethical and moral plane by the Ringling Brothers. They said that if they could not conduct that kind of business they would not conduct it at all. But that was only one of the contributions Ringling Bros. made. Ringling Brothers are credited with driving the grafters out of the circus business. There was a time when the graft was the most important part of the circus, and those who remember the circus that passed through Ontario one summer under the name of Cook and Whitby, saw the grafter circus at its highest point of efficiency—every form of crooked gambling was practised in the side show while confidence men worked thousand dollar schemes on the outside, and one Brockville man lost a fine team of driving horses and several thousand dollars to the sharpers. It was alleged at the time that the circus was preceded by slick "fixers" who made the going good for the grafters and greased the "get-away". Gradually the graft shows had to tone down as public sentiment rebelled, and finally Ringling Brothers pitched the grafters out, lock, stock, and barrell by purchasing most of the small circuses and banning graft in all its forms, policing its own lot and environs Circus Day and banishing any shady characters attracted by circus day crowds to work nefarious schemes. Phineas Taylor Barnum has been gathered to his fathers, so has Adam Forepaugh, and now the last of the circus Ringlings has taken his last bow here and turned his face toward that other stage, hidden to mortals by that mysterious curtain which rises only for those whose ties with earth have all been severed.

Gillette Safety Razor Company Wins Special Safety Award

Operates 2 Years Without Single Lost-time Accident

The Quebec Association for the Prevention of Industrial Accidents has awarded the Gillette Safety Razor Company of Canada Limited, Montreal, a special diploma for operating two years (a total of 850,000 man-hours) without a single lost-time accident.

Commenting on the remarkable record, J. J. Gamgemeni, Managing Director, said: "We discovered years ago that, completely aside from the human angle, industrial accidents are industrial waste, and are for the most part, unnecessary. In the manufacture of Gillette Blades and Razors, much of our machinery and equipment is of our own design and invention. Our engineers are called upon, not only to design machines which will perform efficiently, but also ones that are thoroughly safe for the men to operate. When negotiating a new piece of machinery, all possible hazards are anticipated and suitable safety devices are employed.

"When one considers that Gillette employees are constantly dealing with the sharpest things in the world—shaving edges so sharp that Nova Pilbeam in the best picture of the year "Nine Days a Queen" raised a four star special in Liberty Magazine.

$5,000 of them would fit on the face of a penny—it becomes all the more remarkable that accidents have been avoided for the amazingly long period of two years.

"In addition to the safety devices prepared by our own engineers, progress itself automatically contributes its no small measure to safeguarding human life and limb. To give you a specific example, most people think of a hardware store as a great, roaring, flaming contrivance, belching fire and smoke. But the electrically controlled furnaces in which Gillette blade steel is tempered give no evidence whatever of flames or smoke. They are neat, white, fume contributing units and the surface of which the hand may be placed without the slightest harm. The same holds true of the heat reaches the terrific intensity of 1500 degrees."

The Gillette Safety Razor Company is Canada's largest manufacturer of razor blades and safety razors. Apart from the scientific equipment by which this company is famous, the plant itself has long been considered a model of safety and the present award is the culmination of a record of which the Gillette Company is especially proud.

THE DOUBLE-BARRED CROSS

International Symbol of the Crusade against Tuberculosis

As armies march across the pages of history, fighting for their rights and their freedom, so is the case may be, one cause seems to blaze brighter than all others as all such causes appear. That cause is the fight for health.

Good or bad, the cause was always fought for with a fervor and energy which gradually became a battle cry. Christian armies of the Middle Ages carried over into our modern civilization and came out each peaceful occasion still follow that age-old custom.

It was therefore quite appropriate that the war against tuberculosis should have chosen, and again after much thought, a symbol which would be known throughout the entire international universe, should be chosen from the battle fields of the past. It was given careful consideration for it had to be something which would be universally appealing, universally recognized and universally appealed, and yet it should be distinctly distinct. And so the double-barred cross was adopted international symbol in the Crusade against Tuberculosis.

It would seem that the eighteen-nineties or the eighteen-eighties or the eighteen-seventies would have chosen such a symbol that would have meaning, but it was not until the International Conference of the Red (Geneva) Cross, in 1902, that the double-barred cross was first used. It was then that Dr. Paul Lowenstein, of Paris, put forward the cross as the symbol of the campaign against tuberculosis. Dr. Lowenstein, Author and Surgeon, They had also to avoid the Cattle, the Greek, the Latin and the Maltese, in the words of Dr. D. A. Stewart, Author of "The Double-Barred Cross" "the cross which the Crusaders bore on their left sleeve."

And so we have the gallant Crusader with the double cross on his two crusades accomplished, now a symbol of peace and of a new purpose, humanitarian and successful crusade against tuberculosis, which is being waged by the National Tuberculosis Association, Canada, and Toronto will be greatly appreciated.

HAD RHEUMATIC PAINS for 25 YEARS

His Arms Were Becoming Useless

It was about 25 years ago that rheumatism first marked down this sufferer and finally the day came when he could hardly lift his arms. But he found relief there in this letter he tells the whole story:

"About 25 years ago I first experienced slight muscular rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. A few years later lumbago also attacked me. They graduated each year until the pain got acute in both arms and shoulders. I could not lift a pail of water with my arm extended straight out. About 12 months ago I bought a bottle of Kruschen Salts and by the time it was finished I was agreeably surprised at the great improvement. I bought another one, and when that was finished all the pain had disappeared, and has never appeared since."—T.R.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently caused by deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to eliminate this excess uric acid.

DISTURBING PEACE IS CHARGE LAID

Allege Transport Drivers Left Engines Running While Parked

Charges of disturbing the peace were laid against two Toronto transport drivers, who left the engines of their vehicles running on Front Street, thereby being a public nuisance, local police authorities revealed this morning. The cases will be heard in the local police court on Friday.

Early Tuesday morning police received complaints to the effect that motors were being left running at the lower end of Front Street, through which medium residents of that district were unable to procure their accustomed sleep. Investigation by police resulted in the finding of two large transports, left parked with the engines running. Later, in a local restaurant, P. H. Meakin and William Yale, both Toronto truck drivers, admitted they had left the engines of their trucks running, while they were procuring a meal. The cold weather prompted the drivers to leave the engines running, they stated.

TEEN-AGED BOYS ARE ENTERTAINED

Rev. R. E. Newman is Special Speaker at Club Meeting

Playing hosts to their sponsored "Boys' Club", the local Y's Men's Club entertained fifteen teen-aged boys at their weekly meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. Monday evening. Rev. R. E. Newman, of Holloway street United Church, was the guest speaker of the evening and spoke to the younger boys on the experiences of his own life.

The Boys' Club of the "Y", sponsored by the Y's Men's Club, consists of four boys from each public school, who are afforded the privileges of the local Y.M.C.A., with each Y's man taking g'orded interest in one boy, whom he sponsors and furthers the "big brother movement". Rev. Mr. Newman congratulated the members of the Y's Men's Club for their interest shown in the youth of Canada and assured them they would some day reap many times told benefit from their efforts of today.

Speaking to the younger lads, Rev. Newman said, "Boys, you must hustle, never say 'I can't', because there is plenty of work to be done and it's the hard-working boy who conquers. When I was 12 years of age, I failed in my entrance examination. I was discouraged and took my furniture. When I was 23 I had the urge to join the ministry. I went back to school and passed my entrance, graduating at high school when I was 34 years of age. Later I went to Wesley College to teach school and continued until I was ordained and I never regretted the hard work and the many friends I made through those long tedious years," pointed out Rev. Newman in stressing the hardships boys must face to advance in this world.

Rev. Mr. Newman later gave the boys and club members a word picture of his war experiences in the Mediterranean, British Isles, Salonika and Egypt, all of which proved highly interesting and educational.

In concluding the speaker said to the boys present as a parting message—"Be honest and upright, work hard and you will surely succeed." President Jack Wilson announced the Y's Men's world hold their semi-annual rummage sale on Saturday, during the evening George Wardle, local musician, rendered two fine cornet solos to the delight of the visiting boys.

PICTON

Picton.—Death came unexpectedly on Saturday, December 5th, to Martin Delaney, of Black Creek. Mr. Delaney had not enjoyed good health for some time but death followed a few days' illness with pleurisy. He was seventy-one years of age and had been a life-long resident of this neighborhood. There he enjoyed the esteem of many friends. His wife, before her marriage, May Martin, died a few months ago. Surviving are four daughters, Mrs. Eddie Shannon and Mary Delaney, Toronto; Geraldine at home, and Beatrice, at Read, and one son, Eugene, at home. Private funeral service will be held from Church on Monday morning was largely attended. Reverend Mast was assisted by Rev. Fr. Meehan and interment was made in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Many attended the sale at the home of the late Dr. Brancombe and Mrs. Brancombe, parents of Gena Brancombe Tenny, on Bridge Street, on Saturday afternoon. Those who expected to purchase some furniture were disappointed as those pieces were apparently reserved by the family, but there were many interesting smaller items such as candelabra and dishes. One buyer secured a good collection of sheet music, including several compositions of Gena Brancombe for a very small sum. Another gentleman who is interested in masquerades, carnivals, etc., bought a fine "silk hat", box and all for fifteen cents.

Canadian Bridge Team Including Mrs. J. A. Faulkner Wins U. S. Championship

The First Time That The Winners Have Not Been U. S. Residents

WIN BY A HALF MATCH

The team of four contract bridge championship of the United States rests in the hands of a mixed foursome from Canada, Mrs. J. A. Faulkner of this city, Mrs. W. M. Anderson, D. G. Farquharson and R. B. Reardon, of Toronto who defeated the pick of the United States bridge players in one of the most thrilling finishes ever seen in national championship bridge.

The event was decided at the tenth annual championship tournament of the American Bridge League, at Chicago, and marks the first time in the history of the organization that any championship event has been won by players not resident in the United States. It is also the second time that a national team of four championship has been won by a team which had as members two women.

The margin of victory was only one-half match point, the winners taking 38 matches and the runners-up, Arthur Glatt, Laura Heiner, John R. Smith and Albert Weke of Chicago having 37 1-2 matches.

In the finals there were ten teams qualified and when play was begun on the last afternoon of the tournament the Canadians had a two-match handicap to overcome, generally considered an almost insurmountable obstacle with only 36 boards to play. However, they showed a fine display steady and consistent bridge, holding almost faultlessly, and dropping only one trick in the play. As a result they won 22 1-2 out of 36 matches, almost a record for tournament play in an event of this importance.

This Keen Held by Many Famous Players

The championship is one of the most important in American duplicate bridge. The title has been held by teams headed by Ely Culbertson, P. Hal Sims, Oswald Jacoby and others whose fame is more than nation-wide and attracts the strongest players in the country.

Besides Mrs. Faulkner, the team is made up of Mrs. W. M. Anderson, the wife of an official of the North American Life Assurance Company; Mr. Farquharson, a barrister and solicitor and Mr. Reardon who is one of Toronto's star bridge players and manager of the Toronto Y's Men's Club.

Welcomed By Friends

Returning to Toronto on Saturday, the victorious four were royally welcomed at the Union Station by an enthusiastic gathering of friends and bridge players. The title has been won by Canada for the first time the highest honors in championship bridge, to say nothing of the handsome trophy and beautiful individual prizes. The foursome, all master bridge players, is being showered with congratulations from all parts of Canada and the United States. Mrs. Faulkner, who is spending a few days at her home in this city, in discussing the interesting events with the Ontario Intelligencer, said that the week with the United States was a most exhausting. Pitting with with acknowledged bridge leaders throughout the United States requires intense and complete concentration of the good fellowship of their opponents and of the wonderful hands played throughout the tournament. Other members of the four also spoke briefly.

In the thrill of the outstanding success, the fact that Mrs. Faulkner and Mrs. Anderson, playing with two women players whom they had never seen before came second in the ladies' pairs was quite eclipsed.

The only Canadians in the tournament, the new champions, bring the trophy out of the United States for the first time.

DESERONTO

Deseronto—A card party was held in the White Hall on Thursday evening December the 3rd under the auspices of the Women's Citizens' League. The winners were Mrs. Chas. Higgs and Mrs. Stewart.

On Monday evening last week the Ladies' Aid Society of the Church of Redeemer held a St. Andrew's Supper in the church parlor, with a good attendance.

The Conservative dance which was held at Duck Inn on Friday night December 4th was largely attended.

Dr. F. C. Curran is able to be out again after his recent illness.

Mrs. Gordon and Mrs. Stanton are visiting in Michigan.

Mrs. T. Hetherington is spending the winter in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Smith of North Bay are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Ravin.

The young people are taking advantage of the town's free open air rink, the Mill Pond. The ice is of a firm quality and a good depth.

Mr. Gerald Keech is spending the winter at his home here.

A number from here motored to Madoc on Wednesday and attended the nomination meeting in the Armouries.

PLACE OF EMPIRE SHOWN IN CRISIS

United Kingdom Newspapers Discuss Constitutional Issues

London, Dec. 9 (CP)—Many United Kingdom newspapers today discussed the constitutional crisis arising out of the king's romance with Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The Manchester Guardian said: "To the ordinary man perhaps an unexpected result of the crisis has been the laying bare of the part the crown now plays in empire relations. The Imperial Conference of 1926, the framers of the Statute of Westminster, hardly realized how accurate their work would be tested when they made the king the most important and vital link in their schemes. The ostensible reason for the abdication, if one is essential to a change in the king's marital relations. It is equally recognized if the outcome should be his abdication."

King's Hold On Affection

The Liverpool Daily Post, referring to the dominions, said: "The king has a peculiarly strong hold upon their affections. No doubt the constitutional crisis therefore has a serious shock to them. But greatly though they have been moved their bearing has been restrained and correct.

"The Dominion governments appear to have felt that their primary duty lay with the British government but it is clear that they are ready to carry out their imperial functions with sympathy and courage. Indeed, one cannot observe in any manifestations here or throughout the empire the slightest reason for fearing that whatever task the crisis might impose would not be performed with the generous feeling and freedom from hysteria which are characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon peoples in the face of great happenings.

Losses Seen In Industry.

The Dundee Courier said that some of the results "caused by raising of the issue at the present time are those of a purely material kind, affecting many industries at work preparing for the coronation. Heavy losses already have been incurred and the present hold-up is adding to these daily.

"But the intangible damage is far more serious. Both in Britain and the empire one finds innumerable indications of the rapid formation of divisions of a new and strange kind, accompanied by the ominous generation of a high temperature. They are detectable in parliament where a strangely-assorted faction, ranging in political opinion from Winston Churchill to William Gallacher (the only Communist M. P.) seems about to crystallize into a new 'King's Friends' party.

"Probably of more importance are the jobbing rabble in all the main cities of rising class sentiment and feeling. More than here the question at issue is in process of being falsely simplified and presented as one of antique conventions and snobbery against modern broadmindedness and common sense.

"That is not the issue at all."

DUKE OF YORK

elegance and firmness until the official moved—and then he generally fell off."

But the duke kept trying and in 1939 Captain Drummond was able to say: "He is indeed a rider to the hounds as anyone."

Stammering, perhaps, the Duke's greatest handicap. His inability to speak smoothly made his speeches during his father's reign, his substitute for his majesty's "my father."

However he began intensive two-year course in sentiment and vocal exercises. For hours he would practice 'ah' sounds. The reward for his effort came in 1927 when he went to Australia and, with fluent, unbroken speech, opened the new parliament buildings in Canberra.

Is Known at First Hand

Edward is known the world over, but the Duke of York, though far less a public figure, as King would have as subjects, more persons who know him from first-hand contact.

These contacts mainly are part of hundreds of visits to factories and his famous boys' camps. Since 1931, with the exception of this year, he has been host to 400 boys on a fortnight's camping vacation. Half of his guests have come from the factories, the rest from the great preparatory schools, including Eton and Harrow. When he was married, he arranged that some of his work-boy friends to be invited.

He has visited every part of the Kingdom over. Employers often tried to make ceremonial occasions of these visits but the Duke brushed ceremony aside and, slipping into overalls, said he wanted to mingle with the workmen.

A Man of Many Offices

"It falls to my lot," he said once, "to hold many positions: I am president of hospitals and societies of every kind; I hold commissions in all the fighting services; I am a Maori Chief, a Dry Scout, a trapper . . . but I have never been invited to become a judge."

He has done almost everything from driving locomotives (one of his hobbies) to playing tennis in Wimbledon tournaments.

Destined for the navy, fi health during the war interrupted his service but he was under fire in the Battle of Jutland and was cited for coolness in the action. After the war he went to Cambridge to study history, economics and civics. In all his work he has insisted on first-hand knowledge.

Once when he walked down thru' London's East End he was affectionately mobbed" by a host of girls. One succeeded in kissing him. Officials were horrified. "I've no bones broken," he commented.

Belief General in London

Galleries filled with curious spectators, anxious for word of the latest development in the controversy and apparently disappointed over the Prime Minister's refusal to expand his most recent statement, emptied quickly.

Walter T. Monckton, the King's legal adviser and Sir Edward Peacock, Receiver-General for the Duchy of Cornwall, called again at the Prime Minister's residence while Baldwin was in Commons.

Members And Spectators Tense

The tense members and spectators took only passing interest in the preliminary series of questions hurriedly put to the various ministers and as hurriedly answered.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, replying to a query, told the Commons:

"If His Majesty's Government have for some time been giving their earnest consideration to the question of provision of relief for the Spanish civilian population."

Wish to Avoid Abdication

Organs of all shades of opinion urge the King to consider well before taking the irrevocable step of abdication. It is urged upon him that by renunciation of his proposed marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson he can rededicate himself to public service, restore the prestige of the throne and re-establish himself in the affections of his people.

"If the King abdicates his abdication probably will be signed with Queen Mary and the King's brothers as sole witnesses. During the illness of King George V a council of state was appointed to act in his name. It consisted of members of the royal family exclusively on the "ground that under the existing relations between the Dominions and the mother country only members of the royal family were competent to act for the whole British commonwealth. A British Minister would be competent to act only for the United Kingdom, the crown colonies and the protectorates. He would not represent the Dominions.

Public sentiment is changing. Members on both sides in the House of Commons are receiving mail from their constituencies which indicates that the deep sympathy with the King which was most pronounced over the week-end is rapidly giving place to a feeling of dismay over the continued delay.

Opposition to the King's marriage with Mrs. Simpson, either as his late legislation by all the Empire parliaments to confirm the accession of a new King, to bar any issue of a marriage between Edward and Mrs. Simpson from succession to the throne and to relieve Edward VIII after his abdication of any disabilities under the Royal Marriages Act. In the case of the United Kingdom, a bill also probably would be passed to make financial provision for him.

Walter T. Monckton, attorney-general of the Duchy of Cornwall, and Sir Edward Peacock, the Canadian-born receiver-general of the Duchy, were in touch with the cabinet ministers. They left No. 10 Downing Street for long enough to hurry to Buckingham Palace and confer with the King's staff, however.

Australian Parliament Standing By

The Australian parliament is standing by. John Curtin, leader of the Federal Labor Party, said there must not be any coercion by the minister of any Dominion upon the King in choosing a wife but the King must not ask for a special legislation to settle his difficulties in choosing a wife."

New Zealand business interests are disturbed. Large coronation orders have been suspended.

Whatever the King told Mr. Baldwin in their five-hour conference at the fort last night on his decision concerning his proposed marriage with Mrs. Wallis Simpson remained a secret of the company gathered there.

Not a single morning or afternoon London paper even pretended to have pierced the deep silence.

Most of them seemed certain the king—following Mrs. Simpson's voluntary offer to retire from the scene—finally had given in to Mr. Baldwin's pleading.

The wish, however, possibly was father to the thought.

Cabinet Ministers Reach Downing Street

Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary; Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, and Leslie Hore-Belisha, Minister of Transport, arrived at No. 10 Downing Street together just a few minutes before the cabinet session was called to order, when Mr. Baldwin related the import of his long conference with King Edward VIII last night.

They were followed past the phalanx of photographers and newspapermen by Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty; Sir Kingsley Wood, Minister of Health; Ernest Brown, Minister of Labor; and Oliver Stanley, Minister of Education.

Downing street was crowded but the watchers remained silent and undemonstrative as the sober-faced ministers arrived.

His Majesty remained at Fort Belvedere. His younger brother, the Duke of Kent, also was there.

Mr. Baldwin, who has told King Edward his government would not sanction a morganatic marriage with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, returned to the capital last night after his conference with the king at Fort Belvedere.

The Duke of York, next in line for the throne should the King relinquish it, and the Duke of Kent, took part in the talk.

Baldwin's Message Contents Unknown

Whether Mr. Baldwin brought back with him final word from the king was not disclosed.

One rumor said the king already had abdicated, renouncing forever rights to the mightiest monarchy in the world, to marry the woman of his choice. There was no confirmation from responsible sources.

King Edward faced these alternatives:

He could renounce his desire to marry Mrs. Simpson, thus automatically solving the crisis.

He could force a showdown with Mr. Baldwin's government, fighting for the enactment of a law to permit a morganatic marriage.

He could abdicate and join Mrs. Simpson in her temporary retreat in France for the marriage he told Mr. Baldwin he desired.

Delay Strengthens Hope King to Remain

Many of them believed each day of delay in reaching a decision would weaken the King's strong desire to marry when he chooses.

Crowds began gathering early along Whitehall and Tiny, dead-end Downing Street, in which the Prime Minister's official residence is situated.

The Duke of Kent remained overnight with his brother at Belvedere.

Soon after Baldwin started his return to London, the Duke also drove away, but a short time later he returned, turning so sharply from the narrow Ascot road into a side driveway that he caught unawares the policeman who was pressing the arms and stamping his feet on the icy roadway.

Three morning newspapers, The Morning Post, The Daily Herald, and The News-Chronicle, for the first time since the crisis broke on the public did not comment editorially today.

London Newspaper Sees Crisis Past

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, however, jubilantly proclaimed: "The crisis has passed into history and the King still is with us."

It referred to Mrs. Simpson's statement declaring she would renounce her love for the monarch if it would save the situation.

The Express said the world's been sympathetic to the King, exulted:

"Can we rejoice? Yes, we can rejoice!"

"No question of Crown over-riding cabinet has ever arisen, nor have ministers imposed surrender upon the King on a highly personal issue.

"Certainly there was no disagreement that might have led to departure of either King or ministers.

"The deadlock has been broken by the act of renunciation by the woman. Let us say this for Mrs. Simpson!

"Her name has been thrown about by gossips in some parts of the world for a long time, and on our part for long enough. By her word, she answers the whole pack of them."

Welter of Rumors Circulated

A welter of rumors circulated while the Empire and the world waited to learn the sovereign's decision.

One was that there was no assurance the Duke of York would take the throne if King Edward abdicated.

The report continued that the Duke preferred rather to see the royal burden pass to Princess Elizabeth, his eldest daughter, who would rule under a regency until her majority, with her father among the council.

Abdication of King Edward and succession of his brother the Duke of York, to the throne would make Queen Elizabeth, the much loved throughout England as the country's "sweetheart", next in the line of succession to the throne. She is already being schooled as a future queen. Princess "Lilibet" is a prime favorite of her bachelor uncle, King Edward.

KING'S CONCERN FOR WORKERS—NOT WALLY—IRKS BALDWIN, SAY SOME.

When King Edward Visited Wales

Prime Minister Baldwin

There are some who say the constitutional crisis in Great Britain results not only from King Edward's desire to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, but from the King's difference in views with the Conservative cabinet over social welfare. Some observers point out that Edward's recent visit to Wales, talking with the jobless and viewing their squalid homes, was judged by Prime Minister Baldwin and some of his ministers as being too political. That visit "could be interpreted as blaming the inertia of certain ministers," according to one Parisian writer. King Edward is shown in the photograph talking with residents in Wales on that recent visit. Prime Minister Baldwin, whose lack of action in the depressed areas has been criticized, is seen in a new portrait.

Should the present crisis in England cause the Baldwin government to resign, similar action may be taken by governments of the Dominions according to well informed government officials. Hertzog of South Africa, have not as yet given out official statements.

RENUNCIATION MAY AID ISSUE

New Zealand Newspaper Says King May be Fortified by Offer

London, Dec. 9 (CP)—Comment on the constitutional difficulties created by the king's wish to marry Mrs. Simpson continued in the dominions' press.

The Otago, New Zealand, Daily Times said:

"King Edward may be fortified in his resolution by the offer of renunciation from Mrs. Simpson. A similar act of renunciation on the part of His Majesty would dissipate the mists of despair that have been hanging over the world during the unforgetable days of this crisis."

The Farmer's Sun, Bloomfontein, Orange Free State, declared: "The consistory of silence, followed by the shock of the monarchial crisis, should not have been permitted."

Prime Minister Baldwin's statement yesterday in the House of Commons, "The Times" added, cleared the maze of misrepresentation, but not before the bedlam of rumor had done almost irrecovable harm in the empire."

The Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald, commenting on Mrs. Simpson's statement issued Monday, said:

"They are words of self-abnegation uttered from a woman's heart, to dissociate herself from the notion she would influence the king's decision."

SILENCE POLICY IS MAINTAINED

Premier King Holds a Conference With Sir Francis Floud

Ottawa, Dec. 9 (CP)—Uncertainty over the outcome of the constitutional crisis confronting the empire is evident in official circles in Ottawa and a speedy end to the present situation is desired.

Government gone on as usual but a complimentary dinner the National Liberal Federation was to have tendered the cabinet tomorrow night has been cancelled. Prime Minister Mackenzie King was expected to make a speech which would have been broadcast throughout the country.

Occupation of the cabinet with other matters was given as the reason for dropping the dinner and it was also suggested the time was hardly opportune for a major political speech.

Mr. King continued his policy of silence and there was no indication he would discuss the crisis publicly until there are further developments in London and further statements from Prime Ministers Stanley Baldwin.

Yesterday the prime minister had another conference with Sir Francis Floud British high commissioner, who cancelled a tour of Northern Ontario mining towns he was to have made this week. Over the week-end the prime minister had an earlier talk with Sir Francis and several with Lord Tweedsmuir, the governor-general.

The cabinet met yesterday but it was definitely stated the constitutional crisis was not discussed. With an inter-provincial-dominion conference under way today it is not expected the cabinet will meet again until Friday.

Parliament has been called to meet in annual session Jan. 14 and there has been no suggestion of an advance in the date.

PARTING SHOTS IN CAMPAIGN FIRED

between two country doctors and two political parties.

In a campaign equalled in intensity only by a provincial general election, Liberal and Conservative concentrated their forces on this struggling, essentially rural riding. It was the first test of strength since Premier Hepburn's government started its legislative program in 1934 and the first time Conservatives were led in a fight by their new leader, Hon. Earl Rowe.

Both parties claim this town, larger centre in the riding and home of 2,500 people, as their own. It was here a Liberal cavalcade began to wind up the campaign last night. While Conservatives gathered in the old opera house to hear Mr. Rowe urge Dr. Harold E. Welsh of North to be elected to the seat vacant by the death of J. F. Hill, Conservative whip, Liberals heard Premier Hepburn make his final speech in a garage converted for the occasion.

Both Forecast Victory

The leaders agreed on the issue. Legislation passed last session giving provincial subsidies to a large share of corporation taxes through assessment to the municipalities.

"It seems to be the school question," said Mr. Hepburn.

"No, sir, not the paramount issue Mr. Rowe said: "You can challenge the right of any legislature, no matter how large a majority it has, which deprives a constitutional minority of whatever rights are safe under the constitutional provision on which they are based has been recklessly disregarded."

"I predict a sweeping victory for the Liberal-Conservative candidate," Mr. Rowe said in the course of his speech. "I predict a sweeping victory for Liberal-Conservative candidate tomorrow. It will be a first step toward the province-wide defeat of the Hepburn government at the next general election. The amendment to the Assessment Act, the disrespect for our judiciary and the imperial sport system are issues apart from Ontario in the wake of this government."

Educational Minister Heard

Education Minister T. L. Kennedy, speaking at the Belleville Academy of Music, College Hill, asked electors to give Dr. Welsh the support of Legislature, Mr. Hepburn said the tendency to deny the right of "the whole province" to help finance education in the backward districts of Ontario by the traditionally Conservative riding in that cobalt.

Riding Created in 1923

The present riding was created by the 1923 Redistribution Act from the ridings of Hastings East and Hastings North. Conservative sentiment was in Hastings North while Hastings East returned the party only four times since Confederation.

Premier Hepburn charged last night a campaign of "personal abuse and vilification."

Carried on against him, he said he was assailed "in the most vicious which appears paramount in the school issue.

"I didn't think my Conservative friends would stoop so low as to set family against family, children against children in a campaign of religious and racial prejudice," he said.

The school tax legislation restricts an injustice caused the Roman Catholic minority in Ontario by growth of corporations, he said.

"The Hogarths, the Hoits, financial giants by whom we will not bow" were financing the Conservatives in the Cobalt campaign, and he accused the former Henry government of having financial interest by selling interest bonds at low prices.

Of the government's fiscal record he said: "We have not borrowed money for over a year and a half and we are not piling up overdrafts either. Tax revenues are buoyant and Ontario's finances are rapidly getting into fine shape."

BALL MOGULS JOIN FORCES CLIP LANDIS

Majors And Minors Vote to Limit Baseball Czar's Power

By PAUL MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—Step one in the campaign to clip the all-powerful wings of Kenesaw Mountain Landis, czar of baseball, has been completed.

Over the old but dynamic Commissioner's protest, the majors have joined the minors in voting to recommend to clubs of lower classification all the players they want without selling him about it.

Next, unless all signs fail and the recommendation wins the support of the two-thirds majority necessary to become the movement to wipe the baseball rule from the baseball statutes, permitting major leaguers to send the fertile two fields without waiving the rule at all, is to be put to a ball player—a risk that confronts baseball's brass in the renovated baseball case.

When the Commissioner ... in 1921, the minor leagues were fighting for their existence with the majors and their baseball manicrats endangering the little fellows, from game to game. Darn spitball, to cheat and that.

Today, estimates Minor League representatives in the meeting, at least about 10 of the 186 Minor League clubs are owned outright by major league interests with Major League teams. Because of a combination of circumstances, the Major is in no connection is necessary for the life of the Minor League clubs. Hence, what's good for the Majors is good for the Minors. The Majors do not want the rule, which forbids a big league representative even signing up a player for a club not signed a Minor League contract.

So the sandlot rule, barring unconscionable pressure from baseball's Landis, appears doomed.

Landis, who never before had lost a battle during his near 16 years of ... dom, now has lost three within ... space, of six days.

When you sit down to a friendly game of draw poker, did you ever the chances against making a royal flush with a one card draw are 649,740 to one? If you hold a four card straight flush and try to fill with a one car draw, the odds are 44,974 to one against you. Why even if you have threes, the chances are 4,186 to one, that you won't make fours. These statistics were arrived at by D. W. Timberlake of the U.S.A., an expert in the matter of card games. He also says the chances against making a full hand, when drawing to two pair, are 661 to one, but the chances on a card draw, that is if you are at all interested. If you hold a pair and draw three cards the odds are 3 1-2 to one yet do not better Mr. Timberlake submits, while if you hold threes and a "kicker" the chances are 11 to 1 you don't better your hand in any manner, so you see the odds are all against ye gardies, but still it's fun to try and assume a "poker face" and bluff the other fellow in a good game of draw poker at that.

Now that Belleville and Trenton are reported to be satisfied with their O.H.A. intermediate grouping Mr. Tobey Dornan and R.C.A.F. interests are beginning to scowl. For instance here is an example of the feelings of Trenton and the intermediate relative to the proposed intermediate O.H.A. set-up in group No. 1 he says—

"As far as those O.H.A. groupings, we aren't at all fussy about the latter layout. Our Cubs are in with Belleville and that's that. It doesn't look so hot to us at all. The intermediate group is all right if the Belleville and Trenton teams do not get their best players from us. Peter Pete and the Flyers (The Trenton Airport) getta "A", and having an extra hockey player. That's what they want, but the locals should not stand for it. If these pay out a "B" rating, then the Flyers and Peter Pete should upon ours. That's what Frank Banfield thinks. He doesn't care for the junior group, either, but figures nothing can be done about it."

If the Peterborough interests think Belleville hockey fans are satisfied or even interested in the proposed junior O.H.A. grouping of Tweed, Peterborough and Belleville, they're sadly mistaken. Manager Eddie Thomas wants no part of Frank Rockland's pets Peter, Pete, Peterborough and Tweed to meet in a junior group when the ... Jumps are small, but I dobbt very much if we could finance a junior team to play with Peterborough, although we'll try if the others desire it." was Eddie Thomas' comment today.

Rector as the intermediate loop is concerned the Belleville Redmen have a perfect and legitimate right to be classed in intermediate "B" with the O.H.A. The Redmen were in that classification last year and are not strange today. As a matter of fact we only learned today, that Don "Dobby" Morton, veteran goalie of the Redmen, may also be a loss to local cause this winter, which will mean Belleville may be minus the services of four of last year's team, with no visible outlook of adequate material at hand to fill those positions. Last year the Peterborough intermediates gave the intermediate provincial "A" champions, the Oshawa Chevies, their hardest competition throughout the entire season. There is little doubt but the R. A.F. "Flyers" are a good class "A" material, thus assuring the group of two good "A" clubs and two good "B" teams. If the four clubs combined into an intermediate schedule, then the fans of all cities would be afforded some good hockey. Of course to protect the patrons of the game, all scheduled matches should count in the final standing, however.

The leadership of the "Y" city basketball league will be at stake tonight when the Golds clash with the Blacks at the Y.

Although it has not been opened for public skating as yet, the Belleville Arena resounded with the ring of skate blades today for the first for the first time this season last night. The Belleville Rotary Club the inaugural workout at the carnival rink, presented by the Redmen has been allotted practice hour, arena officials announced today, and intermediates will practice from 7.00 until 8.00. Manager Eddie Thomas asks all ... auxiliary to have all available players try out for positions with the Redmen this season and no positions will be closed. The player making the best showing during the practice season workouts is the player who is going to receive the most consideration and be used regularly. With so many of last year's regulars having retired or having migrated to other centres, there are numerous open positions in all departments.

After viewing the "Piers" in action last evening we can recommend them to Belleville fans as being a hockey team worthy of their support. The "Piers" possess what usually goes to make up a good hockey team, speed, skill, knowledge of the game and willingness to play the game.

Weather permitting the Quinte Skating Club will hold their inaugural at their new rink on Thursday night. Stan Wilbur, guiding mentor of the fancy and figure skaters of this enterprising club, informs us the club today enjoys its largest membership in history. The club executive has the assistance of the Toronto Skating Club of occasional tutoring throughout the coming season. The Quinte City club will send advanced pupils to Belleville at different intervals, these pupils to act as teachers for the members of the Quinte Skating Club.

Both goalies, Mike Karakas for Chicago and Davie Kerr for the Rangers, starred as their respective teams battled to a scoreless tie in the N.H.L. fray evening at the one point each. While all of this was in progress Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings were beating the tune of 4 to 3, the Red Wings picking up two points. Incidentally immediately following the Hawks-Rangers game, the New Madison Square Garden was not mulled as usual, but crashed into snow and sleet. The only thing that could ... door winter sports program to be ... was the fact that the ice was ... ing Friday. All out-door winter sports will be included on the program.

The Sarnia Imperials were crowned Dominion football champions without so much as putting on a pair of cleated shoes. The Regina Rough Riders withdrew their challenge for the right to compete in the C.R.U. final and automatically the Imperials were named 1936 Dominion champions. We believe they would have won regardless.

Baseball pot is sizzling, as a matter of fact it is about to boil over, now that the Major Leaguers are in full concave in New York. George Herman "Babe" Ruth has refused an offer to manage the Albany Senators yesterday. The Babe is still confident he can lead a Major League team successfully and has no reason why old Baltimore his status, especially after 22 days under the "big time" and batting today is 2 to 1 the Cards retain "Dizzy" while the Reds have started yesterday's meeting by actually stating he had cash on the line with which to purchase a pitcher. Looks as though the Browns, under their new owner, are headed in the right direction.

WON TWO TROPHIES IN SALES CONTEST

C. A. Tripp, Manager of the local Beatty washing machine agency and staff, have returned from a convention of Beatty men in Peterborough, headquarters for Beatty Bros. Limited, with two handsome silver cups, presented by the factory to Mr. Tripp and staff in token of their supremacy in the sales field. The convention closed with a banquet at which some very complimentary references were made to Mr. Tripp and his Belleville staff which includes Messrs. Percy Connor, F. Lander, V. Wardle, and J. O'Connor. The trophies are now on exhibition in the show window of the firm, Front Street.

FLIERS PRACTICE AT LOCAL ARENA

Belleville Intermediates Will Take Ice Tonight For Workout

Unofficially the Belleville Arena swung open its doors last evening, but for hockey practice only. Tonight the Belleville intermediates will take to the ice, Arena officials stated today. Last evening the R.C.A.F., "Fliers" practiced for a full hour under the direction of Flight-Lieut. F. L. Jeanneau, while tonight the local Redmen have the privilege of holding their initial work out in Belleville.

Manager Eddie Thomas was emphatic in his statements today when he announced all positions on the 1936 edition of the Belleville intermediate hockey team had been thrown open and would be awarded to the players making the best showing from now until the opening of the O.H.A. season. "We should have plenty of time for practice this year of the season has opened early." All clubs will be in mid-season form, when the first game is played, as the O.H.A. has only a single practice hour. All players are invited to try out with the team, that is all players over 20 years of age. Well call a practice for next Monday," was Manager Thomas today.

Manager Thomas, not a stumpy, fast-skating team of youthful players, who impressed the handful of veterans who turned up to witness the practice. Coach Samson had 15 players in uniform and put them through fast and proven puckstern, Laurie Gibson of football fame, was minding the twine at one end and defended by LaLonde and Beck, the former two of the Belleville City League product and a towering fast-skating defensemen. Lefebvre, Cawley and Lowery, a complete forward line functioned nicely, while Hall, Gibson, plenty of speed while at the other end of the Arena was the veteran Joe Gould in the nets. Carling Kelly, former R.M.C. defenceman, and Manager Cawley of Trenton Borden proved a sturdy defense in front of Gould. The McCready brothers Jack and Bill, both of whom will prove favourites with Belleville fans for their dazzling speed and clever stick-handling, teamed with Wingate and Coughlin. Mac McNeely's being forwards. Francis Lamont, former Trenton junior and other strangers made up the squad.

Later that year he represented his parents at the coronation of King George as guest of Romania and was so popular that many a Rumanian child was given the name Boris.

In 1924 he and his wife went to East Africa and in 1927 they visited Australia and New Zealand and returned to England by way of the Pacific Ocean.

Other official missions took him to Norway, Poland, Sweden and Belgium. But in their "vacation" times he and his family have preferred to remain in the British Isles.

It was not the duke's position as godson that led to the friendship of Princess Elizabeth that captured public attention, but the personality of the duke remained in the background.

Golden-haired Princess.

The ively, golden-haired princess, who will be 11 years of age her present ability of another reigning "Queen Bess", so took the spotlight from the duke and his own chief claim to fame seemed to be that he was her father.

One of the most prominent phases of the duke's public life is his desire to promote a closer relationship among various classes of England and the other members of the Royal Family, it has often been said, can lay claim to a more strictly democratic fulfillment than his in this also.

He has brought together in sport and endeavor poor boys from the factories and the elite from the prep schools.

As a result of his work and interest, he has been able to maintain a youthful outlook.

VISIBILITY CUT

Delayed Two Hours.

The Dutch plane, a Douglas, forbound two hours with four other planes headed for cross-channel airports, finally took off down the wind line marking the getaway path, and safely cleared the boundaries of the field. It had barely cleared the first row of suburban houses surrounding the airdrome, however, when it crashed.

The wreckage burned furiously, one crumpled wing of the machine hanging grotesquely from a house, while other parts of the plane blocked the roadway.

It was the most disastrous air crash of the year in England.

Two of the victims were British and most of the remainder were Scandinavian.

A German Baron was reported aboard.

De la Cierva was en route to Amsterdam and Berlin on a business and social mission when on the way home after representing the Spanish Masonic Lodge at Stockholm ceremonies at Edinburgh.

Three women, one Pole, one South African and the aviatrices, were on the plane.

Eyewitness' Story.

A woman living nearby said:

"I heard a plane, and running into the street, saw the plane had crashed on the roof of an unoccupied house. It burst into flames at once and the house caught fire.

"Many neighbors and others were taken from the plane and removed in ambulances."

Another woman gave this version:

"I heard a terrific crash, and thought something had hit my house.

"I ran out and saw a huge plane burning with the flames shooting up from the wreckage.

"It was awful. The heat was so terrific we could not get near."

Among the passengers was Juan de la Cierva, the autogyro expert.

It was reported Admiral Arvid Lindman, former Swedish Secretary of State, also was aboard.

Visibility Poor.

Witnesses said visibility was not more than 20 yards when the plane came. The vicinity was blanketed in fog.

Juan de la Cierva, inventor of the autogyro, began experiments with his predecessor, the helicopter, 12 years ago, wiseacres said in 1927 Lady of the device in March, 1924.

Miss Poulton later the Spanish inventor himself made a flight with King Alfonso of Spain as a spectator.

The first autogyro flew the English Channel in September, 1928, after the "flying windmill" and its previous experimental models had undergone extensive tests in England.

During a visit to America, in 1932, he was received by President Hoover and the two chatted over aviation possibilities.

Stirling Community Club Entertain Ladies at Banquet

Stirling — Tuesday evening, December 8th, climaxed a good deal of effort on the part of several energetic committees of the Stirling Community Welfare Club and brought about one of the outstanding social events of the district. The outstanding annual social events, when the members of the Stirling Club were hosts to their wives and lady friends. Granted admission to the club on only one occasion in the year, the ladies were given a real hearty welcome on the occasion and entertained royally with a banquet, fun and frolic as well as the presentation of a complete program of unusual quality. The sumptuous dinner was provided by the Stirling branch of the Ontario Women's Institute who have established an enviable reputation with their ability to prepare a banquet. In addition to the splendid menu, the artistic floral arrangement of the tables and the many artistic decorations which set forth many comments of praise from the large number of guests. As the dinner hour drew near, over two hundred moved to their respective places at the tables and following the singing of Grace, a true spirit of wholesome fun and merriment broke forth as the clever wit, snatches, blowing of toy whistles and in a few minutes the hall was littered with gaily coloured streamers and paper hats. The banquet was a grand success, a party in honour of the ladies. Mr. Fred Mallory very ably executed his duties as toastmaster and, collecting the usual fines for breaches of regulations on the part of some of the members. During the dinner hour the Stirling Community community singing was enjoyed under the leadership of song leader Arthur Ward, with Mrs. H. Moore at the piano. Directly after the toast to "His Majesty the King" Mr. T. W. Solmes, president, delivered the address of welcome to the guests and called upon Mr. Don Williams to propose a toast to the Ladies. Mr. Williams in his fine toast was Mrs. H. Rollins, and both gentlemen gave a splendid merriment with their very original humor and philosophy.

A very pleasing novelty on the program was introduced at this point when Mrs. Hollingsworth with three prominent members of the Stirling Club presented a clever story in their effort to outdo the gentlemen in the matter of humor, a draw small rounds of laughter. Miss Mary Ann Ward offered a delightful violin solo with Mrs. Moore playing the accompaniment. Mr. Mallory was then called upon to introduce a group of young ladies who had the honour to represent the county of Hastings, by winning the National Exhibition Silver Trophy Shield, and were guests of the gentlemen's Institute branch of the Community Club. The ladies responded in first honors in provincial wide competition. The ladies present were introduced individually as follows and received a well deserved applause: Mrs. Hollingsworth, Mrs. Tucker, Miss Luella Hoover and Miss Ruth Hoover.

A musical offering presented by the Misses Ward and Mrs. Armstrong playing the harmonica and guitar simultaneously, was so well received that an encore was given which a number of the ladies present set forth by Rev. W. J. Scott and Mr. H. H. Ketcheson. The latter was instructed to express that appreciation to the donor in a letter.

The remainder portion of the program which was carried out according to schedule, with Mr. Fred the central body of the Ray of Quinte Young People's Union, was directed by Miss Fenwick; 2nd Vice President. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Canon Swayne who spoke in a most capable manner on the work of the Anglican Church in the Home Missions". Following the address an impressive service was conducted. With soft music of old hymns played by Mrs. Moore, the Mrs. Moore, the various group leaders, led the meeting in prayer. Mrs. Ward sang a large table which was decorated with a small Christmas tree, and a large basket her of gifts.

The gifts were presented the ceremony was climaxed with a prayer of dedication by Miss Ruth Hoover. The number on the interesting program was a Bible reading by Mrs. Ward, Canada. The attendance recording system revealed that seventy ninety members and friends were present. The meeting closed with the Benediction.

Quick Action Averts Fire of Serious Nature

Only prompt action on the part of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Kotfend saved their home from a more serious fire at their home on Monday morning. The fire started through the combustion of material in the chimney in the basement of study. No one had been in the room and no fire in the fireplace for over two days. When, discovered, the flames had gained considerable proportions. Quick thinking on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Kotfend saved the situation. Mrs. Kotfend immediately damage to the manse itself. The damage is covered by insurance with the exception of sermon and journalistic material of the public and own construction, the value of which is difficult to estimate.

Meeting of Central Hastings' Minister's Association

The Central Hastings' Ministerial Association held their regular meeting on December 7th, commencing at the home of Rev. W. J. Scott, with a good number of the members in attendance. The speaker of the day was Rev. I. B. Kennedy of Madoc Church who delivered a splendid address on the subject of "Guild Work" dealing with this phase of the National Movement for the "Evangelization of Canada". A present being sponsored by all the major denominations of the Protestant church. Among those present were Rev. James E. Beckett, Rev. Mr. Fletcher, Rev. Canon Swayne, Rev. Mr. Lowrie, Rev. A. S. McConnell, Rev. W. H. Foley, Rev. I. B. Kennedy, Rev. J. A. Kotfend, Rev. W. J. Scott. Interesting and constructive discussion periods were followed by a half hour of social fellowship which was greatly enjoyed.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"The Dancing Lady" and "The Big House"

With Joan Crawford and Clark Gable headlined, a smashing parade of dancing song hits, an electrifying cavalcade of pulchritudinous shapely ensemble, and a sensational climax, the same as story motivation, "Dancing Lady" coming to the Belle theatre on Friday, matinee daily, towers to new heights in screen musical entertainment.

Here is the Joan Crawford of old, the lingering lady of "Our Dancing Daughters", "Our Modern Maidens" and "Our Blushing Brides"....the Joan Crawford who stampeded the fans, and who leaves 'em panting for more.

Teamed once more with Gable, Joan plays her chorus role with all she's got. She wears the kind of clothes that men will gape at and women will try to copy. And when Gable dances well, and does!

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has topped them all with this picture abounds with spectacle, that stagger imagination and brings with a punch that alone would make the picture, a grand evening's entertainment.

What a Cast!

The cast reads like an all-star screen, stage and radio aggregation .....Fred Astaire, May Robson, Winnie Lightner, Frances Dee, Robert Benchley, Ted Healy, Oliéta Fay, Art Jarrett, Grant Gaisell, Margaret Hoiden, Nelson Eddy and Sterling Holloway.

Sammy Cahn and Eddie Prinz proved their skill in the handling of the dance ensembles. There are numerous scenes calling by far the most ambitious production spectacle ever placed upon the screen.

"The Big House" Thrilling Picture, the grim brutality, its realism, its thrills and its heartbreaks, are shown with stark realism and utter fidelity in "The Big House", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of penitentiary life, coming next week as the second feature attraction on the same program.

It has underlying causes of prison riots, shows one in which the convicts, incensed because of brutalities perpetrated by guards, break through three prisoners, one a gangster, one a forger, who find themselves in the midst of the uprising. Before a new order of the new offender whose soul is wrecked by association with hardened criminals.

Chester Morris, Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery head the central characters, about whom the story revolves, and give splendid characterization. The love interest is between Morris as the forger, and Leila Hyams, and Beery, Richard Morris, and Beery, who plays a violent part, is vividly worked out.

Other notable players in the cast are Lewis Stone, Karl Dane, Leon Ames, DeWitt Jennings, Matthew Betz, Claire McDowell, J. C. Nugent and Clarence Muse.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and the last complete show at 9.15. Starting on the Dancing Lady-begins at 7.00 and 9.55. The Big House starts at 8.30 and 8.30 p.m.

Two Good Features

Two good features will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times in Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March and Elizabeth Allan in the gripping romantic drama, "A Woman Rebels". Cramming all that is "Mister Cinderella", uproarious feature comedy starring Jack Benny, Betty Furness and Arthur Treacher. King Edward VIII Visits Forgotten Men, a timely and grim results of unemployment in Wales and pertaining thereto, Pathe news up-to-the-minute World News Events will be presented on this same program. The last complete show begins at 8.30 p.m. The Last Hastings, Ontario returns will be announced tonight.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Nine Days a Queen"

Rated as the most outstanding picture of the year and given a four star standing in "Liberty Magazine" the Capitol present "Nine Days a Queen" today until Friday.

Fine Direction, authentic background, and superb acting made the production, "Nine Days a Queen", a poignant and moving film that will rank highly with the best pictures of the year,

Outstanding because of the smooth and flowing direction, future work of the 30-year-old English director, Robert Stevenson, will be watched with interest. He shows promise of unlimited ability in his first directorial assignment.

Concerned with a period of history remembered for bloodshed and tyranny, the story of Lady Jane Grey, Empress in the gloomy chamber of the dying King Henry VIII. With his last breath he places his crown on the head of the woman who shall interfere with the order of succession set by his son Edward VI, followed by his daughters Mary Tudor and Elizabeth. In the reign of the latter, Elizabeth, his grandniece, Lady Jane Grey.

Hardly does Henry gasp his last breath before the scramble for power begins. The young and frail Lady Jane reign is a brief one. Upon his death, his Lord Protector, Edward Seymour, who has previously sent his brother, Thomas to the executioner's block, is befriended and the Duke of Warwick, known to history as "the King maker" plans Lady Jane Grey upon the throne against her wishes.... Not, however, before he has married her to his son.

Rejected by the populace as a usurper, the new young queen's reign is a brief one. Mary Tudor, the rightful heir to the throne, gains the throne triumphant.

The presence of the axe can be felt as each event is unreled. Beheadings are used to claim the life of innocent-Jane Grey.

An authentic reproduction of Tudor England in all its fury brutality, GB has followed faithfully the story of the period and with the result that "Nine Days a Queen" is an engrossing and well-built film.

Topping her performance in "Little Lord Fauntleroy", Nova Pilbeam in the role of Lady Jane Grey ruled for nine days contributes a sensitive portrayal of the tragic 16-year-old queen who became the innocent victim of scheming and ambitious politicians.

The threats climax came the suicide of one daughter, played by Mary Alice Rice, and almost ruin the husband of the first girl, Henry Hunter is seen as the husband.

The family goes aboard a yacht for a vacation trip, but the detective follows them there. The murderer gets another more of his fancy tatling and is captured by the keen-minded detective, bringing the story to a stirring climax.

"Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

Matters were not mended when Mrs. Ward, returning from the disposal of the broken glass, found her daughter thoughtfully smoking one of Jonathan's cigarettes. Rose, rarely smoked. Her mother disapproved, she herself didn't like it especially and moreover Riverport was at the opinion that its school teachers should set an example.

Riverport knew well enough that its students smoked, some of them as a very early age, but it closed its eyes, to that. However, it would open them wide enough if it ever saw one of its female educators polluting her fair lips with the reprehensible weed.

"Well!" said Mrs. Ward, surveying her.

Rose explained absently, "Jonathan left a pack here.... She coughed a little, being more or less a novice and finding, besides, that the cigarette was dry. She thought they say it calms your nerves.... well, we'll see.

The door bell rang. Rose looked at the clock. It was early, perhaps Jonathan had had a free period in his office. In relief she almost ran to the door. She dropped the cigarette, fingers.

Her mother said thankfully, "Perhaps Jonathan can do something with you," and went on, "I want the kitchen painted. They'll want a cup of coffee.... It being her first day, that Jonathan would enjoy no coffee but her own.

Rose opened the door, and then stepped back, astonished. For it wasn't Jonathan; and her astonishment held the pleasure, as it was Larry Dexter.

He looked at her and smiled a little, his regard including her hair, clothes, and her mouth. Rose thought she had thrust her fingers through it, and the cigarette she still held. He asked, politely, "May I come in, Miss Ward—? I'm sorry to disturb you, but I'm in trouble."

"Of course," she told him and stood back to let him enter. He seemed entirely at ease, and as she followed him into the living room she thought bitterly that her's had been drinking.

There was just a suspicion of swagger in his walk and the odor of liquor was strong. He sat down in the big raccoon coat and let it fall off of his shoulders to the back of the chair, followed by the hat he held in his hand. "I don't suppose you are surprised to see me."

She wasn't, she assured herself, surprised in the least, considering. In the accepted and erroneous sense she was however, and admitted mildly:

"Chapter XXXVII

"It's down, and don't your" she added.

But he stood over by the mantel, his back to the fire, buffing very large and red in the compact of his small room. He accuser her abruptly,

"You've always had it in for me."

"That's not true...."

"Yes, it is. Don't bother to deny it. You went before the Board today. I know all about it. I can see. Old man Sutton came to the house before dinner."

She said, "Larry, if you can deny any of my charges...."

He shrugged. He said, "I wouldn't trouble...what I want to know is what the big idea of telling on me like this? What do you gain by having me kicked out of school? ...Look out, you'll burn your fingers," he warned her suddenly.

Rose looked down at the forgotten cigarette and put it in the nearest ash tray. She said, almost standing a little.

"I don't gain anything of course. It has nothing to do with me, Larry." She looked at him steadily. She said, "You're a bad influence in the school. You are guilty, and you cheat—you drink. You're a coward."

He went very white. He said, "You'd better retract that."

"I understand, without explanation," said Rose.

Mrs. Ward came. She said, before she reached the door, "I'm going to run next door for an hour, Rose—the coffee's on the stove.... Oh...!" she looked at Larry in amazement, "Good evening," she said after a second of blankness.

"Good evening," he said, "I thought you were Doctor Kildare."

"No such luck," said Larry, laughing. As the older woman's footsteps died away he said,

"Look here, Miss Ward, I didn't come here to ask you to withdraw your charges...I came here to tell you all if you don't withdraw them you may find yourself in pretty much of a hole."

She said, "I don't intend to withdraw them, Larry."

"I see." He shrugged again. "Well, don't say I didn't warn you," he informed her, and picking up his things went to the door. She did not move to follow him. She heard the door close behind him. She stood there a minute, five minutes, thinking, her face set in concentration. Then she went slowly to her mother's door things.

Rose had to talk to someone. Perhaps Jonathan would be through work.But she could not endure to wait here for him. Her mother had left the house by the kitchen door just before Larry went. Rose went out, after locking up and walked a short distance between the house and Jonathan's. She found the front door unlocked and went in. She heard her in the hall. Rose called at her.

"Doctor Ray!"

"He's in the office, last patient left...half an hour ago, I think," said Evelina. "But there's just came in from an errand."

The door to the office stood ajar. Rose didn't hear a sound as she crossed the living room. She was at the door before she heard Sally's voice, broken, husky....

"I'm sorry to have made such an idiot of myself, Kim, but I'm so terribly unhappy."

It was too late for Rose to retreat, her hand on the knob and it seemed, without her volition the door swung open and she saw Sally Dexter crying in Jonathan's arms ...He looked up and signalled frantically to her with his eyebrows. Rose, conscious of shock, stepped back from the door but Sally heard her. She turned and snubbed actively.

"Rose come back this instant..." Rose came reluctantly. Of the three Jonathan was the most embarrassed. He looked a guilty man if Rose had ever seen one. He released his thrust and shifted from one foot to the other.

Sally pale, her eyes red-rimmed, her little nose discolored from crying and from the reminder of the tears, began to laugh weakly. She said scarcely, "Rose Ward, stop looking like an avenging angel. I'm not trying to steal your man, I'm just trying to get an imbecile of myself with my doctor and friend."

"Well," said Rose, coming into the office, looking at Jonathan coldly, "That lies all the earmarks of a beauty crack. I'm sorry I broke in...." and down in a shabby leather arm chair. "I—I haven't been sleeping, Kim, and I'm all in. I'm a child and I'm behaving like a child. And suddenly, 'don't look any too pert yourself, Sally,' I told myself."

"How did you know?" asked Rose, too stunned for contradiction.

"Oh, I'm from the South, the North Country," said Sally. "I heard him coming up the walk and over the porch like the raccoon coal and let it fall to a chair, followed by the hat he held in his hand. "I don't suppose you are surprised to see me."

She wasn't, she assured herself, surprised in the least, considering. In the accepted and erroneous sense she was however, and admitted mildly:

Daily Short Story

CHIVALRY

By MADELINE KOELSER.

Detective George Martin, off duty, had been sitting in at a quiet little game in the neighborhood. The evening had been most profitable and his pockets bulged pleasantly as he strode through the silent streets.

The detective was a personable young man in the early thirties.

Martin lived alone in a small and rather shabby apartment house in the West Sixties. The building boasted a central court with a tiny fountain, and as he entered the paved square he glanced up at his own windows on the fourth floor.

He stopped suddenly then, with a stifled exclamation, and remained rooted, his eyes straining upward. Between his windows and those of the next apartment ran a narrow ornamental ledge or coping, and moving slowly and carefully along this shelf, in the direction of his windows, was the figure of a woman.

He watched, fascinated, as the woman moved, step by step, across the twelve-foot space. It was apparent that she had emerged from the window of his neighbor, Harry Crashaw.

Martin scowled. From their first encounter he had disliked and disrupted the sleek and dapper Crashaw gambler, broadway hanger-on, and thrower of late and noisy parties.

He muttered against Crashaw now. Some poor girl risking her life to get away from that bird! He'd have it out with Crashaw and ask him what the devil he meant—

The girl had almost reached his window, and she faltered uncertainly at the sill.

Like a flash Martin bounded across the court. This was a wake-up and there was no elevator. He took the dimly lit stairs two at a time.

In his apartment he found the girl in a crumpled heap under the open window. She did not move when he snapped on the lights.

Stripping himself of coat and hat, the detective stooped to pick her up. Laying her gently on the couch, he switched into the adjoining room and returned with a bottle of brandy. But even as he stood by he remembered the boys from across the hall had failed last night. Breathing softly, he crept out into the hall, closing the door behind him.

Better go into Crashaw's room. It was vacant, and he would be sure to have some spirits. He'd tell the smooth cook a thing or two while he was about it.

He was surprised to find Crashaw's apartment brilliantly lighted and apparently half full of people. Crashaw, himself, in a large arrachair; his sleek hair rumpled and a new while bandage on his shoulder.

Jackson, the superintendent, of the building, seemed excited. "Just the man we want, Mr. Martin," he said. "Mr. Crashaw here was robbed and half murdered this evening!"

Martin's jaw dropped. He came in quickly and shut the door.

"Yeah," smiled Crashaw. "And you dicks better get busy on this. It was a girl see? One of these apartment house thieves. I came in and found her at the wall safe, and she pressed it out while she held a gun on me. I was mad and I tried to wrest it. I did get the gun away, but in the rumpus it went off." He glanced ruefully at his shoulder. "It must have stunned me, anyway. I crumpled up, and the girl made her getaway.

"What I can't understand," he added irritably, "is how she got out, with you fellows out there pounding on the door."

Martin, his head in a whirl, had a momentary flash-back of a terrified small figure clinging to a wall. But his eyes betrayed nothing as he fixed them on Crashaw. "Just what did she take?" he asked levelly.

"Six hundred dollars in cash," snarled Crashaw. "It seems to me you're damned cool about it, Martin."

"What do you expect me to do, burst out crying? I'll go and report it." Martin turned on his heel.

He knew very well what he had to do. Duty was duty. But she was a game kid all right—Oh, well, what the hell!

He went swiftly down the hall and entered his own apartment. The girl was standing in the centre of the room, her hands thrust deep in the pockets of her worn leather coat. Her wide eyes met his challengingly, but he sensed the mute appeal behind them. She did not speak.

"Scram, kid," he said quietly. "Out the window. You make it to the fire-escape and down into the court. Step on it, because they're out for your blood." He gestured toward the other room.

"Put the Crashaw . . . loot on the table as you go by," he ordered, without looking at her. "It's all right, I'll give it back."

He waited till he heard her cautiously descending the fire-escape, then, relaxing, reached out for his coat which still hung on the chair near the bathroom. He needed a cigarette badly.

Regarding the coat, his mind went back to the forgotten poker game. Three hundred dollars he had won in that game and had come home with his pockets bulging. He realized with a shock that they were not bulging now! With a sharp indrawn breath he examined the pockets.

Sheepishly, Detective Martin lit his cigarette.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As the three small warriors sprang al Old Timer, three more arrows in lightning succession brought them down. Instantly, terror filled the breasts of the remaining pygmies, and prompted a pell-mell flight to the greater security of their huts.

In a tree above the scurrying pygmies, Tarzan smiled; for it was the ape-man who had saved Old Timer.

In his long search for Kali Bwana, the Jungle Lord had arrived just as she was about to die, and his quick bow had done its work well.

Now Id Timer threw his precious burden across his shoulder and boiled for the open gates. Behind him he heard rending of wood and a crash, but he did not know what had happened nor did he seek to ascertain. His sole interest was in saving the girl he loved.

His duty done, Tarzan was about to hasten into the forest to join the fugitives.— But as he turned to descend, the branch on which he was standing broke suddenly and crashed to the ground, carrying the ape-man with it. As he struck, he lost consciousness.

KING EDWARD ABDICATES

Duke of York May Take Title George VI

Dr. WELSH CARRIES E. HASTINGS BY 1258 MAJ.

My Irrevocable Decision To Renounce Throne Message of King is Read; King May Leave Friday

British Ruler's Viewpoint Made Clear in Prime Minister Baldwin's Full Statement of His Conversations With King on His Romance and Constitutional Problems

'KING A MAN OF GREAT EXPERIENCE'

Note Written With Pencil by His Majesty King Edward, Reveals Love For His Successor The Duke of York And His Wishes For Empire Support

London, Dec. 10.—(CP)—King Edward VIII abdicated today and was succeeded on the throne by his brother, the Duke of York.

Abdication was announced in the House of Commons by Capt. Edward Algernon Fitzroy, speaker of the House.

The dramatic move climaxed a week of tension such as Britain has not known since the days of the Great War.

It was the first time in history, that a King of Great Britain had given up his throne for love.

King's Love Reason of Abdication

The King's love for Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, American-born divorcee, was the reason for his abdication.

Edward, said a report received by the Exchange Telegraph Agency, intends to leave the country, probably tomorrow night. There was no indication where he would meet Mrs. Simpson or when they will marry.

The plans of the man who had been King and the woman he loves, a secret unto themselves.

The Duke of York, it was learned, has made no final decision so far concerning his title.

Around the globe, through sundown and dawn, to those who bear allegiance to Britain's King, flashed this message from their sovereign:

"After long and anxious consideration, I have determined to renounce the throne to which I succeeded on the death of my father, and I now am communicating this, my final and irrevocable decision."

Government Victorious

In that epochal moment of eight centuries, the Commons, the people and the Empire saw their government victorious in a tremendous, constitutional struggle with a monarch who reigned for less than a year.

Rather than give up the twice divorced American woman who waited today within the rain-splashed walls of a villa on the Cote d'Azur, balked by state and church in his desire for morganatic marriage, Edward VIII this morning signed the decree of abdication.

The Duke of York, his heir, and his other two brothers, the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent, witnessed the historic deed.

After speaker Fitzroy had finished the message Baldwin said:

"I have to move that His Majesty's most gracious message be now considered.

New King and His Consort

Uncrowned King

King Edward Eighth, who today abdicated his throne after less than eleven months on the throne, the first king to abdicate for the sake of love.

Royal Words of Abdication

King Edward's words, in renouncing the British throne, the speaker read, were:

"I have determined to renounce the throne.

"After long and anxious consideration I have determined to renounce the throne to which I succeeded on the death of my father and I am now communicating this, my final and irrevocable decision.

"Realizing as I do the gravity of this step, I can only hope that I shall have the understanding of my peoples in the decision I have taken and the reasons which have led me to take it.

"I will not enter now into my private feelings but I would beg it should be remembered that the burden which constantly rests upon the shoulders of a sovereign is so heavy that it can only be borne in circumstances different from those in which I now find myself."

"I conceive that I am not overlooking the duty that rests on me to place in the foremost public interest when I declare that I am conscious that I can no longer discharge this heavy task with efficiency or with satisfaction to myself.

"I have therefore this morning executed an instrument of abdication in the terms following:

"I, Edward VIII, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, King and Emperor of India, do hereby declare my irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for myself and for my descendants and my desire that effect should be given to this instrument of abdication immediately.

"In token whereof I have hereunto set my hand this tenth day of December, 1936, in the presence of the witnesses whose signatures are subscribed.

"Signed, Edward R. I.

"My intention of this instrument has been witnessed by my three brothers, their Royal Highnesses the Duke of York, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent.

"I deeply appreciate the spirit which has actuated the appeals which have been made to me to take a different decision and I have before reaching my final determination most fully pondered over them.

"But my mind is made up. Moreover further delay cannot but be most injurious to the peoples whom I have tried to serve as Prince of Wales and as King and whose future happiness and prosperity are the constant wish of my heart.

"I take my leave of them in the confident hope that the course which I have thought it right to follow is that which is best for the stability of the throne and empire and the happiness of my people.

"I am deeply sensible of the consideration which they have always extended to me both before and after my accession to the throne and ask only that they will extend in full measure to my successor.

"I am most anxious that there should be no delay of any kind in giving effect to the instrument which I have executed and that all necessary steps should be taken immediately to secure that my lawful successor, my brother, His Royal Highness the Duke of York should succeed to the throne."

The document was signed "Edward R. I."

House Meets in Sorrow To Make Abdication Law

London, Dec. 10.—(CP)— The House of Commons reconvened at 8 p.m. tonight (1.00 p.m. E.S.T.) to consider legislation which would make King Edward's abdication effective.

Clement Attlee, leader of the Opposition, was cheered when he arose to address the members.

"This occasion does not, in my view, call for long and elaborate speeches," Attlee said.

"My words will be few and simple. We will all hear with profound concern the message from the King.

"The King has decided he can no longer continue on the throne. The whole country will receive his news with the deepest sorrow and his subjects in these islands and throughout the British Dominions beyond the seas will feel a sense of personal loss."

I am certain that throughout

EAST HASTINGS REPEATS HISTORY IN BY-ELECTION

One of Bitterest Political Fights in Ontario is Concluded

A RECORD VOTE

Both Leaders Express Their Views on The Result

Madoc, Ont., Dec. 10—(CP)—Hastings East, traditional Conservative stronghold, remains represented on the opposition side of the Ontario Legislature after one of the province's bitterest political fights which culminated in the by-election victory of Dr. Harold E. Welsh.

The 40-year-old Conservative candidate, a country doctor from Roslin, swept to a majority unofficially estimated at 1,258 over another physician, Dr. H. A. Boyce of Deseronto, Liberal, in yesterday's voting.

Returns were incomplete and far northern areas in the 140-mile-long riding had not reported when party workers quit collecting results last night. Liberals, however, conceded Dr. Welsh retained for his party the seat left vacant by the death of J. F. Hill, Conservative whip. Fifty-nine of 84 polls gave Welsh 8,541 and Boyce 4,413.

The by-election, fifth since Premier Hepburn's government scored an overwhelming victory in the 1934 Provincial general election, was the

Special Police To Guard Dunkirk If King Comes

DUNKIRK, France Dec. 10.—(AP)—The Chief of Special Police of the Port of Dunkirk, said tonight he had received orders to station extra guards at the waterfront in preparation for the possible arrival of King Edward.

New King's Title May be George VI

London, Dec. 10 (CP Cable)—Usually well-informed quarters anticipate that the Duke of York's title as King will be George VI. His full name is Albert Frederick Arthur George.

The only English royal association with Albert is that it was the name of the husband, of Queen Victoria, called the Prince Consort. His merits were not fully recognized until after his death.

The association of Frederick with Prussian Imperialism makes the name unacceptable here and Arthur in British sovereignty belongs only to legend.

Adoption of the name George would assist in perpetuating the memory of the Duke of York's father, George V, "George the Beloved."

Dr. H. E. Welsh Piles Up Very Large Majorities In Various Sections

Thurlow, Huntingdon And Madoc Townships Give Heavy Support

VOTES IN NORTH

Dr. Harold E. Welsh of Roslin, Conservative, was elected on Wednesday, member of the Ontario Legislature for Hastings East by a majority of 1258 over Dr. Harold A. Boyce of Deseronto, Liberal candidate. Dr. Welsh received his greatest majorities in Thurlow where he received 550 of a lead, in Huntingdon with 340 majority and in Madoc Township which gave him 239.

Dr. Boyce carried Deseronto, his own home town, Rungerford Township and led in a number of northern municipalities. His majorities were not large in any municipality.

Returns Assembled at Madoc

Madoc, Dec. 10—Triumphant Madoc Village Conservatives with their ranks swelled by a hilarious crowd of out-of town fellow celebrants rode high on the crest of a majority wave last night as the clearing smoke of the last round of the East Hastings political battle left them exhaled.

From the time early in the evening when the first meagre reports came sifting through; from the time that the sweeping majorities accorded the Conservative candidate Dr. Welsh left the realm of rumor to become sheer fact, the tense feeling which had marked the political campaign, gave way to an unrestrained burst of exuberance which has seldom if ever been equalled in this riding of East Hastings.

ABDICATION END TO ROYAL CRISIS

His Majesty King Edward's Luggage Leaves Fort Belvedefe

London, Dec. 10—(CP)—Parliament met today expecting to hear the King's decision, and the House feared the word would be abdication.

While official information was lacking early this morning, that Edward VIII had so much as reached a final decision in the matter, the consensus in high quarters was that he was prepared to renounce the throne because the way was not constitutionally clear for a morganatic marriage with the twice-divorced American, Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

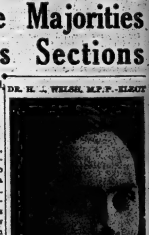
Conservative Win Celebrated To Early Hours of the Morning

Madoc Streets a Seething Mass of Humanity And Crowd Jubilant

DR. WELSH HONORED

A cheering crowd of hundreds, a boisterous crowd, whose enthusiasm seemed to have reached its highest peak, jammed the "four corners" of Madoc's principal streets shortly before two o'clock this morning. Nearby the strains of an overworked band still rose heroically above the clamor of those, who had gathered.



An air of expectancy permeated those who noisily awaited. Theirs with horns of their machines going full blast, reverberating through the still lighted and wide awake town, a cavalcade of cars swept into the village. Leading the procession of the twenty-five or more automobiles in the one carrying the Hon. Earl Rowe, leader of the Conservative party of Ontario. Then, in order, the machine bearing Col. Geo. Drew, Conservative organizer of Conservatives of Ontario, and Dr. H. E. Welsh, triumphant victor of perhaps the greatest by-election fought in Ontario's history, and given what is expected to be the largest vote ever recorded in Hastings to elect him representative of East Hastings riding. In close order, the other automobiles of party stalwarts and workers followed closely behind.

JOHN DeGRUCHY SPECIAL SPEAKER AS MASONS MEET

Grand Old Man of Canadian Football Praises Team

LOCAL TEAM GUESTS

John DeGruchy, President of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, and the grand old man of Canadian football, was the guest speaker at Eureka Lodge A.F. & A.M., No. 282, G.R.C., and to the members of the Belleville O.R.F.U. football squad at the Masonic Temple last evening. Other rugby football notables were also present at this unique gathering of rugby personages, when the Eureka Lodge tendered a banquet for the Belleville team, following their regular lodge meeting.

After praising the work being done by interested persons in this community towards the advancement of the fall classic in this part of the province, Mr. DeGruchy added his congratulations to the local club and its officers for their interest in the game. Executive members, as well as the players of the Belleville O.R.F.U. team being present.

In opening his address Mr. DeGruchy outlined the first known football activities. "We know that football was played by the Greeks over 2,000 years ago. The game advanced with the Romans and was played down through the ages and by the Normans in the 11th. The Romans called the game "Follies," we are told. As early as 1817 a soccer game was played in England, but not until 1904 was a recognized league formed. The English Association football league was formed that year and has functioned continuously ever since," stated Mr. DeGruchy.

"Then we come down to the period, when a ball was first carried, previous to which the ball was always kicked as I presume you know. In the year 1874 a game of kicking and carrying game was introduced into England, from whence our present-day rugby was instituted. Around 1870 rugby was introduced into Canada from England and later spread into the United States. In 1892 the O.R.F.U. was formed and it has functioned successfully ever since. This year we had 21 clubs under our wing and the game is advancing with rapidity, I can assure you," said the speaker.

Great Benefit to Athletes

Speaking of the advantages of rugby football, Mr. DeGruchy referred to the splendid background the fall classic built up for a young man entering upon the sea of life.

"The game is a great benefit to a community as well as to the individual player in after life. A rugby player has to be physically fit, strong, alert, a quick thinker, obedient and possessing courage. Rugby teaches a young player many lessons, which prove invaluable to him throughout the battle of life. If a boy gets to know himself on the rugby field this advantage proves a decided asset in his business and personal life. During a game he must learn to take orders, as he will in later life. The game builds the body physically as well as mentally, as football calls for quick action and quick thinking. The game is also valuable to a community as an advertising medium," declared Mr. DeGruchy. In closing Mr. DeGruchy dwelt briefly upon the rules and fundamentals of rugby football, all of which proved very interesting and educational, not only to the football players, executives, but to those Masons not so thoroughly acquainted with the autumn classic.

Mr. DeGruchy was introduced by F. O. McGauvin, President of the Belleville Rugby Club, and a vote of thanks on behalf of the Eureka Lodge was moved by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. O. Herity. The toast to the Belleville rugby team, the guests upon the occasion, was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. C. J. Symons and responded to by Manager Wor. Bro. who in turn introduced the respective players to the gathering. Football notables from other clubs from the surrounding district were also on hand to hear Mr. DeGruchy's address.

Wor. Bro. Walter Harden acted as chairman, while the Eureka Lodge orchestra supplied the music of the evening for the entertainment. Bro. Fred Shaw gave two delightful piano solos.

THANKS:

I wish to thank the Electors of East Hastings very sincerely for the confidence that they have reposed in me. I can assure them that it will be my constant aim to merit it by giving my most zealous and thoughtful attention to the public duties with which it now stand entrusted. I appreciate that this victory we have won is something more than a mere partisan triumph. On the face of a tremendous pressure which the Hepburn Administration has exerted upon the riding during the past three weeks to have it return a Government supporter, success could not have been achieved if many Liberals, realizing the importance of the issues at stake to the Province as a whole, had not placed principles before party and supported our cause.

During the period I am at Queen's Park it will be my endeavour to serve impartially all the electors of the riding irrespective of their party affiliations. One of the most satisfactory features of the past three weeks was the class of campaign waged personally by the Liberal candidate. It is a source of particular gratification to me, that nothing said in the heat of the battle by either Dr. Boyce or myself need affect the friendship which has always been between us and which I personally hope will continue unimpaired.

DR. H. A. BOYCE GLAD IT'S OVER

"I'm not dismayed. I believe I fought a good, clean fight, and I am happy, in a way, that it is over. My congratulations and best wishes have been extended to the successful, Dr. H. E. Welsh, whom I hold in the greatest respect," stated Dr. Boyce, Liberal defeated candidate in the Hastings by-election, when questioned by the Intelligencer reporter this morning.

"Now that the campaign is over for the people for what I had to offer, I still believe that the principles which we outlined are the only ones that should be followed. The people have a right to have reason and I must abide by their choice. I am quite happy to know that I did the results. A great load has been lifted off my mind and I am again free to continue my practise here."

RECORD NUMBER CALLS ANSWERED

Direct from the noisy, bustling rooms of both the Conservative and Liberal party headquarters at Madoc last night, relayed over a telephone by special messenger as fast as returns were received, were furnished by the special private wire from the office in Madoc to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer. That is the manner in which Belleville and district residents were advised during last evening's by-election returns.

Two staff reporters and five special messengers kept track of and provided results of the ballot count as fast as received at headquarters of both parties.

At The Ontario Intelligencer office, five switchboard employees were necessary to handle the number of calls which bore far greater in volume than experienced during the past provincial general elections.

The service this rendered was acknowledged to be faster than that of larger metropolitan dailies, who were represented.

Glowing embers from the ashpit of a furnace in the basement of a house at 92 West Moira Street resulted in an alarm being rushed to city fire squad this morning when the flooring around the base of the furnace became ignited.

ANIMATED SCENE ON ELECTION EVE

Victorious Candidate And Hon. Earl Rowes Visit City

Not only in Madoc and Deseronto and Tweed and other municipalities throughout the riding was the sweeping victory of the Conservatives of East Hastings celebrated with noise and fervor last night and early into the morning but Belleville, also, entered into the spirit of enthusiasm following the brilliancy of victory.

Rivalling scenes of the last Provincial general election, the city's main streets presented a colorful spectacle from nine o'clock on until the early hours of the morning.

In front of the Conservative club rooms, crowds blocked Front street as the last few returns were being received. With the arrival of the Hon. Earl Rowe, the victorious candidate, Dr. H. E. Welsh, Geo. Drew and others of the entourage in the cavalcade of cars in formation Belleville from Deseronto en route to Tweed and Madoc, where the last embers of the night's celebration still glowed enthusiasm the cordiality of welcome reached its highest peak. Handshakes, acknowledgement of the reception, a brief visit to the central headquarters and the victory parade wheeled through the city in the north.

Undismayed by the overwhelming victory for the Opposition Hon. Dr. Faulkner who had remained in Belleville, during the day in order to be close to the scene of the election fight, also joined in the conservative victory. Driving his automobile up Front street to the Conservative rooms, where the Ontario Minister of Health, smiling as broadly as victory, Fervent Conservative celebrant was hailed there by the street parading crowds with the shouts of "Hi'ya, Doc" tendered on every side were answered by the same broad smile and cheery nods. Completely surrounded by the throng, Dominion Bruce Faulkner's car was then given a shivery workout at the hands of those who had cheered. Finally escorted to Campbell street, the machine was given a final cheering push up the street.

"This is only a reflection. Wait until the next general one and we will show them", was the most frequent comment.

POLICE BLOTTER

Icy pavements are attributed the paramount cause of two motor accidents that happened in Belleville yesterday. An automobile driven by J. J. Mathews of this city, skidded on the icy pavement and collided with a parked car on Cannifton Road. The parked car was owned by Daniel Trumble, 327 Front St.

Two Sunday drivers, with out ever an accident late yesterday afternoon on East Bridge St. Clifford Weese, local trucker, had parked truck load of coal on the south side of Bridge St. when suddenly from the rear another truck load of coal, coming from the same direction but driven by Arthur Fitzgibbon, Burton St. skidded in a deep icy rut and collided into the rear of Mr. Weese's truck. P. C. Evans investigated and reported at least $20.00 damages to Mr. Fitzgibbon's truck

THE KING

Today's announcement of the intention of His Majesty King Edward VIII to abdicate and renounce his throne brought to a climax the most intense week of suspense the Empire has had to pass through.

The Duke of York will succeed as King George VI. The prayers of the Empire will be given for the new King as he ascends the throne of the greatest empire on earth.

Grave concern over the constitutional crisis which has developed in Great Britain has created anxiety throughout the Empire, the United States and the rest of the world. With today's announcement some of the suspense which has been felt may be relieved.

His Majesty King Edward and all those in authority have been the subject of the prayers, thoughts and hopes of the hundreds of millions of subjects of the British Crown throughout the world. The strain which the former have been passing in one of the greatest crises of the British throughout the world. The strain which the former have been passing in one of the greatest crises of the British history is shared, in less degree of course, by every Britisher in every part of the world.

Britain has stood many crises in her long and honored history and the people are confident of the future, though naturally extremely anxious because of events of the past eight or nine days.

THE BY-ELECTION

East Hastings by-election is now history. The political complexion of the riding is established for the next two years with the election of Dr. Harold E. Welsh of Roslin, one of the most popular residents of Hastings County. He was given a hearty support throughout the riding and large majorities were given him in a number of the municipalities.

Both Dr. Welsh and his political antagonist, Dr. Harold A. Boyce of Deseronto, have the knowledge that their personal relations remain unchanged even after the hard struggle of the month and a half during which the contest has been waged. Both fought a clean fight as far as they were personally concerned and if there be any criticism of some of the bitterness which both sides claim was projected into the fight, Dr. Welsh and Dr. Boyce had nothing to do with that. They submitted themselves to the electors, both men of high standing in their profession and as citizens.

Dr. Welsh is naturally jubilant and the many supporters who gave him the East Hastings seat in the Legislature are rightly proud of the result of their efforts to have their candidate elected.

Dr. Welsh, the M.P.P.-elect, will be a worthy legislator and successor to the late James F. Hill whose wholehearted devotion to his duties brought praise while he served and tributes to him when he passed.

The successful candidate is a man of marked gifts, he has shown much initiative in his own career, he has indicated himself as one who knows the people collectively and individually, and his record as he goes to take his riding will be one he has no doubt, prove his fitness for the office.

In the campaign the political issues were fought out with local men and the party leaders in the fray. No voter could claim he or she had not opportunity to hear discussed the problems of the Province of Ontario.

The election has done many things, it has brought East Hastings to the notice of the Province and it has provided an opportunity for the study of public issues, to which the average citizen everywhere should devote more attention.

THE APPROACHING SEASON

While preparations are under way for the great Christmas festival and plans are maturing for the presentation of gifts the needy will not be forgotten, nor will those institutions which labor to alleviate suffering and societies whose work is of a philanthropic nature. Christmas is a time when it is hoped that everyone will be happy and that no one will go without some recognition that he or she is remembered by some one or some organization.

Fortunately most people see others while they see their own wants which require to be satisfied at Christmas. Somehow the spirit of Christmas permeates society in the way of Charles Dickens whose stories of Christmas remain the high peak of British literature in relation to this season.

The spirit of Tiny Tim, "God Bless Us Every One", seems to spread through all ranks of men and women so that at Christmastide there is a great levelling of social differences and outlooks of people as all join in the joyous celebration marking the anniversary of the birth of Christ.

This year it would look as if while there are sinister arms developments in far-off Europe, at home the people of Canada and the United States and in other parts of the world, especially the English-speaking lands, greater prosperity will make possible the widening of man's interest in the great Yuletide season.

THE OLD RAIL FENCE

A feller's gittin' mighty old, and childish you'd agree,
He's tearing an old fence down cud make him feel so blue,
It' know 'twas noways stylish, nor neither very strong,
But it was kinda friendly, it bein' there so long.
It's well nigh on to fifty years, but to Barnes an' me someway,
Who laid them crooked rails, it seems like yesterday.
Father day.
It run along so natural, with bends an' a crook or so,
An' minded me for all the world, the way a feller'd ...like to go.
'Twas pleasant like to sit there when a hard day was through,
An' know that not a shadder ud o'er come pokin' through.
Course the fence was awker'd, John said it had to go,
An' I know it sounds plum foolish to say I miss it so.
I'm not complainin', but it jist seems this away,
That there ain't eny space at all for lots of things today.
That new wire fence, so stiff-like jest says as plain can be,
That soon there'll be no corners left for folks like Barnes an' me.

THREE SIMON LEGREES GRACE A CARTOON BY GRACEY in the Montreal Star of Saturday last, each one with a ten-gallon hat, fierce flowing black moutsache and ugly black-snake whip. One Simon Legree is called "Exorbitant Civic Taxation," another "Exorbitant Federal Taxation", and the third "Exorbitant Provincial Taxation". The three Simon Legrees are standing over a small insignificant man labelled "Taxpayer" who is trying to fill a hamper labelled "Hard-earned Income", picking money from the bushes like cotton, while the bold, bad villains, stand over him with their whips in a menacing attitude.

TWO HAMLETS ON BROADWAY suggest that the "Melancholly Dane" is doomed forever to walk the earth, but there have been other genuine resurrections, and we see the great Napoleon who fought all Europe single and consecutively and finally lost, strutting the stage and marching over the silver screen. Queen Victoria and other great personages are being immortalized on stage and screen—which leads the New York Times to moralize as follows:

"Patrons of the theatre and the films have been moving in very distinguished company of late. Only the other day Napoleon of St. Helena was in town. We still have with us Queen Victoria and Richard Wagner, and, on the screen Rembrandt. It is some years since the Brownings of Wimpole Street were in town; and no doubt other famous visitors whose names escape us for the moment.

The theatre is apparently just beginning to catch the full force of that biographical tide which swept the book world for a full decade after the World War. Lytton Strachey started something with his "Queen Victoria," which a vast army of biographers, inflationary or deflationary, carried on till the list of famous and quasi-famous dead was exhausted. Of these departed spirits ever so many must have turned in their graves. Still more of them must have been surprised to find out so many things about themselves they had never suspected.

Early Returns

At the early evening Liberals and Conservatives stood in small knots on street corners comparing the returns. Next time of the closing of the polls party followers converged on the various headquarters. As if in involuntary cognizance of what was in store, Conservative headquarters was marked—with a spirit of pronounced optimism which was a contrast to that which arose from the northern polling booths dashed their hopes and had announced that some northern districts had never in the history of the riding displayed such enthusiasm. They turned out in such numbers to vote as they had during the day. On the other hand, the Liberal headquarters was quiet, and the gathering more or less subdued. While they, too, evinced a spirit of optimism regarding the ultimate outcome, it was lacking in that exuberant feeling which stood out in the opposing camp. They appeared to be more sure of the verdict yet were a little wary as to prophesying just what would happen.

Uneasy Silence Descends

Shortly after the time for the closing of the polls arrived, an uncanny silence fell over this centre of political activity. A few curious crowds on the street talked in subdued tones. Party followers gathered in groups to discuss the respective headquarters. A few braver souls ventured to the precincts of the headquarters themselves. But, all interest all was quiet. Automobiles sped about into the byways, street seeking parking place." Any results yet?" was the answer query from men and women as they clambered from the many different modes of transition.

Young Electors Excited

Knots of young men, some of whom were having their first taste of election excitement, walked up and down the crowding sidewalks. Young girls with the excitement characteristic of their sex listened nervously as wild rumps began to circulate. Occasionally a group was caught in the jam of one of the headquarters as they forced to stay there until the polling results were nearly finished. Wild-eyed one minute, and the very picture of despair the next, this young lady was caught in the vortex of a political storm she never before had seen or experienced. Afraid to speak, scared to move, she listened, realizing that probably the greatest thrill of her life, for some time to come, was that of her entrance, she had wandered in to the Liberal Rooms while her sympathies were with the opposite party.

Signs of Victory Appear

And yet underneath the display of the feeling of pent-up emotion there was no depression. Cheering as the returns began to stemmer in, and a feeling of victory which appeared to be piling-up, a feeling of victory began to manifest itself among the Conservative ranks. The blood began to parade the streets giving added colour to cheeks of pallor. The older ones caught the spirit and by nine o'clock the streets of the village began to reverberate to the sounds of cheering and howls of delight. Friends of the party, of all sorts of different political persuasion began to congregate although the cheering was by far the most predominant. The hoots came later, as far and we have not been called to settle even this latest argument. They are having a lot of enjoyment and as long as they don't do any more than that we are doing, we will not bother them."

An adjourning point was reached into the room where a newspaper man was writing returns to his paper. "What are the latest results?" she gasped. Upon being told she rushed to the telephone receiver, called a number and shouted, "Jo Marsh, come right down. Welsh has licked and you know it. Take back what you said about us or I'll come up and pull every curl out of your head. Whoopee!"

At nine-thirty the notes of a bugle sounding the "Last Post" rang out in the evening air. "What's that for?" queried a bystander. "Oh, that's only apparently Conservatives, infuriated people," "That's no-one" they replied. "The other night Mr. So-and-so promised he would play the Last Post when he got in and Bill went out a few minutes ago, plucked the bugle and that's where you hear now is Bill tooting "Last Post" for the benefit of his Liberal friend."

Dr. Welsh Speaks

"What a majority," smiled a group of men on a street corner shortly after the announcement had been released," we expected at least five hundred but this beats the band." The tooting of automobile horns sounded in the street as a cavalcade of cars proceeded to turn. "It's Doctor Welsh" shrieked a feminine voice. The crowd surged to the centre of the street. Cheers rent the air as the cars drew near. The crowd threatened to swamp the cars. But their joy was shortlived for the cars belonged to a group of young Conservatives who were celebrating and who graciously acknowledged the vociferous reception with waves of their hands.

Near-Riot Scenes

Near the hotel cars disgorged a number of men in blue uniforms carrying shining instruments. Enraptured Welshites seized the instruments and for the next few minutes, the village streets rang with cacophonous if boogy discord. The bandsmen good-naturedly retrieved their instruments formed up and regaled the happy throng with lively airs.

In the Liberal headquarters, a few supporters of the party refused to leave the scene. Under the unofficial figures staring them in the face. One old gentleman who had stood before all returns and watched the relentless hands of the Conservative majority sweep through to an ever whelming victory, finally shook his head with a gesture of despair, "I don't think we can beat him, and we be muttered as he turned away.

Party Sandwiches and Beer

An inspired young lady flushed with the success of her party, rushed into a nearby restaurant where were cleaning up the last of the returns, ordering a large tray of party sandwiches and a cup of Rowe coffee," she smiled, "and if you need more of these Conservative returns, they are here for you."

Candidate and Leaders Arrive

When the rumour became circulated, about the village that the Hon. Earle Rowe, Colonel George Drew, and the successful candidate, Dr. H. E. Welsh, were enroute to the village Deseronto, followed by a cavalcade of some twenty-five cars, excitement in the village grew to fever pitch. "What will they be here", was heard on all sides. The crowd increased in volume outside the Conservative headquarters. Soon they started to the middle of the street to the rollicking tunes of the band. Cheering grew louder as the cars drew near. In his feelings in many humorous ways. "Let's go somewhere somebody", yelled one of the youthful contingent. The idea caught on and in a few seconds the hilarious crowd had surged down a side street enroute to what was presumed the home of a supporter of the opposing party.

Strange noises rent the air. As if by magic strange noise-making apparatus was produced and again weird sounds were heard on the quiet city.

Old man, young men, mature women and children, they joined in a spontaneous burst of unrestrained merriment as they rushed, ran, and walked to the scene of the latest excitement.

Cheers For Victor

"Three cheers for Dr. Welsh" yelled an excited old gentleman, and three lusty ones and a tiger were given followed by similar cheers for the Opposition Leader. It was the Madoc Conservatives night out and they did full justice to it. Bonfires were lighted in strategic spots during the weeks of hectic campaigning; boisted in a sort of amidity as to what might happen after the heavy artillery of both armies had spoken. Finally the unloosed verbal barrages at the defenses of the opposition and unrestrainedly "let go" in a paean of joy which has never before been witnessed by the inhabitants of this optimistically quiet East Hastings village.

Gathering momentum after the final returns came in, the crowd which gave the Liberal candidate a substantial majority, the Conservative feeling of confidence was crescendoed with the steadily mounting Welsh majorities which poured in from all parts of the riding. With the note of optimism apparents in the Welsh headquarters prior to the closing of the polls became more pronounced as the returns filtered in from the voting outposts of the riding.

Majorities Discussed

Shortly after nine-thirty with almost certain victory in their grasp the feeling gave way to one of joy which rose to a throaty roar of triumph as the rumor permeated the village that the Liberal had conceded the election to the Conservative candidate.

Near the Conservative headquarters, groups of men forgot the elation of victory as they discussed the majorities of the various sections of the riding. Surprise and at times consternation was registered on the faces of those who, in almost unbelievable, so they said, majorities were given their candidate in districts which were conceded to return a plurality for the Opposition. Many of the party leaders were forced to believe our eyes" and ears" as the returns registered. Even on somewhat sceptical minds pandemonium broke loose and Madoc Conservatives were treated to a celebration of victory which broke in the early hours of the morning.

EAST HASTINGS REPEATS HISTORY

first in which the government met defeat. It also was the first by-election since the general election in barked on its legislative program in full.

Victor in his first political fight since becoming Conservative Member, Hon. Earl Rowe said a general election would "unloose the full fury of the storm of political dissatisfaction with Hepburnism."

Many Problems Enlarged,

Commenting in Toronto after learning the result, Premier Hepburn said, after congratulating Dr. Welsh. "The economic problems were relegated to the limbo of forgotten things and in the last week of the campaign the opposition seemed to pitted the overwhelming Protestant majority against the Catholics on a purely religious issue. The result in the least concerned over an issue of that kind."

Legislation passed last session granting separate schools a larger share of corporation taxes was a paramount issue in the strenuous campaign. Conservative opponents it was "a gross injustice" to public school supporters. Liberals argued the legislation was necessary to bring justice to all concerned.

Conservative leaders claimed the Welsh majority would, pave the way for one given Hill in 1926 when he won by 1,613. Liberals said the fiscal returns probably would reduce the Welsh majority to that of Hill's 1934 majority of 415 appeared to have been bettered.

Both candidates carried their home communities. Dr. Boyce won in his home town of Tweed with 408 to 367. While returns were not completed from Madoc, Welsh had a substantial lead.

The winner sprinkled sheaf early in the voting. After Bogart, Singerford Township, gave Dr. Boyce his largest majority, 183 votes to seven, returns from four additional polls in the same township gave Welsh two votes. From then on Dr. Welsh always led.

Tribunal Test Made

Party officials expected, when returns were received from Deseronto, the final compilation it would show a increased in the majority, perhaps a substantial lead.

Deseronto, however, failed to add to the voting. After Bogart, Singerford Township, gave Dr. Boyce his largest majority, 183 votes to seven, returns from four additional polls in the same township gave Welsh two votes. From then on Dr. Welsh always led.

Obituary

LATE MISS MARY E. DEACON

The funeral of Miss Mary Ethel Deacon took place this Thursday morning from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Edward Schrieter, North James Street, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father J. J. Collins who conducted the committal service at the Catholic plot in St. James' Cemetery.

The late Miss Deacon was an employee of the Deacon Shirt Company for some years and many of her old associates in the factory attended the service in the church.

The bearers were Messrs George Looks, Dan Ridley, Edward Rosevear, J. Mouck (representing the Deacon Shirt Company) A. Gray, and Edward Schrieder.

There were many spiritual offerings and floral tributes.

WILLIAM G. CLYSDALE

The funeral of William George Clysdale, late of Demorestville, who died at Belleville on Tuesday, Dec. 8th, will take place at Windsor, Ont., on Friday, Dec. 11th.

The body of the late Mr. Clysdale was forwarded to Windsor early this Thursday morning from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home.

School for Leisure Christmas Closing

One hundred and fifty regular members of the Sewing School, conducted as a part of the School For Leisure assembled at St. Andrew's Church Hall on Tuesday evening for a sewing lesson to find instead that they were the guests of Miss Templeton, Director of the class, and her staff of sewing instructresses. Mrs. Ralph Plumpton arranged the program and acted as chairman and leader of the sing-song, and Mrs. S. Graham was pianist. Mr. George Wardle contributed two concert solos; Miss Marjorie Hill a vocal solo; Helen Cochrane a piano solo; The Bertram Troupe, some tap-dancing; Mrs. Templeton and Bernice Saunders, humorous readings; Mrs. Chalmers and Mrs. Templeton, a piano duet; and Margaret Drummond and Bernice Saunders, a comic parody on "Romeo and Juliet".

A study group under the direction of Miss Riley, assisted in preparing and serving the refreshments.

This was the closing of the art-sewing classes. Since the School opened early in November, three hundred and fifty people have been given instruction each week. The local Red Cross Unit has contributed several bolts of flannelette without which the work of the School could not have been carried on. Students were taught to cut baby's clothes, children's and adults' and dovetailing and pyjamas from new material and new prints; they were also taught how to cut down or remodel used clothes and were allowed to finish these at home, provided they brought the finished garments to the instructress the following week. Used clothes were contributed from all parts of the city. Knitting and millinery were also part of the curriculum.

The School has grown and prospered this year in spite of uncertainty of housing after the burning of the John Street Church building. One meeting was held in the Dundas Street Mission; then the officials of St. Andrew's Church generously offered the use of their Church Hall. There the School has accomplished much under the expert guidance of Miss Templeton and a voluntary staff of sewing teachers.

The School will re-open on January 6th with a more extensive program. Home nursing, child care and training, cooking and sewing will be offered on the curriculum until the closing of the 1936-37 activities of the School at Easter.

St. Andrew's Club Elects Officers

Officers for 1936-37 were elected by St. Andrew's Club at their regular meeting last evening. There was a splendid attendance of members and the results of the elections were:

Little Benny's Note Book

After school I went around to the firehouse to tawk to Mr. Riley the hookem ladder driver about different subjects such as snakes, Mr. Riley saying, There was only one snake that I was ever really fond of. Her name was Cola and I bawt her from a Hindoo snake charmer in a sideshow, he said.

Was he a regular snake charmer that made snakes dance by playing on a flute? I said and Mr. Riley said, He appeared to be, but it didn't take me long to notice that it is snake Cola wasn't charmed by the music at all. She danced with a look of fear in her little little eyes, and I understood why when I saw the Hindoo secretly threaten her with a whip that he held in the hand that wasn't holding the flute. Any kind of cruelty of animals makes my blood boil, so I gave the Hindoo 5 dollers and took Cola home in my pocket, he said.

Didn't she try to sting you? I said, and Mr. Riley said, On the contrary, she licked my fingers with her little forked tongue. Snakes can be just as grateful as elefants, and Cola got to be as much attached to me as if I'd been another snake. I didn't keep her around the firehouse because the sound of the alarm gong made her nervus, but on my miles she used to sleep rite in my bed with her head on the next pillow and the rest of her under the covers as cute as could be. I had her trained so she would wake me up promptly at 8 in the morning by kissing softly in one ear and then in the other, Mr. Riley said.

What did she eat? I said, and Mr. Riley said, Mice. She learned to catch them as good as any cat. She'd lie coiled up near a mouse hole and I've seen her spring sowcomfully from as far as 2 yards, though when she got fancy, and tried longer distances, she was apt to miss. I can tell you how fond of her I got, and I still get all choked up when I think of how I lost her, Mr. Riley said.

Oh, how? I said, and he said, I've got a little polishing to do now, so suppose I tell you when you drop around again.

Being the end of the subject till next time.

My Irrevocable Decision

"No more grave message has ever been received in parliament and no more difficult and I might almost say more repugnant task has ever been imposed upon the Prime Minister."

"I will ask the House which I know will not be without sympathy for me now to remember that in this last week I have had little time in which to compose a speech for delivery today.

"And so I must tell what I have to tell, truthfully, sincerely and plainly with no attempt to dress up or to adorn and I shall have little or nothing to say in the way of comment or criticism, or praise or blame.

Tells Story of Interviews

"I think my best course today and one that the House would desire is to tell them so far as I can what has passed between His Majesty and myself and what has led up to the present situation.

"I would like to say at the start that His Majesty as Prince of Wales has honored me for many years with a friendship which I value and I know that he would agree with me in saying to you that it was not only friendship but between man and man a friendship of perfection.

"I would like to tell the House when I begin that when I said 'goodbye' on Tuesday night at Fort Belvedere we both knew and felt and said to each other that that friendship, so far from being impaired by discussions this last week, bound us more closely together than it ever had and would last for life.

"Now sir, the House will want to know when it was that I had my first interview with His Majesty.

King Allows Story Told

"I may say that His Majesty has been most generous in allowing me to tell the House the pertinent part of the discussion that took place between us.

"As the House is aware I had been ordered in August and September to take a complete rest which, owing to the kindness of my staff and consideration of all my colleagues I was able to enjoy fully, and when October came although I had been ordered to take a rest that month I felt I could not in fairness to my work take a further holiday and I came, as it were, on half time before the middle of October.

"I was then for the first time since the beginning of August in a position to look into things.

"There were two things that disquieted me at that moment.

Baldwin Tells of Correspondence

"There was coming into my office a vast volume of correspondence mainly at that time from British subjects and American citizens of British origin in the United States, all expressing perturbation and uneasiness on what was then appearing in the American Press.

"I was aware also that there was in the near future a divorce case coming on, the results of which made me realize that possibly a difficult situation might arise later.

"I felt it was essential that some one should warn His Majesty and warn him of the difficult situation that might arise later if occasion was given for continuation of this kind of gossip and criticism—that might cause if the gossip and criticism spread from the other side of the Atlantic to this country.

"I thought in the circumstances there was only one who could speak to him and talk the matter over with him and that man was the Prime Minister.

Consulted No Colleagues

"I felt doubly bound to speak as it was my duty as I conceived it to the country and my duty to him, not only as a counsellor but as a friend.

"I consulted—I am ashamed to say it, but they have forgiven me—none of my colleagues.

"I happened to be staying in the neighborhood of Fort Belvedere about the middle of October and ascertained that His Majesty was leaving his house on Sunday, the 18th of October, to entertain a small shooting party at Sandringham and that he was leaving on Sunday afternoon.

"I telephoned from my friend's house Sunday morning and found he (the King) had left earlier than expected.

"In these circumstances I communicated with him through his secretary and stated I desired to see him.

"It was the first and only occasion on which I was the one who asked for an interview.

"I said I desired to see him and that the matter was urgent.

"I told him what it was and I expressed my willingness to go to Sandringham Tuesday, the 20th, but I said I thought it would be wiser, if His Majesty thought it fit, to see him at Belvedere because I was anxious at that time that none should know of my visit and that the first talk should be in complete privacy.

Monarch Arranges Conference

"His Majesty replied he would motor back Monday, Oct. 19, to Belvedere and that he would see me Tuesday morning and on Tuesday morning I saw him.

"I may say before I proceed to give any details of the circumstances that an adviser of the Crown can be of no possible service to his Master unless he tells him at all times the truth as he sees it.

"Whether that truth be welcome or not; and let me say here as I may say several times before I finish, that during those talks—when I took notes for my own use—I did not told His Majesty of which I felt he was entitled to be aware but never has His Majesty shown any signs of offense, of being hurt at anything I have said to him, and the whole or our discussions have been carried through with the utmost frankness and mutual respect and regard in which we stood.

Baldwin's Two Anxieties

"I told His Majesty I had two great anxieties—the effect of the continuance of the situation on the King at the time was proceeding in the American press and the effect it would have in the Dominions and particularly Canada where

Gillies Lake Production

Gillies Lake-Porcupine Gold Mines Ltd. have announced that total shipments of gold since the first of November amounted to $48,360. Mill feed for November is reported as averaging $21.50, the mill treating approximately 33 tons per day and giving a recovery of 97.5 per cent.

Market Comment

The sensational rise, and subsequent gyration in the shares of Thompson Cadillac has tended to again call considerable attention to the Cadillac district of northern Quebec, where the O'Brien property may develop into one of the largest producers in the Dominion. So long as important new ore discoveries are made from time to time, so long will public interest in the mining market be maintained at a high level. Shrewd observers are predicting a major advance in the mines shortly after the turn of the year.

Between now and the end of the year, it is not expected that a great deal will transpire in the industrial section of the board in either direction. Movements in individual issues may develop but the coming holidays will no doubt detract from a wide forward movement. A moderate amount of profit taking may also develop as a result of some traders accepting profits in order to purchase holiday gifts.

There is nothing on the immediate horizon to warrant a change in the general attitude that prospects for 1937 are promising and that the recovery movement which started two years ago will continue. Profits will be made in these securities where the earnings outlook is satisfactory, which means that discrimination is necessary in making additional market commitments.

QUEEN LIVED IN DARK GLAMIS

Traditions Surround Old Castle Where New Queen's Parents Dwell

(By The Canadian Press)

Although born in England, the new Queen Elizabeth comes of an old house that traces its ancestry far back in Scottish history. Her father is the 14th Earl of Strathmore, one of whose forbears, Sir John Lyon, by marrying the daughter of King Robert II of Scotland and became keeper of the great seal and chancellor of Scotland. Sir John Keith was treacherously murdered and buried at Scone among the Kings of Scotland.

Glamis Castle, seat of the Strathmore family, where as the Duke of York, Britain's new King proposed three times before he was accepted by the then Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, has been associated with Scotland's history for more than 800 years. It was also the birthplace of their Majesties' second child, Princess Margaret Rose.

Secret staircases abound within the castle's battlement walls and figures in fearsome armor look from dim recesses. There are dungeons and the relics of a deep well used by the household in time of siege.

Of all the historic associations of Glamis the most arresting is that with which Shakespeare endowed it when he made it the scene of the murder of King Duncan by Macbeth.

The pedantic historian will tell you that Shakespeare took the full license of the poet, for clan suffered himself to be misled by Holinshed or some other chronicler who ought to have known better.

Nevertheless the romantic tradition firmly remains at Glamis that within its great walls MacBeth permitted himself to wonder if it was a dagger which he saw before him and that there also Lady MacBeth showed herself a somnambulist. At any rate one dimly-lit apartment is to this day known as "Duncan's Hole". Access to it is gained by a short spiral passage out from the crypt through the thick wall.

Edward to Wait Until April 27th Before Marriage

London, Dec. 10—(CP)—If King Edward takes the fateful step of giving up his throne in order to marry Mrs. Wallis Simpson, he must wait until next April 27 before the American woman is free.

Mrs. Simpson, whose suit of divorce from Ernest Aldrich Simpson, London wine and spirits broker and former guard officer, cannot be made absolute until six months after it was granted last Oct. 27.

For specific reasons—not the convenience of haste—the application —the divorce may be consummated before the end of the six months period but the reasons must be acceptable to both the trial Judge and the King's proctor.

Under an act passed in 1926 application for a quick divorce may be made to the judge who rendered the final decision (it was Sir John Hawke, at Ipswich, who granted Mrs. Simpson's divorce) and notice, at the same time, given to the King's proctor, who must consent to the acceleration of the decree.

No such request it was stated authoritatively, has been filed for Mrs. Simpson.

REACHING THE GOAL

Consumption: as tuberculosis of the lungs is commonly called, is a wasting disease which succumbs to medical treatment and cure over a long period of time. Then, too, it is a contagious disease, especially dangerous to young children.

This was fully realized by the founders of the National Sanatorium Association when forty years ago they entered the fight against the scourge of consumption in this dominion.

This venture met with much opposition and ridicule, for at that time it was firmly believed that tuberculosis was incurable—people were being buried within half an hour of being pronounced ill.

However, it was not long before the regimen of the small hospital began to show results—people were being cured—going home and taking up their work.

Such was the small beginning of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumption which now provide for more than 1,000 tuberculosis patients.

The progress made and the changes in outlook is reflected by these and the many other fine sanatoria throughout the Dominion, and by the large number of public health nurses employed—which to-day are sparing no efforts to control tuberculosis.

The results have been that cases upon thousands have been given a chance to get well, who but for treatment, would have been left without hope, and the mortality from this disease has been greatly reduced.

Many tuberculosis cases from the very nature of their illness are in the case of death, there is cause for consternation, but there is also the chance of the healing of self consciousness and the development of a fine spirit. Out of sight, out of mind is a proverb applicable to tuberculosis will not halt its advance unless it is forced to do so. This can only be accomplished with the continued co-operation of the public with the organization of the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives and Sanatorium Board, so far as lies within their power, no one who suffers from tuberculosis shall be denied a chance to get well. If you would help in this humane saving work, send a gift to National Sanatorium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

Edward Seventh Predicted End Of Royal Line?

London, Dec. 10—(CP)—More than a quarter of a century ago King Edward VIII predicted that his grandson, Edward VIII, would be "the last King of England" according to a story told by Grand Duke Alexander of Russia.

The prophecy long had been forgotten in the face of reconstruction of the line of fallen thrones it was recalled today in the present situation.

When Edward VIII made the prophecy he was on the throne. Edward VII was dead. V, was Duke of York and Edward VIII was a middle-aged bachelor with no family ties.

Grand Duke told about it in his book "Twilight of Royalty" published in 1932. Writing of a visit to Edward, he related: "I shall never forget the reconciled irony of King Edward VII's tone when as he sat on the terrace of his summer palace and looking at his then very youthful grandson, he nudged me and said with an air of an accomplished fact, pointing to the future: 'You see that boy—the last King of England!'"

SCHOOL IS DOWN 44 ARE KILLED

More Than 300 Children Injured, When Buried in Debris

LISBON, Dec. 10.—(CP)—Havas)—Forty-four children were killed and 300 seriously injured Tuesday when a school building in the Province of Ribatejo, 50 miles northeast of Lisbon, collapsed and buried 600 persons under tons of debris, it was learned here today.

The catastrophe occurred during ceremonies marking the anniversary of the founding of the Catholic action in Portugal.

Most of the victims were between nine and 19 years of age.

Scanty reports reaching here from the isolated village indicated the last of dead and injured among the parents reported their children still unaccounted for.

The children, with some of the parents, were assembled on the first floor of the school for an address when the walls of the building began to collapse. The audience rushed in panic towards the two exits which were immediately blocked by struggling humanity. Then the walls and floors caved in with a crash that was heard nearly a mile away.

When the first rescue workers arrived only a mass of wreckage was left, screams of injured women and children could be heard from the debris.

The entire region has been plunged into mourning by the disaster. A mass public funeral probably will be held.

Polly Eccles and Walter Coy, who advance the romantic theme in Conrad's mystery, "Love Letters of a Star" now playing with "Thin Ice" at the Capitol.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yeleman:

Dear Violet and Will,

We your relatives and friends have gathered here tonight to wish you, our heartiest congratulations and our sincere wishes to you both, on your 25th Silver Wedding anniversary.

We could not let this eventful occasion go by without spending a social evening with you both, and your family of six children, three boys and three girls, who have all lived to share the blessings of this anniversary.

As a token of our love we ask you to accept these gifts which are a small interest of blessings that may many happy memories cling to them always and you may rest assured that our good wishes and prayers go with you for a continued happy and prosperous wedded life.

Signed on behalf of the friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Yeleman then unwrapped the gifts, they being many and beautiful. The gift from the children was a beautiful case of Wm. Rogers Silverware.

Whether the warnings did penetrate his brain in time or whether the seat felt too soft to be safe, he was up again so quickly that little "Greta Ripple" was found to be scarcely conscious of anything wrong. The nurse, after a careful examination pronounced her 100 per cent. unhurt.

Yanks, Tigers Refuse to Play Nocturnal Ball in St. Louis

Are The Only Two American League Clubs to Reject Browns' Proposal

NEW HOME PLATE

Sox Trade Bill Werber To A's For "Pinky" Higgins

New York, Dec. 10.—Boston Red Sox yesterday traded Infielder Bill Werber to Philadelphia Athletics for Third Baseman "Pinky" Higgins.

It was the only major deal of a dull day as the baseball trade magnates continued.

The following six minor facts dominated the day's business.

1. All American League clubs except New York and Detroit agreed to play one night game, against the Browns, Sunday.

2. Both leagues gave clubs permission to schedule Sunday doubleheaders after their third Sunday at home.

3. Ernie Quigley was appointed supervisor of National League umpires, succeeding the late Cy Rigler.

4. National League adopted a new type homeplate with beveled edges, designed to cut down injuries to players sliding into home.

5. President Frick of the National and Will Harridge of the American were directed by the owners to confer with baseball manufacturers on designing a new type of "ball."

6. American League stipulated that the batting champion must bat at .400 times during a season.

Harris Benefits Most

Two deals were confirmed. Washington traded Outfielder Buddy Myer, bill to the Cleveland Indians for Pitcher Thornton Lee, who in turn was shipped to Chicago White Sox for Pitcher Jack Salveson. And the aging Nicolas Maranville sold his contract to Brooklyn Dodgers.

Critics agreed that Bucky Harris of the Senators got the best end of the Washington-Cleveland-Chicago deal. He received the 26-year-old Salveson for the 37-year-old Whitehill.

Only Commissioner Landis and the Cardinal Owners' Manager, Branch Rickey, seemed in a position to produce a climax to the meetings.

Landis has been rebuffed twice in his efforts to get rid of major and minor league club owners. Both makers and backers passed a rule which stipulated that a major league club, while still prohibited from owning a saint by player directly, may recommend the signing of such a player to any minor league club.

Reckoned that the club owners were determined to put the measure through, Landis asked that all such recommendations be filed through his office. The refusal of this request by both major and minor league club owners marked the first real challenge to the authority of baseball's High Commissioner.

Tomorrow Landis summons the major league owners before him and the owners were obviously concerned today with what his reaction will be.

Sport Callings

By Ken Colling

It may be a bit out of season, but here's one worthy repartee. Willie Macfarlane, noted golfer, was playing a two-some some time ago and had just sunk his putt on a 170 yard hole, halving it with his opponent. At the moment a ball came rolling upon the green, which was hidden from plain view from the tee by a bunker. The ball rolled to within 15 feet of the cup. "Let's give the guy a thrill—a hole in one," suggested Macfarlane as he kicked the loose ball into the hole. A moment later a short fat fellow came clambering onto the green, looking for his ball. . . . "You shot one up here a moment ago," asked Macfarlane. . . . "Yes," was the reply. "Then you've had good luck your ball is in the cup," smilingly added Macfarlane. The excited golfer took a look into the cup to verify the statement, rushed to the edge of the green and shouted to his partner: "Hey Louie! Listen, Louie! I made this hole in only six!" Macfarlane dropped his head and walked away without further comment. . . .

The Kingston City League officials and the Limestone City (with sport commissioners) are highly indignant and claim they were victimized in most sportsmanship at the hands of the Intermediate fathers on Monday night, because Manager Eddie Thomas did not notify them of his inability to be a team for a scheduled game. In the Kingston loop on Monday night Trus ensemble of Thomas did not notify the Kingston people of his inability to take a team to Kingston and fulfill his schedule. As soon as he found out it was impossible to get together a full team, Mr. Thomas immediately notified the Kingston officials.

At any rate here's the Kingston version of the set-up of which we have written in the Intelligencer. They say:—"It is safe to say that the action of the Belleville club is not going to pass unnoticed. It was perhaps easy for Thomas to decide not to come here because of the fact he had not paid his entry fee into the league, which payment by it have been paid before the first game. Each eight-game band been scheduled and advertised and officials of the league and city rooms had very little chance of notifying the fans that the senior game would not be played. The match, however, isn't going to be allowed to drop with the action of the team last night; the O.H.A. and the C.A.H.A. will be notified of the withdrawal of the team and it may be that when Thomas comes to arrange his team in the O.H.A. he may run into trouble which he brought on himself and which certainly calls for punishment."

First and foremost we doubt very much whether the O.H.A. or the C.A.H.A. would so much as even recognize the Kingston pre-season loop. Then there's the scheduled angle, Mr. Thomas took Fred Bentley, of Napanee to Kingston after having signed him. The Kingston executive stated Bentley could not play for Belleville, but could play for a Kingston club. Later Bentley refused to even consider an offer to play with a Kingston squad. When the Kingston interests refused Bentley permission to play with Belleville and stated he would have to play for Kingston interests, it left a dark-brown taste in the mouths of the locals. Mr. Thomas offered to pay his entrance fee into the league some time ago, but was informed by one of the league members to "pay it the next time you come down." Lastly Mr. Thomas was not the particular about entering into the Kingston League and did so only to accommodate the league officials, who stated they only had four entries. "If the Kingston hockey men think we're going to send a team to take to Kingston and make money for the Kingston Arena only, they're badly mistaken. If we were getting as much as our expenses paid I would not mind getting beat, even if we did have to take a team to Kingston down," stated Mr. Thomas today as he added his players could not make the trip last Monday and therefore he was forced to default the game.

Inability to be sufficient players for a practice, to local Intermediate did not stage their season's initial practice at the Arena last evening, but Eddie Thomas' charges will be out in full force this evening. Manager Thomas is anxious to have an intermediate 'material out to this practice in order to ascertain the quality, and doubtless an eye will be kept on the possibility also of the pucksters available. Early next week S. R. Burrows, convener of Group No. 1 in the Intermediate O.H.A. group will call together the clubs in the local junior and intermediate groups in order to talk over matters and draft the season's schedules. . . . There may be some last minute changes in the various groupings, we understand as Belleville juniors and both Peterborough clubs are far from satisfied with their lot. Of course when the clubs meet on a common ground doubtless some mutual understanding will be arrived at to the advantage of all concerned.

Mr. John DeGrinsky, the President of the O.R.F.U. and the dean of rugby football as played today in Eastern Canada, was the guest speaker at an invitation banquet held in the Masonic Temple by the Eureka Lodge, for the Belleville Rugby Football Club. Despite the fact Mr. DeGrinsky is well up in years, he still is an active man and can always be depended upon to deliver a splendid discourse when asked to speak upon the subject of his first love, rugby football. We talked with Mr. DeGrinsky long before the banquet and he informed us the O.R.F.U. executive men were pleased with the advancement that is being made in rugby football circles in this part of the province. "We are seriously considering taking the next move as the O.H.A., namely forming a Senior "A" and a Senior "B" group in the O.R.F.U. The present-day senior groups would be the Senior "B" while other good Intermediate groups would be classed as senior "B" for instance the Lake Shore group, with which we are more than pleased. Mr. DeGrinsky is a splendid type of gentleman, who endears the game he played for the game's sake and some of these old young players hear his message, they usually have a far different conception of life and sport. . . .

The Oshawa sports jotter-downer must have absorbed a terrible body punch in 1936, when his seniors and Major junior pucksters both took shellackings. Incidentally the Oshawa Majors thought they had a "pipe" when they were drawn against Northern Vocational School in the S.P.A. series but their thoughts proved a boomerang of the first water down, which proves you never can be too sure about something or can you?

Taking exception to the recent all-star Eastern Canadian football team, Mike Rodden, names his several fellows:

Flying wing—Ormond Beach, Saints. Secondary defence backfielder—Hugh Stirling, Barrie. Defence backfielders—Ab. Box, Balmy Beach and "Hunk" Welch, Hamilton. Quarter-back—Alex. Hayes, Sarnia. Snapback —Fred Wigle, Montreal. Inside wings—"Tiny" Herman, Ottawa, and Ernie Hempey, Balmy Beach. Middle wing—Wes. Johns, Argonauts. Substitutes—Abe Eliovitz, Montreal; Teddy Morris, Argonauts; Jimmy Simpson, Hamilton; Mike Hedgewick, Sarnia; Andy Gerrow, Ottawa; Arnie Morrison, Ottawa; George Pigeon, Montreal, and Jim Palmer, Argonauts.

NAPANEE KIDS WIN

Kingston, Dec. 10.—Napanee juniors scored a 9 to 3 victory over Reginolds College in a junior City Hockey League game at the Arena which is more than $70,000 in the till for the year. Joe Lords-Eddie Simms Monday night. . . . Some of the Napanee fans laying 9 to 5 Elmwood Crest trims Fred Perry in their first pro start. . . . New York colored boy Joe Louis, who knocked out King Edward at golf, is trying to cash in the current constitutional crisis by offering her golf act to the night clubs. . . . Some of his pet lines in baseball as player, manager and magnate "Old Pop" Clark Griffith of Washington said that one ball player . . . That was Joe Wood-ring, his son-in-law—for 200,000 bucks.

BLACKS WIN OVER 'GOLDS' LEAD LEAGUE

Atkins' 'Blackshirts' Come From Behind to Win 30 to 15

BURLEY STARS

Two Fast Games of Basket Ball Played at Armouries

With the fleet-footed Herb Burley running wild to score 16 points, Atkins' "Blacks" moved into sole possession of first place in the Y.M.C.A. basket ball league when they "Blacks" downed Alf Cole's "Golds" by the score of 30 to 15 at the Armouries' courts last evening. The other game of a double-header in the "Y" city loop, was played at the exhibition hall and saw Vic White's "Purples" win in the abbreviated game over Al Wickerson's "Whites" by the score of 16 to 14.

In the feature game of the evening the "Golds" were leading by the score of 10 to 8 in a fast contested first half. The "Blacks" launched a terrific offensive in the second stanza, however, led by Herb Burley and Red Gordon and pumped home to an easy victory. The "Blacks" scored the Golds 22 to 7 in the last half. It was the second consecutive victory in as many games, for the Blacks, who are leading the city basket ball loop with two wins and no defeats. Another doubleheader will be staged at the Armouries in this fast league next Wednesday night.

Burley was the spear-head for the victorious Blacks on their triumph-ant march to victory, scoring eight baskets and running wild through-out the entire second half. Red Gordon counted ten points for the winners. Rivards and Tobe proved the more prolific scoring threats for the vanquished Golds.

In the opening game Muir and Robinson were the leading scorers for the winning "Purples" while Wickerson and Schrieder led the losers in scoring. The "Golds" fall-ed miserably in their attempts at shooting foul shots as they completed only three in nine attempts. The Blacks sunk two of their attempted five foul shots, however. The opening game was clearly contested, not a single foul being called.

CHAMP LOST IN NON-TITLE BOUT

Jeffra Out-points Escobar, Bantam Champ For Second Time

New York, Dec. 10—(AP)—Sixto Escobar, the bantamweight champion, had plenty fo think about today as he packs up for a holiday jaunt to his Puerto Rican home.

A rugged youngster from Baltimore named Harry Jeffra not only gave the 112-pound king something to ponder over, but maybe a little to worry about.

In the New York Hippodrome last night, Jeffra, a clean cut 23-year-old youngster, scored a decision over Escobar for the second time in less than three months. He was a decisive winner in 10 rounds.

Both men came in over-the-weight so Sixto's title was not involved, but the workman-like manner in which Jeffra applied the skids had Escobar and his rednose wondering what happened when the two meet with the crown at stake.

FAMED PLAYWRIGHT DIES

ROME, Dec. 10.—(AP) — Luigi Pirandello, famed Italian playwright and winner of the 1934 Nobel prize for literature, died today.

The author of "Six Characters in Search of an Author" died of pneumonia after a brief illness.

Pirandello, 69 years old, was at work on another play when he died, his widow and a son Landi. 10 actor, were at the bedside.

LIFE, DEATH AND TUBERCULOSIS

Scores of thousands of people have died of tuberculosis in Ontario during the last quarter century, and many more thousands have been saved. If treated in time, tuberculosis is not a fatal disease. Deaths from tuberculosis in Ontario have been reduced from about 180 per 100,000 population in 1900 to 60 in the present time. In fact, your chances of living to 70 years of age are now less than one-third of what they were at the turn of the century. Tuberculosis is still the chief cause of death between the ages of 15 and 45, but the disease Christmas with you and your family than ever before. Did you know that 1,000 persons died from tuberculosis in 1936 if this disease were allowed to run its course? Did you know that 1,000 persons will die from tuberculosis in 1936 if this disease were allowed to run its course? Did you know that more than half of the people who died of tuberculosis five years ago would be alive today if the disease had been in the prime, productive years of life between fifteen and forty-five, that is, between one hundred deaths from tuberculosis occur in these ages.

Tuberculosis is a disease of the home and the people in the home. Therefore, the fight for the development of tuberculosis is a fight for the home. Three people are in high school, colleges or just starting to work. Their chances of completing their training, of getting started in life, of being free from tuberculosis and living a normal life are as many as eighty young people out of one hundred. But these same chances are only twenty-five. If all young people could be protected from tuberculosis, they could easily be brought back to one hundred per cent. health.

Tuberculosis is the goal of the Christmas campaign of the Ontario Provincial and Toronto Christmas Seal Campaign. Your co-operation can make possible the work of those hospitals will help to conquer tuberculosis. Please send your gift to the National Sanitarium Association, 223 College St., Toronto.

WAGE REDUCTION IS JUSTIFIED

Railway Representative Argues Case For Company

Montreal, Dec. 9 (CP)—Ten per cent reductions from wage scales of Canadian Railway employees, justified because of decreased cost of living and lower operating revenues of the railway companies, George Hodge, railway representative, said today at the resumed hearings of the Railway Wage Conciliation Board.

The probe into employees' demands for restoration of the 10 per cent wage cut imposed in 1931 is under the chairmanship of Mr. Justice A. E. MacLean, with Fred Dalgleish of Oakville, Ont., representing railway employees and W. M. Wainford Evans of Winnipeg, representing Railway Management.

Hodge, rebutting argument of Howard C. Chase, employees' spokesman, presented at the first session Nov. 23 to 27, said "If it were admitted that reductions in cost of living and increased railway earnings justified increased wages, no increase had been granted on these grounds, under reversed conditions no decrease would be made were equally justified.

It was on these that the 10 per cent deductio nof 1931 was justified, he said.

Home and School Club Hears Two Fine Addresses

Last evening the Home and School Club of Queen Alexandra School held the regular monthly meeting with a splendid attendance. The members had the pleasure of hearing an interesting program by the Bellleville Band, under the direction of Mr. Ross Hunter, and, this popular innovation was greatly appreciated.

The President, Mrs. W. H. Finkle, was in the chair for the meeting and the business included the treasurer's report of the recent Neighborhood Party and the at the home of Mrs. Morton the proceeds being very satisfactory. The sum is to be expended on supplying milk to Ann Street School and the contribution of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. for this purpose was acknowledged gratefully by the Club. The members will co-operate with the teachers in making costumes for the Christmas concert. After the New Year it is hoped that regular classes in sewing will be arranged, in co-operation with the Red Cross. Mrs. A. D. Archibald, representing the Home Economics Committee of the Red Cross asked the members to form a group for the Fury Instructive course.

Two addresses were addressed by two speakers last evening. Miss Ethel Adams, librarian in Derby Public Library, and Mr. H. Friel of the Belleville Collegiate Institute Vocational staff, addressed the meeting.

Miss Adams spoke on the subject of Books for Children, with the Christmas season in view. She arranged an exhibit of very interesting books, many of which were new, however, that the old familiar books were included as well. She said that should be selected for giving and the most treasured volumes in the Belleville Public Library. Miss Adams gave a comprehensive list of recommended books, classified and graded according to interest. Miss Adams has contributed a series of articles in Reading" as suitable for parents to guide them in the selection of books for children, after consultation with the librarian.

Discusses Secondary Education

Mr. Friel in his address answered some of the questions criticisms of Secondary Education. Mr. Friel felt that a great deal of criticism was destructive rather than constructive and came from incomplete knowledge of the subject. He endeavoured to show the fundamentals, aims, and purposes of secondary education, particularly the vocational side.

He answered the criticism that education is stereotyped by pointing out that the courses were elastic, especially those of the vocational schools. The individuality of the teacher and the rugged individualism of Canadian youth prevents any original standardization of school courses. The greatest fault, the speaker said, lay not with the school, teacher, educational system or course, but with the student and the home, and the general public who have demanded matriculation as a graduation diploma. The speaker also pointed out that matriculation is only a certificate of fitness and that only three out of one hundred finally attend University. Matriculation does not include an estimate of the character or personality and does not provide for natural gifts. Parents should know that only twenty-five per cent of the youth had aptitude for matriculation courses, the rest who have attended high school have been misled and aged with a strong inferiority complex. Not all are able to fill professional posts and so there should be training so that they may take their place as useful citizens in other spheres.

The erroneous opinions current regarding vocational training were, that the popular misconception that such courses are designed for the intellectually inferior, was denounced by the speaker; and that the vocational school is a trade school, also a wrong impression. Vocational school is a place where children not interested in pursuing a university course can obtain education for a full and happy life.

Mr. W. G. Anderson expressed the gratitude of the Club to the speakers and to the band. At the conclusion of the meeting the social committee served refreshments.

Easy Way to Relieve Piles

All piles sufferers should be taught to understand that piles are generally caused or made worse by an internal congestion. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt found this out after years of study. He also found out that to get satisfying relief from piles, this internal congestion should be treated, so he worked out a prescription to be used internally.

Dr. Leonhardt's prescription, Hem-Rold, is directed to getting at a cause of piles. Once that is helped, pile misery is quickly relieved.

The use of Hem-Rold is a very effective, easy and pleasant way to treat piles. You may have your money back if it doesn't help you and you can generally see definite results the first day.

Hem-Rold, which may be had at J. S. McKeown's, or any other drug store, has been successful in hundreds of cases and is so successful generally, anyone suffering with piles may give Hem-Rold a trial, without cost, if the results from the first bottle are not satisfactory.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Nina Days a Queen"

With the eyes of the world turned towards the Royal family as a result of the abdication that "Nine Days a Queen" should now be shown at the Capitol Theatre. Such a shattering series of events as those which led to the Hit, one story as a result of the sudden change in monarchs could never be dramatized in a modern republic of government, but this picture will give an insight into the manner in which kings were made and dethroned in the not too distant past of English history.

The story of the boy King, Edward VI., and his beautiful young cousin, Lady Jane, both of whom were mere pawns in the hands of a group of scheming ministers in Tudor England, is a vivid tale of living makers and court intrigue. It has as much punch and drama as the best of the melodramatic stuff as is found in today's news and tomorrow's headlines.

Royal Blood Seals Fate

Written and directed for GB by Robert Stevenson, this romantic drama is played by a top-notch cast, and the general public who have demanded matriculation as a graduation diploma. The speak-easy or pointed out that matriculation is really designed for the purpose as only three out of one hundred finally attend University. Matriculation does not include an estimate of the character or personality and does not provide for natural gifts. Parents should know that only twenty-five per cent of the youth had aptitude for matriculation courses, the rest who have attended high school have been misled and aged with a strong inferiority complex. Suspense, mystery and excitement mark the theme of the thrilling Universal picture, "Love Letters of a Star," which is now playing at the Capitol theatre.

The narrative reveals what happens in the life of a wealthy family when the schemes of a blackmailer almost destroy their happiness. The conniving leech is killed under circumstances which throw suspicion on the victims of his plot, since one of the daughters has been driven to suicide by his threats. The marriage of another daughter is almost ruined by further blackmail.

Brilliant detective work, some of the keenest ever presented on the screen, is developed in the offering, leading to a surprise climax of dramatic force. The solution of the mystery is kept hidden until the end of the film.

If you like thrills; mystery; tense drama, brightened by just enough romance and comedy, then see "Love Letters of a Star."

AT THE BELLE

"Dancing Lady" and "The Big House"

Through camera-craft and mechanical ingenuity the motion picture screen becomes a gigantic kaleidoscope in the presenting of spectacular music numbers in "Dancing Lady", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production at the Belle today and Friday, matinee daily with Joan Crawford, Clark Gable and Fred Astaire, featured.

In one of the scenes each of the chorus beauties, revolving through a maze of mirrors can be seen thirty times at once, the effects created being an endless parade of pulchritude. In other scenes complete changes of costumes and settings are witnessed, as though by magic, right before the eyes of the spectator, still other scenes whirl upon the screen in a dozen different angles simultaneously.

A Striking Scene

The most thrilling scene of all, perhaps, is the finale in which Miss Crawford, dressed in a gown of rhinestones, a number of modern tempo. In this scene eight thousand dancing figures—if you could possibly count them.... appear upon the screen. The dance numbers were staged by Sammy Lee and Eddie Prinz.

In two several numbers, Miss Crawford becomes the dancing partner of Fred Astaire, noted New York revue, stage and screen star. Nelson Eddy and Art Jarret sing the new songs which include "Let's Go Native" "Heigh Ho", "Everything I Have Is Yours", "Hank the Rhythm of the Day" and "Dancing Lady", Mary Robert, Winnie Lightner, Robert Benchley, Frankchot Tone and Ted Healy head the impressive supporting cast. This feature begins at 2.30, 7.00 and 8.50 p.m.

"The Big House" Gripping

"The Big House", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's drama of penitentiary riots announced as the second feature attraction on the same program, is a very gripping picture. "The Big Parade". Three central characters work out a dramatic story against scathing hates and a desperate prison riot; gunfest with machine guns and tanks. A sympathetic low story of a boy and girl is adroitly woven into the thrills, realism, and heavy drama of the massive play.

The three central characters are played by Chester Morris, Wallace Beery and Robert Montgomery, and three estimates in the penitentiary. Friendship, jealousy, the corrosion of souls, and regeneration through love and turmoil are elements of the picture.

Lelia Hyams plays the heroine, and the cast includes Lewis Stone, Karen Morley, George Marion, Jr., O. Nugent De Witt Jennings and Claire McDowell. This feature begins at 3.50 and 8.30 p.m. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 8.50 p.m. Matinee daily starts at 3.30 p.m.

Santa Claus Saturday

Santa Claus will be at the Belle Theatre Saturday afternoon with a gift for every girl and boy. On the screen Joe E. Brown and lovely Carol Hughes are seen in Joe's latest bomb shell of joy, "Polo Joe". The second feature attraction is the comedy program. "The Girl on the Front Page", co-stars Edmund Lowe and Gloria Stuart.

"Rich Girl—Poor Girl"

By FAITH BALDWIN

Chapter XXXIX

As Jonathan went toward his own car Sutton called him from the steps. He said, "You needn't bother about seeing Larry again tonight, Kimball. I've had a telephone call. Doctor Jameson to be at the house when we reach there."

Jonathan drove off. As he slowed his car around to the main road he had an idea. He stopped and walked back to the scene of the accident. He took off a pocket flash and looked at the tire marks. There were also many footprints in the snow. He looked down at the car which lay half on its side in the ditch. A plain glass flask had been broken apparently in the side pocket and had spilled over the leather upholstery. He grinned and went back to his car and drove toward town and the hospital as fast as safety permitted, whistling "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf."

The Enders boy was plucky. He submitted to a painful examination without flinching. He told his father, Hays and when they were developed Jonathan read them. Everywhere a bad compound fracture.

Other than the bandages for shock and bruises, the boy appeared to be all right. Jonathan took him up to the operating room with Hays when the fracture. Later, while the boy rested comfortably, recovering from the anesthetic and under an opiate to dull the pain, Hays and Jonathan talked to Jonathan in the hall.

"They're very kind, they say I'll may only have a limp. I'll be a useful nurse," she explained.

"Of course you must stay. But we'll put a nurse on for a day or so." Jonathan added, "And by the way, Dexter will foot the bill."

She said pitifully, "Oh, why did it have to happen? It means I'll have to be out of school this whole term... He liked it so much. Worked in every day, sometimes he got a lift... it was the best thing for him."

"He'll be all right," said Jonathan, patting her shoulder.

"Doctor Jameson," she said I should see—"

Jonathan sighed. He said, "If you do—well, you'll have one witness anyway to what I say. I'll tell you about any more. But I have to warn you, you may not get far with a suit. Meantime and hard, and don't scare 'em into some sort of a consent settlement."

It was late when he left the hospital grounds but he drove directly to Rose's. She'd be waiting ... wondering what had happened to Cleo. They were rough lights blazed. He stopped the car and trumped up the steps. The door was unlocked. He had time to ring. "I've been out of my mind wondering," she said breathlessly. "Was he badly hurt?"

"Two broken legs," said Jonathan, "minor nothing trivial, I hope?" asked Jonathan. "No, not badly. Turned on a knee, cut down a bruise. Has rid on his way home from skating. I've been at the hospital with him."

"Who—Larry?"

"No, the kid—name of Enders —game little fellow."

"Jack Enders" said Rose. "I have him in class ... freshman. English...he's a pucky youngster ...is he seriously hurt?"

"Bad fracture" replied Jonathan absently. He looked across at her. "I had a little show-down with the Dexter," he said. "Yes, he showed up. Seems that Mrs. Dexter was prostrated and still and his father weren't available. Sutton would've done it, but I made him act as agent in saying that Larry had been drinking."

"Did he?"

"And how!"

"I thought he had been when he came here," she said slowly. "He must have gone on—"

"And on," agreed Jonathan grimly. "Well, that's that. I'd give a lot to see him deprived of his license for a time but of course that's a hope which will never be fulfilled. The chief of police has the blame pinned on the Enders kid already and Jameson has charge of Larry's case. Read about it in your local rag when it comes. He yawned, got up, and pulled her up from her chair and kissed her. He said, "Good-night, darling... I'm off to my little bed-lo—I hope."

She went to the door with him and watched him go, then she returned to the living room and looked absently into the remains of the fire...ash and a live spark or two. Jonathan was a good guy. She shivered.

The local paper certainly spread itself. According to its story, which had been given them by the police, young Mr. Dexter was a hero for the second time in a few months. And Jonathan himself and his valuable car into a ditch in order to avoid hitting a child cheerily pursued who the papers hinted, had no business on the highway. Jonathan had been skating party at that time of night. The fact that he had his him was regrettable but Mr. Dexter's fault. It sounded very much as if Jonathan had deliberately driven the car after every effort had been made to get it clear of the ditch.

A reporter had seen Jonathan. He was a curious long lean young man who did the work of the whole town and covered police reports as well as political doings. He said, "As the doctor on the scene..."

Jonathan replied indifferently, "I suppose you've been to the hospital."

"They wouldn't give me any information."

Quite rightly. Jack Enders has a bad compound fracture of the femur. What if means anything to you," Jonathan told him. "Why not drop down and ask the fire marshal and such around Four Corners? Larry Dexter was drunk. He drove his car into the ditch. He wasn't trying to avoid anyone or anything. Was probably too blinding snow for anyone was on the road. he hadn't have seen a cow; must be less an undersized fourteen year old kid. He hit him and went into the ditch and that's all there is to it."

"Yes, Doc," said the reporter, pallid, "I wouldn't dare write that!"

"No, I suppose not."

"They wouldn't print it," said the reporter.

"Nice going," said Jonathan approvingly. "Say, I've got to get sleeping."

Chapter XXXX.

"Keep the phone pulled on how Rose come out," called Sam after him. "If she gets in a jam—well, there's such a thing as the power of the press, even that of a miserable weekly. Might stir up something... a dose of arsenic for instance."

Jonathan was laughing as he shook down the rickety stairs and made for the car and the hospital.

Mrs. Enders was waiting for him. After he had shed his battery she told him that a lawyer had come to see her, Mr. Foster, representing the Dexters. The lawyer had sent word that they wished to be generous. They were convinced that the accident had not been their son's fault. They were willing to settle the boy through his guardian—to see....they offered five hundred dollars.

"Did you take it?" asked Jonathan sharply.

"No, Doctor. I—I didn't know what to do. Five hundred dollars is a lot of money," she said, twisting her needle-marred hands, "and—and Jack thought I'd ask you."

He said, Flock, gamble on this will you? If you don't win, I'll see that the hospital's paid and your doctor costs you nothing." he sat down beside her. "I'll put you in a lawyer. In fact, come along with me, and we'll get him together."

He drove to Foster's. She could protest, to Fred Patten Bates' office. Unfortunately for Jack Enders who rose, astonished at this influx of clients on a dull day. "This is Mrs. Enders," said Jonathan, "and they have the police record up as well as any eye-witnesses. I think Mrs. Phillips might stick. It has peered outside their house. And I'll stick. The Dexters have offered Mrs. Enders five hundred dollars. Now.... maybe we won't get to court but would you take the case on a—"

"Contingency, basis!" shouted Fred. "Never mind the fee." He waved his hand as if brushing aside a thousand dollar retainer. "If he was drunk.... Oh boy!" he said inadequately, "I'd give five cents!"

"Why, yes, sir.... we smoked a cigarette together."

"Miss Ward smoked with you?"

"When she opened the door she had a lighted cigarette in her hand."

"What else happened?"

"Why, nothing ... she offered me a drink."

"What kind of a drink?"

"A highball...."

Rose jumped to her feet. She cried, "It's a lie, Larry Dexter!"

"Sit down, Miss Ward!" ordered Sutton. "Go on, Mr. Dexter."

"That's all," said Larry .. "I left."

"Did you drink with Miss Ward?"

"I didn't want to but—" he shrugged an apparently helpless gesture, "I thought, gee, if I get her sore at me now!"

"That will do," said Sutton, "you may go now, Larry. I think Miss Ward has heard enough."

She did not look for Larry and his father to leave the room. She got to her feet somehow, her face brilliant with anger and her eyes black with it. She said, "Larry Dexter came to my house to tell me that if I dared press these charges against him I'd find myself in trouble. When he left, I did not offer him anything to drink. There isn't any liquor in my house in the first place, and in the second—"

It was a minute. Is it true that you had a cigarette in your hand when you let him in?"

Rose said, "Yes, but—"

"Is it true that your mother was out of the city during this accident's visit?"

"Yes, Senator, but—"

"And you have no way to prove whether or not Larry had been drinking?"

"No," admitted Rose, "I haven't. It's his word against mine."

Sutton said, "I'm very glad to spare you the rest of the charges Larry Dexter has brought."

Rose said, "And you take his word rather than mine? Great guns! Surely there was nothing more they could do to her now.

"Oh, no," said Senator Sutton. "The servants have been questioned and they say that Miss Ward and you were certain indications, not at the time unsuspected, of—"

There was a pause. Rose stood there, and speaking. She was very white and still. Then she said, "Mr. Sutton said.

"Yes, Miss, it is my painful duty to inform you that the Board agrees unanimously that it would be unbecoming for you to remain in the employ of the Dexter family. I think you can dispose these charges. We will be back fair. Rose left at this same time you may bring your resignation, if you like, to my office that there is no cause for your dismissal. Or — if you would rather give me your resignation at once."

"No," responded Rose, "I won't resign. I'll be dismissed. And if you think you can blackmail me out of my job—"

"Just a minute," said Sutton, "I think you've said all you need say. Good afternoon."
